WILMINGTON, N. C.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, MARCH 25. EVENING EDITION. BOUGATION AND PRONUNCIATION

IN NORTH CAROLINA.

In the North Carolina EducationalJournal for last July there were two contributions that were from two native North Carolina teachers of distinction, Prof. Mangum, of the University and President Shepherd (misspelled Shepard in the Journal) of Charleston, S. C., College. They both discuss an important matterthe Northern invasion of school teachers with their very peculiar ideas and pronunciations. There i a positive craze just now to follow Yankeedoodledom in this assault upon the tongue of Shakespeare and Milton, and we do not propose to counterance the craze but to cauterize it. Ever since Noah Webster wrote his essay in 1805 or 1806, to show how ingenious he could be in dispoiling the English language, make spelling rediculous and pronunciation an absurdity, there has been a servile willingness on the part of Southern teachers to adopt the New England proversions. The result is there is no sound standard of American pronunciation and you may hear any Sunday in the pulpit, and any day on the streets pronunciations that would shock any educated Englishman who was not tainted with a provincial dialect.

Webster undertook to reform the spelling. He merely succeeded in introducing hundreds of pronunciations that subsequent editors of his big dictionary have been forced to abandon. Now there are not more than 150 words of the 110,000 in the dictionary that differ in spelling from Worcester. As to pronunciation, we would never go to Webster for authority. He has adopted the pronunciation either of cranks or the vulgar in many instances instead of the educated class that must make pronunciation.

Dr. Mangum says, and with excel lent reason for the danger-signal given:

"In education, as in religion, the best

intimated, we are threatened with standard of pronunciation that will make our Southern people talk very unlike their English ancestors. Not genius. only this, but the methods of New-England so readily accepted will discredit Southern teachers and make them the mere pliable imitators of men whom they ought to equal in all respects. Before 1861, there were not schools in all the land that surpassed those of Virginia and North Carolina. The teachers did pot seek their models in the North.

THE PRESIDENT AND POLYGAMY. Mr. Cleveland has sounded a note concerning the Mormon ulcer on the body politic that ought to lead to important action. Thus far polygamy is practiced in open defiance of the laws of God and man and in the teeth of newspaper denunciation and public opinion. It is indeed a most singular and astonishing fact that a body of people should openly defy decency and law and the powers of the Government and with the utmost impunity. The whole people of the States are really involved in the speedy settlement of this vexed question. As long as polygamy is tolerated and un-000. punished so long is there reproach and danger for the people at large. Thus far nothing amounting to anything of real consequence has been done to stamp out Mormon polygamy. The Republican have had | and degree to which it has left-many charge since the 4th of March, 1861, and with all of the powers of the Government at their control they have left polygamy as bad if not worse than when they found it. In fact Mormonism has grown and spread, and to-day their emissaries and propagandists are more active, confident and aggressive that ever before. Why have not the Republicans done more? Why have they rally done in the cases of the more for a quarter of a century allowed this fungus growth to deepen and widen and become more vicious-? After their great failure to cure or likely to be extended than restricted, mitigate the curse they are now accusing the Democrats of a want of sympathy in the work of extirpation. This is cool, to say the least.

But President Cleveland is not a man to trifle with anything he puts others of the New England school. She has more marked gifts than Mrs. Burnett has and we think more

It is believed that the perpetuity of Liberal rule in England hangs mainly on the incompetency of Tory leaders. If Beaconsfield were living his party would go in at the next election. The people are much disposed to turn out the Liberals but they have no confidence in Northcote and Churchill. The New York Times, referring to the proposed leadership of the latter, says:

"This young man is an open imitator of nearly all the faults and the possessor of almost none of the qualities of the late Lord Besconsfield. He has a biting and reckless tongue, with which he assails friend and foe alike. He has consuming ambition. He affects to have a Tory-Democratic ideal to carry out. But he has shown no sign of the keen insight which Mr. Disraeli unquestionably had into the English mind of his day.'

The New York World mentions an encouraging feature of the business outlook. The operations for last week showed a decrease of $5,000,boys are thinking of muzzling that 000 as compared with the correspreacher. ponding week of last year in the imports, whilst exports increased $400,-

CURRENT COMMENT.

-- It may be said that the Ad ministration has not done much of national importance, but the way things undone can properly be looked upon as of the highest importance. It has failed to carry out the policy of a "clean sweep" which its opponents declared and many of its active supporters hoped that it would. It has not only failed to do this, but it has made it perfectly clear that nothing of the kind will be done. To what extent Democrats will be put in the places of Republicans as the terms of the latter expire we cannot sap. Probably it will be very geneimportant positions. But it is obvious that the positions coming within the civil service rules will not be touched, that these rules are more and that the most strenuous policy of retrenchment will be set on foot .--New York Times, Rep. -Ex-Secretary Teller has poured the vials of his wrath on Senator Van Wyck's head, but he has not satisfied the public on the question: "Why London Truth

tive legislation."

Exclusive of the Raphael and the Vandyke, the Dake of Marlborough has sold seven of his pictures, viz: "Portrait of Rubens's Wife and Child," 25,000 guineas: "Portrait of Rubens's Wife," 25,000 guineas; the "Hesperides," by Rubens, £25,000, and four other Rubenses for £20,000. Among those yet to be sold there are still about sixteen large Rubenses, several large Vandykes and a considerable number of smaller pictures, chiefly by Dutch masters. If these pictures are put up to auction we shall know definitely their market price.

A few nights ago, as the pastor of Hawkinsville negro church was conducting services, he had occasion to use the term "hell-fire," and becoming warmed up in his discouse, he yelled out the compound words as negro preachers can yell. Deputy Marshal Burroughs heard the latter part of the yell, and gave the alarm. The firemen rushed after their engines, and soon the streets were alive with people hunting for a red blaze. After searching everywhere the cause of the alarm leaked out, and now the

The balloon corps immediately set to work, taking observations. They sent up a captive balloon from the zercha. This remained up several hours, and the observers descended with valuable information concerning the positions and movements of Osman Digna's men. This morning's work shows that the balloon corps will be invaluable in the work of assisting General Graham to make his forward movements precisely.
