Expe rience is dear to many people, but they are "still a taking it."

- Lenoir Topic: Something over a year ago, it will be remembered, the premises of John Clippard, the revenue informer, were invaded in the Brushy mountains, his stables and fences burned, and he was ordered to leave the locality. He removed to the strip of land acquired by Caldwell from Wilkes. Since he was raided he has at all times gone heavily armed. On Monday night last some boys were passing his house, singing, and Clippard thinking it was another raid, grabbed his gun and went out on the plazza. By some means the gun was discharged, the

C., on the 11th of October, 1825, and died at his home in Clinton on the morning of November the 11th, 1885, aged just sixty years and one month. His paternal grandfather, Alexander McKoy, came from Scotland and settled in Iredell county. His father, Dr. William McKoy, came to Clinton about seventy years ago. His maternal grand-father was Allmand Hall, who resided in Wilmington and edited the Gazette there for several years. A devoted husband, a fond and indulgent father, how much he loved and cherished his family only God can estimate. seen some of them himself. Many of these so called dark seances were frauds. He believed that many of these things were entirely inexplicable. The amount of contradiction as to the existence of spirits and their dwelling places, their habits, and every thing connected with them, was a mass of the most superlative contradiction. He did not believe that they were those of disembodied spirits, but if he must give an opinion he would say that they were fallen angels. Although knowing the cunningness of the devil, he could hardly believe that he would be the author of such a bungling farago as that all juted to spi rits.

The subject was treated in a masterly manner, and shows t answest study and wide research over the field of this strange form of belief of the nineteenth century. The presentation of facts was striking, the arguments logical and the quotations from spiritualistic authors were well chosen and well answered.

The lecture was a well written production and was both instructive and edifying. It is to be regretted that more were not present to encourage by their presence, aid with

The Fence Cases. Yesterday was the day set apart in the Criminal Court by his honor Judge Meares for the trial of what are known as the "Fence Cases," in which a number of farmers and others throughout the county were indicted for keeping unlawful fences during crop time. A test case was madethe State vs. Wm. Bloodworth. Mr. Marsden Bellamy appeared for the defendant and Solicitor Moore for the State. The jury rendered a special verdict as follows:

"The jury find that the defendant was the occupier and cultivator of a farm, and that he did not have and keep a fence five feet high around the same, during the crop season of the year 1885. But whether the defendant is guilty or not guilty under the bill of indictment the jury are not instruct-ed, and pray the instruction of the Court. If the Court shall be of the opinion that the defendant under this finding of fact is guilty, then the jury find that he is guilty; but if not, then that he is not guilty." Whereupon, the Court gave judgment for the defendent, and from which judgment the Solicitor for the State craved an appeal. The appeal was granted. Theatrical. "A Brave Woman" will fill the boards at the Opera House on Tuesday night next. The piece had its initial production in this country at the Union Square Theatre, New York, where it was pronounced the success of the season. Afterwards it was played at the Brooklyn Theatre, and the Eagle of that city said of its presentation there:
