EVENING EDITION

LORD CHURCHILL AND THE MIN-

Lord Randolph Churchill, the incipient leader of the Tories, and the warm assailant of Mr. Gladstone, is the son of the Duke of Marlborough He married an American girl, a Miss Jerome, of New York, whose father had made a fortune in some speculations. Lord Randolph was true to his family traditions. He needed money and he knew where to get it. He is really a very bright young fellow, endowed with wonderful confidence in his own powers and with stupendous imitative qualities as may be seen in the successful way he copies the mannerisms and pugna cious qualities and pointed personali ties of the far greater Lord Beacons field.

Lord Churchill has had an opportunity to display his peculiar gifts The unsatisfactory management of foreign affairs by the Ministry has given him a fit occasion, and h has improved it to the extent of hi abilities. He knows the deep-seated constitutional aversion of Mr. Glad stone to war, and he knows how th army and navy are fairly writing under the reflections made through out the civilized world upon British valor, and the young Lord with tongue of scorn and derision lashes the aged and illustrious Premier, and gains enough of eclat from the cau tic performance to make him the Tory here of the hour and to gratify his aspiring and vain soul. He has perhaps more in him than has been supposed, but he is not held to be gifted with either prescience or wisdom. He seems to have done unusually well in his recent assault upon the Ministry. A writer in the Washington Post has this account of

"Before Randolph Churchill married Miss Jerome, the daughter of Larry Jerome, Miss Jerome, the daughter of Larry Jerome, of New York, (whom George Law helped to make a fortune in 1849-50), he insisted that a large sum of money should be settled on ins to be bride and secured in such a way that her father could never take back the donation. When the young lordling first entered Parliament he made eral speeches that were absolutely absurd and was greeted with ironical laughter whenever he got on his legs to talk. But the youth was not to be squelched in any such fashion. He was a careful and intelligent student and read to some purpose. In 1881 he made his first oratorical success.

Of his late philippic simed main ly at Mr. Gladstone, the writer says

"The house was silent for a moment, as no one seemed ready to reply. Directly from the Opposition side of the chamber there arose a young man, slender and rather about in stature, his pale face lighted by blue gray eyes, and the firm mouth shaded by an enormous moustache. He began to speak without notes, but with the utmost deliberation of manner. The Liberals got ready to roar him down, while his own side turned uneasily in their seats and audibly wished he had not begun. In a clear, calm voice, and with an apiomb that Capt. Hawtree might have envied, he laid his foundation. Never faltering nor hesitating for a word, he dissected the carefully constructed theories of Mr. Gladstone and showed their absolute inconsistency. Then in tones that rang through "The house was silent for a moment, Parliament galleries he asked if this was the new theory of salvation that was to redeem the promises of the nation and maintain the honor of England. When he had finished there was such a cheer from the Conservatives benches as had not been heard since Beaconsfield's unrivalled speech of 1877."

Under the force and inspiration of the young leader the Tory opposition s rallying and a change of Ministry s the objective point of their combined efforts. The air is said to be full of portents, strange signs and whispered rumers, and the urgent whips have been sent out in every direction to bring the Tory members in hot haste to London. But Mr. Gladstone is not beaten yet. He carries an immense load, but he is a tremendous man and may yet countervail the machinations of all his enemies.

The Tory correspondent of the New York Times telegraphs that the Ministry are really anxious to be beaten. How this is we may not pretend to forecast. The correspon-

"First, a desire to escape the humiliation f ratifying a final absolute surrender to Russia; second, a wish to shift the burden of settling the Soudan problem to other shoulders, and third, and most vital of all. to avoid the necessity of dealing with the question of the Crimes act in Ireland. This last is the rock on which the Cabinet threatens to founder and go to pieces."

But we must hear from the other side before we accept this prophecy or statement.

No politician has lost ground fast er than Mr. Bayard. He is not only much criticized by the opposition papers, but he is sharply flipped by many of his own papers. We confess to disappointment in him. W never regarded him as one of the greatest intellects of the Senate or of the country, but we did give him credit for more of judgment and unselfishness than he seems to really possess. That he is a pure, able, honorable and patriotic gentleman no one can truthfully deny. Here is the way one of the ablest and most scholarly of Republican papers, the Philadelphia American, writes

"Mr. Beyard has not disappointed many of those who know him the best. He sim ply has been 'found out.' He is a man well fitted to play the political dictator in a small State like Delaware, and he has so cial qualities of a kind which is relished in certain circles. This and a certain pose in public, and a name which fascinates the callow brood of young Democrats, constituted his stock in trade. This and nothing more. He is not a master of any branch of government administration. He has not borne the brunt of legal defence for his party, on any of the great contro versies which have arisen under the consti tution. He has rendered it no such service as Mr. Bullitt did by his opinion on the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus. He has not stamped his name on any impor tant measure of legislation as Senators Mc Pherson and Pendleton and Mr. Thurman did. He is not a great master of finance like Mr. Sherman, although he likes pose as one. The range of his ideas public questions is extremely narrow."

The New England people, literary and other, will never forgive unfortunate Edgar Poe for his terrific on slaught upon certain divinities in that section. He applied his scalpel to Longfellow and other notabilities and to this day their worshippers traduce his motives and name and magnify his defects. When the great Protector Cromwell sat for his portrait, he told the artist to paint warts and all. This was manly and characteristic. If New England artists were to paint Poe's classical and handsome features and majestic head they would make him one big wart. The blister-plaster that Poe stuck on the authors of a certain grade still sticks with a tenacity that defies all attempts to shake it off He is, therefore, fired at and caricatured and covered with dirt by all of the small authors of the Woodberry and Griswold type. We publish some good reading from the Augusta Chronicle.

The revenues of the Government have decreased some fifty million dollars in twelve months. For the fiscal year ending 30th June, 1884 the net revenue was $348,519,860 Secretary McCullough estimated that for the year ending 30th June, 1885, the receipts would be $350,000,000. But the first nine months gave but $240,000,000. So the probability is that the three closing months of the of justice, and much too often failed uscal year will not bring the revenues of self-respect."

The surplus will, therefore, be small and that class of Congressmen (and we always mean in using this term members of both Houses) that are on that region retaliate upon him whenthe anxious seat lest they should not ever an opportunity is presented, just get away with the surplus, need not as even Mr. Longfellow had not the get away with the surplus, need not to give themselves much care as to voting it away for educational or other purposes.

An able article in the Nineteenth Century, said to be written by gifted living female novelist of England, deals plainly with George Eliot's dangerous and censurable course in the Lewes alliance. The writer says, and with both point and truth:

"The idea of her genius had not dawned. That she possessed boundless possibilities of doing good to men and of touching hearts that no divine and no philosopher could reach, was still at 85 a secret to herself. At first she was astonished that anybody who was not superstitious could find fault with her. To deny herself to old friends, to earn with the pen an income for her whose place she took, to pass among strangers by a name which was not her due -all this did not seem too high a price for the happiness of a home. She urged with pathetic gravity that she knew what she was losing. She did not know it. Ostensibly she was resigning a small group of friends and an obscure position in literature. What she really sacrificed was liberty of speech, the foremost rank among the women of her time and a tomb in Westminster Abbey."

The United States are large pur chasers of foreign wool. In 1884 they imported 66,729,070 pounds, Russia furnishing 13,414,000. So the wool interests are involved in the much talked of war between Russia and England. The British Empire supplied this country with 28,169,000

CURRENT COMMENT.

--- There are good men in every community in the South who would make excellent officials. They may not be among the applicants for office, and they may not have the sort of ability that is necessary to force their applications on the attention of the President, but they can be found without trouble if inquiry is made for them. We do not want extreme partisans in the offices. We want for our office-holders honest, efficient and self-respecting menmen who believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but who will understand that they are to earn their salaries by faithfully and satisfactorily discharging the duties of their offices, rather than by talking politics on street corners and in barrooms and by packing caucuses and political conventions.—Savannah News, Dem.

- Gen. Black is proving one of the most sensible, efficient and popular officers of the government. He gives excellent satisfaction to party and to the old soldiers, The interests of the latter are better taken care of now than they have ever been before. More claims were adjusted last month than in any month in the history of the bureau, and there has been no increase of the clerical force. Moreover, fraudulent claims are being weeded out and fraudulent pennoners are to be prosecuted and made to disgorge. In short we are now having for a novelty a clean, honest and efficient management of the pension burean, -Boston Post, Referring to the recent dedication of a bust, at New York, to the author of the "Raven," the Boston Herald says: "Poe was not a representative American. The aspersion of the Boston Herald appears to be on the same line.

Poe is just as much a "representative American" as Hawthorne or Whittier or Walt Whitman, although he chose different themes and drew his inspiration from sources outside this particular part of the earth. His "Raven" will live when many by the Legislatures. Last week the Legislature of New York passed what is known as "The Forest Preservation bill." OUR STATE CONTEMPORARIES.

There has been in the past too much tall in the South about the necessity down here of "Northern brains and capital," "an in-fusion of Northern energy," and all that sort of stuff. Northern capital, brains and energy are all well enough, and we are glad to have them, but Hercules helps the man who puts his own shoulder to the wheel. Northern people are not going to possess the land to that extent that we can all sit down and live off of them without doing any work ourselves. One of them will no doubt come along occasionally and we can soon rob him of what he brought, but this mode of subsistence would neces sarily be precarious. The salvation of the South must be worked out by Southern men and in a different way from this. Statesville Landmark.

Polygamists Resisting Arrest Deputy Marshals Threatened by an Arn Hab.

(By Telegraph to the Morning Star.) BALT HARR GITY, May 19 -- A letter, dated Sunday, and just received from Oxford, Idaho, says: The greatest excitement prevails at Bear Lake. On the 5th inst. wavrants were placed in the hands of deputy marshals for the arrest of eight polygamists at and around Paris. Nothing was heard from the matter here until this morning, when a telegram was received an-nouncing the fact that the polygamists are all correlled in a meeting house at Paris, under the protection of an armed gnard of brethren. The deputy marshale who attempted to make the arrests were marched out of Paris by an armed mob, who threatened that they would kill any one who attempted to serve the warrants. Marshal Fred Dubois, upon the receipt of this news, immediately telegraphed Superintendent Bitckensderfer, at Pocatelle, and chartered a special train to carry himself and posse to Montpelier, from which point they will reach Paris about 6 p. in. to-day (Sun-

Typhoid Fever I am sixty-seven years old, and have lived

this (Hall) county all my life. Up to twenty-eight years ago I was regarded as the strongest man -the most robust in health In November, 1856, I had a long and serious spei of typhoid fever. It left me emaciated and a cripple in my right leg. At times that limb was swoilen an enormous size, being twice as large as its natural condition, and inflamed and angr in appearance From my knee down small sors came, and at the ankle a large ulcer came which discharged poisonous matter. My whole system became infected. The doctors would patch me up for awhile, but the ulcer would nave help The mercury and potash with which they dose me brought on rheumatism and dyspepsia I was an object of pity to all my friends. Hope had almost it me swift's Specific was suggested, and I geometried its use at once. From the very first I began to feel better. I have taken thirty-six bottles, and the shadows which had darkened my life for twenty-eight years have all been dissipated. The effect of the medicine has been wonderful indeed. To-day I am able to attend to all my as leed. To-day I am able to attend to all my ming interests, and walk from one to five miles per day. I am satisfied that the disease is entire ly broken up, and henceforth I am to be free from those terrible apprehensions and suffering which formerly made my life miserable, but its Specific has done more for me in one year than all the drug store medicine prescribed by physi-

Having taken Swift's Specific for blood poiso contracted at a medical college at a dissertion, while I was a medical student, 1 am grateful to say that it gave me a speedy and thorough cure after my parents had spent hundreds of dollars. for treatment. My arm was swollen to twice its usual size, and as nothing helped me I was depairing of ever being cured. But hearing of the S. S. S. I bought a bottle, little thinking I would derive any benefit from it. I began taking it regularly, and soon the swelling began to go down, and the arm ceased to pain me. I continued its use, and after taking eight bottles was thoroughly cured.
