The Morning Star By WILLIAM H. BERNARD. WILMINGTON. N. C. WEDNESDAY EVENING, Nov. 25, 1883 EVENING EDITION nd that of Poe was the more obvious and entered the poetic field as critics. Mr. Stedman has produced two volumes of masterly criticism-the "Victorian Poets" and the "Poets of rally." America." They are well worth studying. He is an elegant writer, and has a positive genius for poetic criticism. He is a poet himself of no little cleverness and is well equipped for the discussion of the great and smaller singers. Mr. Stedman evidently considers Poe to be a man of striking and orig. inal genius, but does not believe him to be America's greatest poet, nor, we suppose, America's greatest genius. At any rate he regards his poetic powers as limited, and, possischools."

bly, narrow. He says: "Poe was not a single poem poet, but the poet of a single mood." 'Sound always was his forte. * * He lacked the dramatic power of combination and produced no symphony in rythm-was strictly a melodist who achieved wonders in a sin gle strain.' "We are on firm ground with relation to his genuineness as a poet, but his narrowness of range and the slender bud of his poetic remains of themselves should make writers hesitate to pronounce him our greatest one. His verse is as conspicuous for what it shows he could not do as for that which he did.""

This may be true, and still the fact remains that English, French and Italian critics have been more impressed by his few poems than by anything that Bryant or Longfellow or Whittier or Holmes or Lowell has done. Not one of these authors has given to the world poems as original as "The Raven," and two or three other of Poe's best productions And not one of these has written stories remotely comparable to Poe' in invention, cumulative power, originality and interest. Mr. Stedman does not undertake to depreciate Poe's prose writings. He may not estimate them so highly as others, but he shows that he has a high opinion of their merits when he selects the greatest prose writer of America to compare with the gifted son of the South. In a paragraph marked by penetration, analysis and felicity of expression Stedman savs: "Poe and Hawthorne were the last of the comancers. Each was a master in his way, tory schools complain not only of the humbug colleges but make the charge against the higher institutions gene-

The opinion among the foremost teachers in the high schools and academies is that the numerous "so-called colleges and universities must continue to have a most injurious effect on true education." These institutions must depend mainly on patronage for support, as they are not endowed, and the consequence is, the standard is made very low. It is urged that they do not do even the work of the high schools, and yet they set themselves up "to be finishing

Maj. Bingham writes:

"All that we ask is a fair field, and no favor. Raise the standard for admission into the colleges as at the North; or for exit as at the University of Virginia; or for en-trance and exit, exclude children and mere boys by limit of age * * and there will be preparatory schools enough to do all the work without any endowment but brains."

Mr. Smith, in a note, says: "It is greatly to the credit of the Univer-sity of North Carolina that it has decided to do away with all form of preparatory department or subclass." Mr. Smith says that from the best information he is able to say that "there is an upward tendency lately in the preparatory work in Alabama, Missouri and North Carolina." He refers especially to the Bingham and Horner schools in this State. But there are other schools that with less reputation are probably doing just as thorough work. At this time there is a considerable number of classical schools that are doing thorough, conscientious work. No State is as much blessed in this particular as Viirginia. There are no less than twelve high schools that are feeders to the University, and these are of exceptional excellence. These schools prepare mainly for the highest class in the departments of the University of Virginia. The result is that only a small number go to the University from each of the twelve schools. Mr. Strode, of the Kenmore University School, says that "the number and character of

THE TORIES AND THEIR ALLIES.

N. Y. Times.

A little philosophy, a little politi-cal foresight, and, above all, the patience to wait for the inevitable and speedy breaking up of the Irish-Tory alliance will go far to console the English Liberals for possible defeat in the elections to be held this week. After the contest has shaped itself toward the last, a wise Liberal might well prefer defeat to victory. To Mr. Gladstone, who doubtless feels that he has taken part in his last campaign, defeat would be inexpressibly sad and mortifying, but to the young and ambitious men of the party, men who are sincerely devoted to Liberal ideas and are eager to take part in the great domestic reforms for which the time is ripening in England, the embarrassing tasks, the certain discords, and the formidable obstructions which await the victorious party must cause many misgivings, and many of them would be quite willing, we fancy, to see the Tories succeed and prepare the way for a sweeping Liberal victory at the next dissolution. It is universally conceded that the Liberals will win with a reduced majority, if at all. They would be powerless for undertakings of weight and permanence with any majority of less than 50 votes over the Tories and Irish combined, and with even a much larger majority they would be restrained by differences in their own ranks from any vide departure from the path o commonplace British legislation. The Tories, on the other hand, would accept the responsibilities of power ARRINGTON GAME FOWLS FOR SALE under distinct obligations to use it MY GAME FOWLS HAVE A NATIONAL RE for the benefit of Mr. Parnell's party, and the Liberals in opposition putation. Mysterious Fire in a Hotel-A Woma With Her Throat Cut Throws Herself From a Third Story Window-A Man Nearly Suffocated.

(By Telegraph to the Morning Star.)

Sr. Louis, Nov. 25 .- At 2 o'clock this morning fire was discovered in one of the north rooms of the Metropoliton Hotel, on 7th street. The fire department arrived 22 lbs. promptly, but the flames had gained such headway that it required considerable effort to confine them to the building. One man was taken from his bed nearly suffocated and very seriously burned about the head and body. He was taken to the hospital. A woman was seen at a window on the third floor, but seemed powerless to open it. A fireman threw a rock, breaking the window, and the woman threw herself head foremost to the pavement. She died a few minutes later. She was badly burned and had a deep incision in her threat, which looked as though it had been done with a razor. It is thought the building was accidentally set on fire by some wo man's lover, although there are rumors that the woman whose throat was cut, had been murdered and the assassin set fire to the building to cover his crime.

THE SOUTH'S SUPREME GENIUS. The STAR in former articles has mentioned the great and growing fame of Edgar A. Poe. In called attention to the numerous biographies of him that had appeared within ten years by Americans and Englishmen. It has also noted from time to time the critical articles upon him or that referred to him that appeared in England and France. The interest concerning this unique genius has not lessened. The probability is that other biographies of him will follow, and discussions of his works and genius in the leading periodicals of the world will continue. This is interesting to educated people. They may not really admire or understand the "rare and radiant" productions of an extraordinary man, both prose and verse, and still they must be pleased when they see the greatest genius of the South placed so high among the authors of the last fifty

We wish to draw attention to some recent opinions of Poe. The British Quarterly Review has a paper on American poets in which the author gives Poe the first place among all American poets. But not only does the English critic give Poe the highest seat in the American Valhalls set apart for the inspired singers, but he gives also a high place to Poe among the prose writers of the nineteenth century. He says: "Only the few who have studied his entire collected remains-not one fifth of his English admirers- know half the wit and nglish admirets know hall the wild, weird, ungoverned, but almost unrivalled tion, the marvellous constructive power, the practical cleverness, the varied ingenuity, the industry-a tithe of the truth and clearness of perception 'that died, and died so young.'

Another late critic is E. Nencioni, an Italian. In Nuova Antologia he discusses American poetry also. He gives Poe the first place as did the Englishman, and he says he reminds im of Keats and Shelley. This is very high praise. Now we are not spared to claim that Poe had more than any other man born on continent. He is admired by he poets and is much praised by oreign critics. He is the only American who has done so well in material. He was expert in much that concerns the structure of works, and the modelling touches of the poet left beauty marks upon his prose. Yet in spiritual neaning his tales were less poetic than those of Hawthorne. He relied upon his externals making much of their gorgeousness of color, their splendor and gloom of light and shade. Hawthorne found the secret meaning of common things, and knew how to capture from the plainest aspects of life an essence of evasive beauty which the senses of Poe were often unable to perceive. It was Hawthorne who heard the melodies too fine for mortal ear. Hawthore was wholly masculine, with the great tenderness and gentleness which belong to virile souls. Poe had, with the delicacy, the sophistry and weakness of a nature more or less effeminate. He opposed to Hawthorne the fire the richness, the instability of the tropics, against the abiding strength and passion of the North."

SOUTHERN EDUCATION AND THI

ATLANTIC MONTHLY. We have been interested in a paper in the December number of the Atlantic Monthly, entitled "Southern Colleges and Schools." It is from the pen of a Southern teacher Mr. Charles Forster Smith, of South Carolina. It is based upon a correspondence with a large number of prominent teachers in colleges and academies. Among them are Prof. Winston, of the University of North Carolina, and Maj. Bingham, of Bingham's School. Mr. Smith sees the defects in the educational system in the South, recognizes the uncommon excellence of the foremost colleges and the best high schools, and has written a very interesting paper. He may not be right in all of his conclusions, but we feel sure that he is correct in much that he says. He especially objects to the multiplication of colleges, and gives some curious facts connected with them. He also objects, and for excellent reasons given, to the preparatory departments in the colleges. What he says deserves attentive consideration. A little town in Tennessee had two colleges. One of these colleges(?) had a primary course and it ended with the Fourth Reader. This college(?) conferred degrees of course. But the funniest thing occurred in Texas. There is an University in that State. Not a college, but a collection of colleges-an University. It has three Professors-a father and two sons. Mr. Smith says, "some time ago the two great departments. That is to sons conferred LL. D. on the old the preparatory schools of Virginia I have always thought to be due solely to the influence of the University of Virginia." The University has never had a preparatory department. Mark that. Its standard has been always high-very high. Pro fessor Pierce, of Harvard, said of the University of Virginia "that the standard in mathematics for undergraduates was then the highest in the United States." The course of studies in the University preparatory schools "is essentially the same as that in the German Gymnasien, namely, English, mathematics, Latin, Greek, French and German." There are some other points that will require another notice.

Mr. George M. Landers is a Connecticut Democrat. He is a large manufacturer and was for four years a member of Congress from the Hart ford District. He believes in Tariff agitation. He says most articles are now simply protected to death. He would have voted for the Morrison bill of the last Congress that Mr. Randall and his squad defeated. He is one of those sagacious, advanced manufacturers that believe in putting all raw materials used in manufacturing on the free list. Of the tax on wool he says:

"In the face of the new conditions of wool growing you might as well undertake to protect Vermont in the growth of oranges and bananas in hot-houses as to protect her wool against the competition of other domestic wools. In New England we must have Australian or Cape wools for the finer grades of knit wool goods. England gets her wools free. If we had wool free New England could beat old England to death in the South American markets. believe in the survival of the fittest in matters of production.

While manufacturers who have worked long under the present un wise Tariff are sick of its excessive protection, there are young manufacturers who are looking to protection as their chief hope. They will leave better if they live long enough.

OUR STATE CONTEMPORARIES.

As far back as any of us can remember the price of silver in London has been remarkably steady, (up to the time it was demonetized as above) the price has been from 59 to 60 pence, being about $1.19 per ounce. Since it was demonstized it has continued to decline, and is now selling at about 47 to 48 pence, about 95 cents per ounce. England produces no silver, but uses an immense amount of it in paying for her purchases in India and other silver countries. It was a bold stroke of policy ING and HEATING STOVES and RANGES, with Portable and Stationery GRATES, to our PLUM-BING and GAS-FITTING Business, and are pre-pared to give Very Low Figures on our NEW GOODS. Front St. on the part of England to demonstize silver. By doing so she depreciates the value of it, and enables her to buy it at reduced prices. Now see the advantage England gains by it, and carefully note the disadvantage it is to the people of the United States. With gold at 60 pence, or $1.20 per ounce in London, gold and silver are then on a parity, and a man in London or Liverpool who wants to buy wheat will buy it in the United States, because he will save money by doing so. On the other hand, if silver is selling in London at 48 pence or 96 cents, he will buy his wheat in India, Austria, or Morocco or some of the other countries, because he can buy the silver at the reduced price and it is with silver that he pays for the wheat in India or Austria. similar situation our country would be in if we were to send a hundred million of our standard silver dollars to London and have them sold at their bullion value, say 85 cents, and then for our wheat planters to receive them at their face value in payment for wheat. If this was allowed every bushel of wheat in this country would be immediately bought up by the Eng-lishmen and shipped to England. As it now stands the granaries of the West are full of wheat, and our very best customer, England, in a great measure lost to While we have fallen off immensely in our shipments of wheat to England other countries, viz.: India, Austria and Morocco, has greatly increased, their shipments having increased thirty-five fold. Precisely the same situation to a great extent exists in low grade cotton. India can never compete with us in high grade cotton but she can in low grades, and if the policy of demonetizing silver is carried into effect and the price of silver stull further reduced, we may well fear the loss of all of England's trade with us in low grade cotton .- W. NO SURPRISE! THE GOVERNMENT ENDORSES

The American Agriculturist.

FROM THE TENTH CENSUS, VOL. 8, JUST PUBLISHED.

The American Agriculturist is especially worthy of mention, because of the remarkable success that has attended the unique and untiring efforts of its proprietors to increase and extend its circulation. Its contents are duplicated every month for a German edition, which also circulates widely. This Tribute is a pleasing incident in the mar-vellous nearly HALF A CENTURY Career of this recognized leading Agricultural Journal of the world.

What it is To-Day.

Six months ago the American Agriculturist en tered upon a NEW CAREER OF PROSPERITY. and to-day it is far superior to any similar per-odical ever produced in this or any other coun-try. Richer in editorial strength; richer in engratry. Richer in editorial strength; richer in engra-vings; printed on finer paper, and presenting in every issue 100 columns of original reading mat-ter from the ablest writers, and nearly 100 illus-trations. Dr. George Thurber, for nearly qua-ter of a century the editor-in-chief of the Amer-ican Agriculturist, Joseph Harris, Byron D. Hal-sted, Col. M. C. Weld, and Andrew S. Fuller, the other long time Editors, together with the other writers who have made the American Agricultu-rist what it is to-day, ARE STILL AT THEIR POSTS.
