John McCullough began life as a chair-maker. But he had histrionic genius.

The Cluverius case has been continued and will not come up, the Richmond State says, before March or April.

Dr. Woodrow was robbed of his gold watch at Atlanta. It was taken by one of those fellows who descended from a monkey.

McCullough is more honored dead than living -- a not uncommon occurrence. It is well to speak kindly some times of the living.

We suppose we got Judge Mc-Koy's name wrong. The News-Observer spells his first name Allmand. He was born in 1826, and married Miss Howard, of Georgia.

Gen. Lee will be inaugurated Governor of Virginia on the 1st of January, 1886, and the Virginians are preparing to make it a most memorable occasion -a grand time.

Mr. Gladstone's reception in Midlothian shows his great popularity. He spoke to his Edinburgh constituents for an hour and a quarter and then met with a tremendous ovation.

Sam Jones is to try his hand in Washington when Congress meets. We would like to see him, Zeb Vance and Vest, of Missouri, meet in a quiet corner. There would be just a little bit of fun.

"When Booth dies we shall be reduced to Keene and Barrett; and Barrett is a better melodramatic actor than he is a tragedian." -Albany Times.

But suppose Barrett and Keene die before Booth, will not we have the best living?

One of the most eminent scientists and physiologists of this country, Dr. William B. Carpenter, of London, has just died. He was born in Bristol, and was in his 73rd year. Among his more widely known scientific works are: "The Microscope and its Revelations," "Principles of General and Comparative Physiology," "Principles of Human Physiology," "A Manual of Physiology," and an "Introduction to the Study of the Foraminifera." Mary Anderson has scored a fine success in New York as Juliet in Shakespeare's famous play. A special to the Philadelphia Press says: "Mary Anderson's impersonation of Juliet undoubtedly gives greater evidences of real advancement toward the highest position attainable by a gifted woman who has adopted the stage than anything which she has attempted before. In some parts she surpasses any actress who has been seen in the role since Neilson, and she brings to the character a girlish simplicity. brings to the character a girlish simplicity which was lacking in the acting of the beautiful young Englishwoman who died too soon. The element of masculine will and force, which was unpleasantly prominent when she first acted the part, seems also to have been entirely eliminated, and in its place there is a subtle atmosphere of virgin simplicity and innocence. In the potion scene the emotional was in the ascendant, and she never erred by being melo dramatic or tragic." "Mr. George Muller, the well-known head of the Orphan Homes at Bristol, announces that during the last year he has received £41.558 'in answer to prayer,' not single donation having been solicited."-

Bro. Muller is very shrewd. He has been carrying on his great orphanage for some fifty years, but it is not done without work. He does not solicit funds of this or that person, but he advertises it in the best possible way. It is a noble work and its history is extremely interesting and novel. Good people the world over like to aid him in his stupendous undertaken and he is often rewarded with large donations. Mr. Parnell is rather favorably impressed with Mr. Gladstone's utterances on the Irish problem. In a recent speech at Liverpool he complimented Mr. Gladstone on the breadth of his views on the Irish question and called upon him to formulate a scheme for self-government in Ireland before the election, so that the peers would have no chance to reject it if the Liberals should return to power. Mr. Parnell said that Mr. Gladstone's statement, though vague and unsatisfactory, was the most important on the Irish question ever delivered by any English Minister. The Raleigh people held a big meeting to agitate the industrial school question. Speeches were made and resolutions were adopted. A committee of twenty-five are appointed, ten of whom shall be from Wake county and fifteen from the State-at-large, whose duty it shall be to confer with the authorities of the city of Raleigh and with practical ndustrial educators in this State and elsewhere and consider the constitution, cost and character of the insti-

In Floral Hall there are over 400 entries, in the agricultural and domestic hall about 100, besides a first rate exhibit of poultry, horse, cattle, hogs, cotton, &c. In the poultry line the exhibit

Bold Coon. The fowl house of Mr. John Maffitt, on Dock, between Front and Second streets, was entered by some varment Thursday night, and a fine hen was killed and about one half of her eaten. His coonship was immediately slaughtered, and was found to weigh about 14 pounds. Destroyed by Fire. We learn from the Raleigh Visitor that the residence of "Dr." Wm. H. Moore, near that city, was consumed by fire Thursday morning, together with his furniture and stock of medicine. His loss is $1,900: insurance $600. Moore is well known in this city, where he resided for many years, and was prominent as a Republican politi, cian. The "Dr." is in bad luck, having
