The late ex-Governor Gilbert C. Walker was a handsome likeness of our distinguished Senator Vance. The former had the beauty and the latter the brains. We heard Walker and Doolittle and ex-Senator Miller, of Georgia, speak at a big mass meeting at Raleigh in 1872. Miller made much the most eloquent speech, but Doolittle, who is a rather sorry fellow as to principles, made a very decidedly strong and impressive effort.

The Lynchburg News voices pub lic sentiment doubtless when it savs of the acquittal of Martin for murder on the grounds of drunkenness:

"The universal opinion of the community is that the verdict was the most outrageous one ever given in a court in Albemarle, and yet they consider the jury could do nothing else under their instructions and the evidence. Charges of bribery are feeely made against some imaginary person or persons connected with the trial, and propositions to liberate Joe Barbour, a negro who was convicted of an offense very similar, and now awaits sentence of execution, are freely made. Col. Waddell had the very great advantage of speaking in Metropolitan Hall, Raleigh, on Memorial day. The News-Observer says:

"The plan of holding the exercises at Metropolitan Hotel proved an entire success. The suggestion was made some time ago, and it was feared by some that it would reduce the attendence at the cemetery. But this was not true."

By some means the boat in which Mrs. Parker was sitting, suddenly capsized and threw her into 14 feet of water. She had sunk the second time when a man who was near by went to her assistance and saved her.

- Upon complaint of Mrs. Harriet Smith, at Leicester in Buncombe, four officers went to arrest Philetus Sluder who was at the woman's house threatening her life. While she was gone he had been joined by his brother. The officers entered her house. The Asheville Citizen says: "Constable Lee told Philetus Sluder to consider himself under arrest, when Carr Sluder said to his brother, "G—d—Lee; kill him, Philetus." Philetus then drew his Smith & Wesson pistol, and pointed it towards Lee, when the latter caught it in his hands and pushed it to one side; it was discharged at the same moment, the ball lodging in the left breast of his brother Carr, who died in a few minutes after-wards. As Philetus drew his pistol the other officers drew theirs, and one or more shots were fired at Philetus, but without taking effect. The latter was then thrown to the floor, and after a hard scuffle his pistol was taken from him.

- Elizabeth City Falcon: From a private letter received from Windser, Bertie county, we learn that Duncan Cale, who was engaged on Friday, April 24th, in burning the grass in his field was, in some unexplained manner, burned to death. The unfortunate man's head, says the writer, was so badly burned as to leave the brain expessed when found. Further particulars are not given. — On Thursday of last week a touchingly sad and fatal accident occurred near Woodville, Perquimans county, on Mr. F. E. Winslew's farm, more ty, on Mr. F. E. Winslow's farm, more generally known as the "Hoskins Farm." A little boy by the name of Umphlet, not more than nine years of age, while handling a pistol which he found on the bureau in Mr. John Benton's house, accidentally fired it off, sending the bullet directly through the centre of little master Outler's head, the four year old son of Rother Out-ler who lives in the same yard about a hundred yards from Mr. Benton's house, where the shooting occurred. Mrs. Umphlet picked up the dead child in her arms and carried it up the dead child in her arms and carried it to its mother. Mrs. Ontier, who is also her sister. — On last Monday there passed through Elizabeth City, from the Hatterss fishery, for shipment over the Norfolk & Southern Railroad, four hundred porpoise hides. Each porpoise furnishes two hides stripped from either side with the blubber on. At the North the blubber is taken off and tried into oil, and the hide being tanned makes a very superior leather. We know from personal knowledge that shoe strings manufactured from this leather sell in the Norfolk market for 25 cents per pair. What is needed to develop this coming industry of Eastern Carolina is a factory on the heach where the oil can be tried, the leather tasned and the carcasses converted into fertilizers.

"A negro has been the unconscious means of breaking up a quartet in Brooklyn. He had sung with satisfaction in enchurch for several years. Recently the leader made a contract with a more fashionable church, but when it became known that a colored man was to sing, there was a howl from the pews, and the contract was broken. There was the same result in an other church that also ranks as fashionable.

ly charmed his hearers. He spoke for three quarters of an hour, and his oration was, on the whole, quite worthy of the occasion. — In Berryhill township, last Saturday, Mr. Richard Turner, and a colored boy named Thomas Herron, were out in the woods squirrel hunting. A squirrel was "treed" and as Turner was creeping around the tree, gun in hand, endeavoring to get a shot at the squirrel, the gun slipped from his grasp and expleded. The load of shot caught Herron, who was standing conveniently near. The shot struck Herron on the hand and passing on were imbedded in his stomach. The squirrel in the meantime sat upon a limb of the tree, cracking a hard shelled hickory nut of last year's crop. Herron is grievously, but not fatally wounded. — Charlotte has had a genuine dynamite sensation, and does not want to have another. About 3 o clock Sunday morning a dynamite cartridge, three quarters of an inch in diameter and eight inches long, packed in a piece of two inch gas pipe, with the fuse properly arranged, was dropped on the porch of a house on east Third street. The fuse was lighted by the Jyasmiter, who beat a quick retreat to a place of safety and socious for the processor. miter, who best a quick retrest to a place of safety and seclusion. It was a lonesome hour before the dawn, and it is improbable that there was any one stirring on the streets at the time, but when the fuse had burned its length and reached the terrible explosive there came a concussion that joited all the neighborhood aleepers from their beds. The force of the explosion was so great that as to shake all the houses on that block, and windows rattled in house along east Frade street, three blocks distant from the scene. The house in which the explosion occurred was shaken to is foundation, the window lights were shivered to atoms, the front porch was torn up, and the rooms were perforated with flying pieces of iron. The inmates waked shricking to find the house filled with smoke and dust and shivered timbers. From the outside the house pre-sented the scene of a veritable wreck, but it was not until the visitor entered the hallway and turned into room 2 that the full force of the explosion was realized. In the wall facing the porch daylight streamed through in countless holes, from the size of a man's hand to a size so small that a lead pencil could scarcely be thrust through them. The headboard of the bed atood against the wall, and was struck by two pieces of iron, one of which passed through and the other imbedded itself in it. The piece which came through was a ragged scrap weighing nearly half a pound. It athes and plaster, cut through the headboard of the bed, tore through the pillow upon which the head of Lizzie Blount was lying, and passing on took a downward turn, struck the footboard, and passing through that dropped upon the carpet about eighteen inches away. The custom there is for the orator to take the name of one of the fallen heroes of the late war for the foundation of his remarks, and Col. Being one of the many personal friends of Rev. C. M. Payne, the former devoted pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church in this city, and having been a short time ago in his present field of labor, I am glad to be able to state, to the gratification of many of your readers, that he is exceedingly popular in Concord. He has just finshed the first year of his labors in his new pastorate and his labors have been successful and blessed. He has won not only the respect but also the good will and affection of not only the members of his own church, but the community in general. He has succeeded, he is succeeding, and bright prospects of success are before him, never saw him look, better. His health much improved and he bids fair to do many a year's work for the Master in hard to find a congregation more devoted to its pastor than Mr. Payne's are to him.
