THE MORNING STAR.

VOL. XXXVII.—NO. 31. WILMINGTON, N. C., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1885. WHOLE NO. 5962

den, of Raleigh, who was an uncle of our late townsman, Mr. James C. Lumsden.

Senator-elect Walthall, of Mississippi, is a man of force and eloquence. In a recent speech in his State he defined his political principles.

"He declared himself opposed to the suspension of silver coinage. He said the silver dollar had been and was still a disturbing element in our finances, but this he thought an inconsiderable evil compared with those he feared would follow the suspension of silver coinage, and they could be remedied if the business interests of the country so required by a change of standard.

Mississippi has evidently a worthy successor of Secretary Lamar. His head is level.

A new use has been found for the "Carolina forests," says the Charleston News and Courier. The manufacture of bent-wood furniture is now being pushed at Columbia and a factory has been established for the purpose.

The woods used are black gum, maple, walnut, white oak, beech. They are obtained from various persons in various sections, but the larger part of the supply comes from the saw-mill of Capt. J. A. Perkin, at Fort Motte, Orangeburg county.

Mahone has issued a circular ordering his clans what to do. His men are to be formed into clubs, and these clubs are to be divided into squads of nine each.

Rumor says that since Mr. W. D. Howells, the novelist, has got a $10,000 salary from the Harpers to write for them and will remove his residence from Boston to New York, the critics of the American Athens are beginning to apply their scalpels.

After all did Conkling really deny, as is claimed, that he had said the most incisive and interesting things attributed to him in the alleged Sun interview? As the New York Star puts it:

"The question is not how did the statement of Mr. Conkling's views get into print, but did it, as printed, truly represent his opinions and attitude? Mr. Conkling admits that the interview was 'made up of patches of conversation dropped from time to time by himself while talking confidentially with his friends,' and he even now, though annoyed at the publication, declares his intention to hold aloof from the campaign."

Maj. John W. Daniel takes no civil service "in his'n." In a recent speech he said:

"I am myself, a red-hot rabid kind of Democrat, who has no united feeling on the subject of civil service, but who is a Republican, but who believes in a government of the people, by the people and for the people, and that when the Democrats have been sent into power by the people, Democrats ought to occupy all the chairs around the fireside."

Spirits Turpentine. Mount Olive has a flourishing school with 120 pupils.

Mr. Simon Carlyle lost his barn and about 500 pounds tobacco, says the Lumberton Robesonian.
