The wheat crop was short on ac-count of the cold last winter, and dry weather the preceding fall, but overything else is as good as the heart could wish. - Statesville Landmark: Judge Montgomery has brought many litigants up with a round turn in compelling them to pay costs up to date in cases where they were not ready for trial and had no good excuses to offer. The Wonders of the Great Northwest. Gen. S. H. Manning, who is travelling in the Northwest, sends us a neat illustrated pamphlet, descriptive of "The Val ley of the Red River of the North and the City of Morehead. Minnesota." Also, "Alice's Adventures in the New Wonderland-The Yellowstone Na tional Park." This is a very interesting description of the marvellous sights to be witnessed in this wonderful country, where streams of boiling water are thrown to the height of two hundred feet at regular intervals from the famous geysers, and where the fisherman catches his lovely trout from a stream of cold water, and, without unhooking it, swings his line over into a stream of hot water, where it is cooked and ready for the table in almost the time it takes to tell it. These, however, are only two of the many wonders and curiosities with which the park abounds. This park is set aside and taken care of by the United States as its own special property. Nothing artificial is needed to add to its attractiveness.

The Minstrels.

McIntyre & Heath's minstrels will give a performance in the Opera House to-morrow night. The Petersburg Index Appeal says of their performance in that city: "There was an immense audience, the people in all parts of the house being packed like sardines, and they enjoyed an ex-cellent entertainment. McIntyre & Heath's minstrels were the attraction. Though not as pretentious to quantity as some other perhaps more widely-known organizations of this kind, they are vastly better as to quality than most of the latter. Indeed, the performance last evening was perfect in its way. The parlor entertainment was highly satisfactory, as the sing-ing was very good, and the jokes of the end men, mirabile dictu, were surprising by their freshness and originality. Of fun there was no end, and the audience, both young and old, were kept in a continuous state of merriment. Altogether it was the cleanest and most pleasing minstrel enter-tainment that has been seen in Petersburg

The scene on the ocean is described by those who had the courage and curiosity to witness it, as grand beyond conception. The huge waves hurled themselves against the boat with such force as seemingly almost to threaten her destruction, and the spray was thrown over the boat in showers.

Upon the boat's arriving opposite Orton an effort was made to land at the wharf for the passengers there, and here the most exciting scene of the day occurred. Upon turning towards the shore the wind came with such force against the steamer that she was fairly lifted out of the water and plunged to such an extent that many thought she was in the act of capsizing. The attempt to make a landing here had to be abandoned, and the parties on shore were compelled to make their way to the dwellings in the distance the best way they could. The screams of the women and children during these perilous moments almost drowned the roar of the wind. Taken altogether, however, the splendid steamer rode out the gale beautifully. She had a part of her upper works carried away by running into the wharf at Smithville. At last accounts no damage had occurred there; but a large tree in front of the Signal office had been uprooted.

IN THE CITY

The storm raged with great severity until after nightfall, when the wind, which had veered around to the west, moderated in its fury; rain, however, continuing to fall. During the height of the gale people kept within doors, and wisely, too, for the streets were strewn with the limbs and boughs of trees, which were tossed about "promiscuous like."
