FRIDAY EVENING, FEB. 20, 1885.
EVENING EDITION.

SOUTHERN LITERATURE.

We yesterday published an interesting article from the pen of the gifted editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate upon the literary men and women of Virginia. The Star long ago recognized the great ability and scientific attainments of Dr. Southall, who is beyond question the first man in the South in the walks of science, and has but few equals, if any, in America. He is known in Europe, and if he had been born in Germany or England his name would be now as familiar as household words. We know of the gifted Dr. Taylor without ever having had an opportunity to read his bright and witty pages. The Advocate might have referred with high commendation to the writings of Professor Harrison, who has proved himself a literator of exceptional cleverness. Of the lamented Dr. Bagby we may not now attempt to speak at length. For some months we have purposed writing concerning the first volume of his works that his dear wife, with pious care and delicate taste, has given to the world. We are sorry to see from what the Advocate says, that even in Virginia this volume has met with but little sale. Verily a man of genius is not without honor save in his own country. Well did Dr. Lafferty say of the singularly endowed Bagby in writing of his productions,—"There is no man left in Virginia fit to lift the lid of his inkstand," and John Esten Cooke, another man of admirable gifts, native too to Virginia, said of Bagby, that "never in Virginia letters shall we see his like again." He was indeed "a fellow of infinite jest" and his descriptions are racy of the soil of the great State that gave him birth. Our genial friend Lafferty said of the volume in his paper:

"The volume holds twenty or more of articles. They could not have been made outside of Virginia, and only by a Virginian. It looks like they were written out of the ink oak-balls of the forest. The soil, the air, and sky of Virginia are in their growth. The 'Old Virginia Gentlemen' is Virginia. We have not read the pages before that article. No son of the Commonwealth has hitherto painted a companion piece to that picture. It is not in the scope of hope that this worn-out age can bring to birth a genius who can take the eye and admiration away from Bagby. Posterity will not willingly let these writings. Our children and children will cherish the exquisite touches of home scenes, the sobbing pathos, the prose gem of eloquence, like prophecy in rhyme of Hebrew seer."

The volume, to be followed by a second, is published by Whittle and Shepperson, Richmond, Va., and it is well done. The introduction is from the pen of Rev. Edward S. Gregory, who, alas! since he wrote it has himself joined his dead friend in the world beyond. Gregory was a man of excellent gifts and had the staff of an enviable reputation in him. He published one sermon, and one volume of verse, and then the Great Reaper came and cut him down in the full vigor of manhood. What Gregory said of Bagby was tender and graceful. Said Lafferty of it:

"It is the civic crown set in a rim of roses. The leaves of ivy and oak are parted here and there by delicate buds with perfume of love and tears out of the night. This biographical sketch is in sweetest sympathy with the subject and tells the touching story in chastened praise and in quivering pathos, making the rudest reader debtor to the noble and silent genius of the dead author, transferring by subtle magnetism the gold to the dull and receptive metal."

Of James Barron Hope we can only say as we have said before, that he is a poet born and has written lines that are worthy to live and are not unworthy of the best poets that this country has produced. Of his daughter, concerning whom Dr. Lafferty has written with so much of sympathy and appreciation, we can not speak from personal knowledge. We are glad that Virginia has so many writers of true gifts to uphold her ancient fame and to give an additional lustre to the aureole that encircles her name.

We might glance at a few writers in our own State if space allowed—at Theodore Hill and Miss Fisher and others, but of these we have foregone to do our duty. We pass on to briefly refer to others.

The South's greatest living poet is the noble and richly endowed South Carolinian, Paul H. Hayne. His genius is recognized by many of the foremost of England's living singers. In the North his works are held to be of no mean value, and the cultured men and women of New England are among his most sincere and appreciative admirers. The greatest master of style in our beloved Southland, the essayist, poet, theologian and scholar who dates his letters from "Wee Willie Cottage," Athens, Ga., Rev. Dr. Andrew A. Lipscomb, in a recent letter to the writer, said this of the poet Hayne:

"I found him better than I expected. The weather was at its worst, and, of course, two invalids like himself and myself were closely housed, and enjoyed as much as 'the gentle Cow' when he spoke of looking out from the seclusion of rural life through 'the loop holes of retreat.' I am very thankful to our Heavenly Father that Colonel Hayne is in much firmer health. He is exceedingly cheerful, and growing every day in power of genius and in the extent of his literary influence. The grand soul is grander than ever. 'Copperhead' already famous, and will be more so. In no man's distinction do I feel such pride as in Col. Hayne's. He deserves the honor which he is receiving and far more besides, for we have no man of cultured genius among us, who is his equal."

Mr. Woodrow Wilson's book, entitled "Congressional Government," is just out from the press of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., of Boston. Mr. Wilson is the son of Rev. Dr. Wilson, of this city, and was born in Virginia, we think. He is a young man of remarkable ability. The following is the only notice we have yet seen of the book. The Hartford (Conn.) Courant says of it:

"It is the most interesting volume of its kind we have seen for a long time. It is in the nature of a new commentary on the national constitution; not the constitution as it was written, adopted and handed down by the fathers, but the form of government to which it has brought us. The book is full of important information to one not familiar with the manner in which our legislation is conducted. This is excellently arranged, and carefully and thoughtfully considered. We know of no book of any size or kind which gives so intelligently a view of our government as it really is."

We intended at the outset of this article to have referred at some length to a remarkable group of men of letters, all of whom were born in the South. They are all of exceeding cleverness in certain fields of intellectual endeavor, and some of them are unquestionably men of genius. Before the war no such writers flourished in the South. Poe, the greatest man of genius yet born in the South, and probably in this country, deserves a separate paper. Of that group the South ought to be proud, but of it we fear the South knows but little. It is composed of Cable, Baker, Craddock, Joel Chandler Harris, Maurice Thompson, and Brander Matthews. The first four are novelists and writers in dialect. Matthews is a novelist and theatrical critic. He and Cable were born in New Orleans. He has published a volume that has brought him fame as a critic of the drama. Thompson has written several books and his fame is almost entirely Northern. He has genius and some of his poetry is full of promise. Baker is dead, but he was a writer of such power that a Northern house is glad to publish a posthumous work from his pen. We might include Mark Twain in the group, for he was born in Missouri, but his writings are too coarse and inartistic to be mentioned in connection with those named above. Of Sidney Lanier the Star has delighted to often speak. His name will long live in American literature and his poetic genius will always associate his fame with Poe, and Timrod and Hayne. Of Craddock, a Tennessean, whose real name is Murfree, Maurice Thompson writes to the New York Independent that he "has done the best literary work in short stories that has come out of the South since Poe died." This is certainly correct. Let the cultured reader get those stories entitled "In the Tennessee Mountains," and he will not doubt as to the correctness of Mr. Thompson's dictum. He is now writing a serial story for the Atlantic Monthly that is very strong and a very highly artistic work. In character painting and in description of natural scenery he is indeed a master—equal to the best. Of his first volume the London Saturday Review, high authority, said this:

"Mr. Craddock's descriptions are always admirable; they are not mere bits of words painting 'gorgeous and meaningless; they are sketches from life, and they recall life, and reproduce simply and exactly the intended impression of life and nature. Mr. Craddock draws men and women with the same gentle hand."

Grant literally stirred up a nest of writers when he undertook to give his thickly varnished story of the battle of Shiloh. He is as much of a romancer as Blaine is. But some Federal Generals have some regard for the truth and they are letting in light upon a darkened story. We gave recently what one Federal General said, and the following is in the same vein. We copy from a dispatch in the New York Times. It will be seen what Gen. Ward thinks of Shiloh:

"KANAWHA, ILL., Feb. 17.—Gen. Durbin Ward of Ohio, while snowed in near Kanawha, entertained his seventy fellow-passengers with personal and military reminiscences. He said, 'I dislike to discuss battles over which Generals are in controversy. Still, I assure you that if our Union Generals say they were not surprised at the battle of Shiloh, it is a great surprise to me. Had not the death of the Confederate Albert Sidney Johnston happened just when it did, our fate would have been far different.'"

is given to the grammar of his contemporaries.—N. Y. World, Dem.

Senator Hawley's paper complains that Jeff Davis will thrust upon a disgusted public without regard to their feelings." So we thought when a few days ago Senator Hawley thrust Mr. Davis before the disgusted public and tried to keep him there. The Senator from Connecticut has made a very gallant effort to combine the roles of Lecturer and Awful Example.—Phil. Record, Ind.

OUR STATE CONTEMPORARIES.

The old days of gymnastic, gum-elastic, "Combinderies" (as Josiah Turner was wont to call them) must be past. School, State, Society, Asylum, Agriculture, Appropriations, Railroads, and Reciprocal (I tickle you; you tickle me) Rings must be past. And without reflecting upon the past history of the University, we feel sure that it has now the basis, the sentiment, the opportunity to do vast good in the State. So strong is this feeling in our mind that we have advised President Bates to invite the leading College and High School men of the State to a joint meeting with him and his faculty, with a view to a concert of action among them; so that every denominational college may flourish and expand; while at the same time our North Carolina youth aspiring to a higher "University" education may find it within our borders, even though the cost to the State for a few years may seem disproportionate to the number of students.—Raleigh Farmer and Mechanic.

CURRENT COMMENT.

The efforts of the esteemed Sun to keep the English language in journalism meet with many impediments. Unfortunately they are impediments of speech and are furnished by its own editors. In its edition of yesterday an editorial opens in this degenerate style. We believe it was Mr. Joseph H. Choate who said of one of the wealthiest and most distinguished merchants of New York that he was a good man—in fact, too good to be true! It was with some such feeling that we read the other day the announcement by the Grand Jury of Kings county that there was really no gambling in the city of Brooklyn." Here we have an editor confusing two ideas in one paragraph, and making a non sequitur in the other. Which is it in the first sentence that is too good to be true—the man or the story? The sense points to one and the grammar to the other. When you have read the second sentence you have only to ask, "What feeling?" to be left in inextricable confusion. Obviously by the grammar the feeling that the Sun has is that the announcement of the Grand Jury of Kings county is too good a story to be a true man. This is the logic that comes of shiftless writing in an office where all the attention of the editor

Fatal Railway Accident on the Virginia Midland Railroad, Near Alexandria.—Two Trains in Collision. Four Persons Killed and Five or Six Badly Injured.

(By Telegram to the Morning Star.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The North bound passenger train No. 61, of the Virginia Midland Railroad and the South bound freight train of the Baltimore & Potomac Railroad, collided at Four Mile Run, about three miles north of Alexandria, about 10 o'clock last night. The Virginia Midland train was due at 10.03, and was on time. It had the right of way. The train was made up of the engine, mail, express, baggage, one passenger and two sleeping cars. As the passenger train emerged from the viaduct at Four Mile Run, it was struck by the freight train. The engineer of the freight train had both legs and one arm cut off, and died before he was taken from the wreck. The conductor of the passenger train was crushed between two cars, and the engineer of the freight train and the fireman of the passenger train were evidently killed when the engines came together. Portions of their bodies were dragged out of the burning wreck of the engine some hours after the collision. The fireman of the freight train saved his life by jumping.

The killed are George Frier, engineer of the freight; Tom Darby, fireman of the passenger; Andrew Angus, conductor of the passenger; and W. Bruce, chief clerk of the postal car, about the head and body; W. A. McNeal, mail agent, about the head; C. T. Stewart, postal clerk; J. F. Franer, colored postal clerk; and Thomas Gaylor, mail weigher, severely.

NEW YORK.
The Marvin Safe Co.'s Factory Destroyed by Fire.—Loss Estimated at $250,000.—Large Warehouse of Men Thrown Out of Employment.

(By Telegram to the Morning Star.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The Marvin Safe Co.'s factory, a huge eight-story building, embracing Nos. 324 and 332 West 37th street, was destroyed by fire during last night, with all of its contents. How the outbreak occurred is a mystery that probably will never be solved. The walls of the building threatened the surrounding tenements, which had to be cleared by the police. Hundreds of half-clad children, women and men shivered in the sharp frost, who were thus driven from their homes, but who found shelter with hospitable neighbors. The firemen worked hard all night, and succeeded in confining the flames to the factory building. Tenements Nos. 320 and 324, adjoining it on either side, were more or less damaged by falling walls.

The loss to the Marvin Safe Co. is $250,000, of which $100,000 is on five hand-dressed safes ready for market or in course of manufacture, that were stored in the building, $50,000 on the machinery, and $90,000 on the building, which was the property of the company. Insured for $125,000 in thirty companies is held. Two hundred and fifty men are thrown out of employment.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET—Strong and Higher.
(By Telegram to the Morning Star.)

NEW YORK, Wall Street, Feb. 20, 11 A.M.—The stock market opened steady this morning at about last evening's closing prices; heaviest for a few minutes, during which small fractional declines were made, and then became strong. In the early dealings the market was quiet, but renewed strength was accompanied by increased activity, led by Lake Shore, which, on large sales, rose to 6 1/2, an advance of 1/2 per cent. Lackawanna at the same time touched par. Missouri Pacific has been the only really weak stock on the list, selling down from 9 3/4 to 9 1/4, but, as it rallied to 9 3/4, the loss is still active at about the highest prices of the morning. The leading rates are for Lackawanna 1-32; Hudson 1-64, others flat to 1/32. Railroad bonds are fairly active and irregular.
