THE MORNING STAR.

VOL. XXXVII,---NO. 21.

WILMINGTON, N. C., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1885.

Miss Margaret Mather, the young theatrical star that is trying to rival Miss Anderson, is, we judge, from a criticism in the New York Times of her Juliet, a good and promising actress without being great. The critic says of her:

"Miss Mather is a handsome woman on the stage; her figure is good, her carriage graceful, her features well proportioned; her broad forehead is shaded by masses of brown hair; but she has not the ravishing loveliness that belongs to Shakespeare's Juliet. * * * Miss Mather's debut was really successful, however, as we have indicated. Later on, when she appears under less disturbing circumstances, defeuts that were apparent last night may disappear. It was the first night of an elaborately spectacular production of 'Romeo and Juliet.' The waits were long."

The statement made by Mr. Childs. of the Philadelphia Ledger, relative to Gen. Grant's opinion of the election of Tilden, is fully confirmed by the Philadelphia Times, whose editor, Col. McClure, was present, as also was Mr. Drexel, the banker. The Times of Thursday says:

"But he thoroughly examined the question for himself; he earnestly advised the creation of the Electoral Commission, and he did it believing that Tilden would be declared elected. He did not wish Tilden's election, but he did wish the honestly elected President to be given the trust confided to him by the American people.'

The following clergymen constitute the court that is to try Rev. Dr. Armstrong, of Atlanta:

"Rev. William C. Hunter, rector of Trinity church, Columbus; Rev. H. E. Lucas, rector of St. Mark's, Brunswick; Rev. T. G. Pond, rector of St. Paul's, Albany; Rev. H. K. Roes, of Cave Springs, and Rev. Charles H. Strong, rector of St. John's church, Savannah. The reconstruction of St. James' Church is rapidly nearing completion, and with every day the alterations and improvements assume new beauty. Not the least important of the changes is the new surpliced choir, composed of over forty voices, which, under the direction of Prof. Frank Wright, of Philadelphia, is progressing finely, and is undoubtedly destined to be the finest chorus choir in the State. The whole work is being done under the immediate supervision of the Rector, the Rev. Dr. Lewis, who has a wonderful knowledge of almost every branch of the work and to him will below a large share of the praise, for without his indefatigable energy t would hardly have been possible to have oushed the work so rapidly and thoroughly.

Maj. H. H. Foster will open a class in vocal music shortly—as soon as a sufficient number of pupils has been obtained. Theatrical.

A Japanese opera in two acts, entitled "The Mikado," will be presented at the Opera House here on Monday and Tuesday next, by the Bijou Company. The play is said to be from first to last a combination of excellence. The famous writer, Amelia Lewis, says of the opera, "The idea to take the social life of a little-known people like the Japanese and fit it into the shortcomings of English folk, so as to satirize them, is due to the genius of W. S. Gilbert, and is carried out with extraordinary acumen. There is wit, humor and satire in every line of 'The Mikado,' from beginning to end. It never weakens and does not swerve from its purpose-it is comprehensive and unique, touching on all the sore points it can. It plays with the weaknesses of men, as did Aristophanes, the Greek satirist of old. Mr. W. S. Gilbert has outdone himself in 'The Mikado.'

"The music that fits the subject is as perfect. From the first bars of the introduction (I will not say overture) the musician knows that the composer who wrote the music never meant to go beyond his subject, but to 'fit' it, alike in gracefulness, appropriate illustrations, emotional delicacy and fine musical adaptness. There is no musical glorification in the score of the 'Mikado,' but so high an art, so exquisite and so sensitive a musical fitting, that the opera can well stand by the side of Cimarosa's comic operas."

Life Insurance.

The people of Wilmington certainly believe in life insurance. Mr. Chas. S. Clark, superintendent of agencies, and Mr. Chas. r. Moorman, special agent for the Kentucky Mutual Security Fund Company, of Louisville, Ky., say that they have, during a stay of three weeks in the city, secured applications from forty leading business men, amounting to $131,000.

The troupe is one of the finest that has been here in years. Every member is suited to his part and plays it with skill and taste. There is an air of elegance and refinement about the piece that is refresh ing and in striking contrast with a great many plays that have been produced on this stage.

While all acted well we must mention especially Miss Lewis, as Lillian, who played with force and feeling her difficult role. Miss Earle, as Mrs. Brown, was always at home under all circumstances. and the vivacious manner and nature way in which she took her part caught the audience from the first. Mr. Crossen, as Phillips, the go a-head, energetic, time saving American, was appreciated and applauded. Mr. Luison, as Strebelow, was excellent, and in the scene where the partting between himself and wife occurred, was remarably effective. The scene in which the duel took place was painfully real, and everything passed off with such precision and regularity that it seemed an actual fact rather than acting. We hope to-night an audience worthy of the piece and company will greet them, as we can assure all that a treat is in store for There will be a matinee this afternoon,
