to the newspaper. Within five years South Carolina has increased its real and personal property more than $25,000,000; the increase in manufactures is more than $21,000,000; the increase in agricultural productions is more than $8,000,000; the increase in live stock is more than $9,000,000; the increase in agricultural machinery is $1,400,000. During the five years $2,800,000 has been expended upon railroads. This is gratifying progress. South Carolina is rapidly developing. Her people are becoming much more conservative and progressive.

AN INSPIRED SINGER.

It may be conceded that thus far the North has developed more poetical genius than the South has developed. While it has produced a Bryant, a Longfellow, a Whittier, an Emerson, a Lowell, and many other genuine sons of song, it has also given birth to some daughters who in their effort to immortalize themselves will doubtless throw a bright halo around their native States. The public has been familiar for some years with the "sweet singer of Michigan," Mrs. Julia A. Moore. Her wonderful productions have excited the highest interest and secured for her own brow a wreath of immortality. But she has a very strong rival in Mrs. Sarah A. Kelley, of Pennsylvania. This very gifted bard has applied to the Congress for a fat salary, and for the conferring of the Poet Laureateship upon her. She calls herself fondly and, doubtless, appropriately, the "National Poet Laureate Aspirant and Bard of Shanty Hill." How very touching! She is evidently one of your poets born. She has drunk freely of the inspiring waters of Helicon, or of some equally inspiring spring at the foot of "Shanty Hill." She will reflect undying glory on her State, and, if the Congress shall crown her with the bays of the "Nation"—she will pour a perfect cataract of glory on the American eagle. That her genius is pure and fine the following exquisite lines amply testify. She sings:

"I was the very best of teachers, At least my praises were sung. By A. N. Bullard, Superintendent Of Susquehanna County at the time; I was educated most resplendent."

That reminds one of Sappho, Callinus and Horace united with Keats, Tennyson and Swinburne. The rhythmic flow, you will perceive, is charming, and there is such a happy blending, too, of sense with sound. There is something truly Miltonic in the stately sweep of the last line—"I was educated most resplendent." It is a fit conclusion to the grand opening outburst—"I was the very best of teachers." But her inspiration widens and her genius takes a higher flight when soaringly she chants:

"I thank the Lord that I can write Without 'Sev'ral Days' seclusion quiet; Ten to 'Sev'ral Minutes' is all I ask To write from Three to Seven Verse Task."

This is absolutely perfect. Since Homer and Dante there has been scarcely anything to equal it in the dash and gloom. The piety and gratitude, too, are above praise. Her Muse is evidently deeply religious, and there is a very tender sadness in those gracefully flowing lines which in she contemplates death and directs her own funeral. Hear the dying swan as she pours out her lofty soul in strains of richest, most entrancing melody:

"Bury me in Jackson Cemetery, a very beautiful place. Let the officiating Minister be the Rector of Grace Protestant Episcopal Church, of Homestead, Pa. The Bard of Shanty Hill, whose Fame shall never fade away."

Why cannot the barren South produce a genius like that?

Senator Coke, of Texas, has also spoken in the Senate in opposition to the bankers and money lenders and in favor of silver and the borrowers. He is one of the ablest men in public life. In real mental power and grasp we doubt if he has a superior in the Senate. His speeches read like the great speeches of forty years ago, except they are unadorned and unrhymed. We have no doubt that he spoke for silver with the same lucidity, compactness, vigor and logical precision that he did in opposition to the dangerous Blair bill. When we have seen his speech we may have more to say.

After a great deal of effort on the part of Senator Vance the Senate has at last passed a resolution to provide duplicates of the official letter books that were stolen by the Yankees from the Governor's Office at Raleigh in 1865. After the lapse of twenty years the North manifests a sufficient return of reason and fairness to agree to furnish copies—not the originals, and the performance is highly creditable.

So John Sherman, the most depraved and wickedest man in the Senate, has been re-elected. He is a brainy fellow and at bottom is a despoiler of honor as a marsh mosquito is of conscience.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—A good many Democrats are to be excused if they do not believe in a reform which is championed by such transparent hypocrites as Eugene Hale, the New York Tribune and the Boston Journal. The reform itself is thoroughly established, and there is no fear of its overthrow. Its development, however, may be greatly delayed by the false impressions which cunning Republican partisans are permitted to give of the intent of the law. So long as these people fill the Congressional Record and the newspapers with their clamor against the removal of Republican partisans, so long will a large number of Democrats believe that the effect of the law is to keep their old and offensive opponents in place. And the only answer will be the dismissal of Republican officers by the President.—Boston Post, Civil Service Organ.

—The boycotting of new and unpopular Democratic postmasters is said to be increasing instead of diminishing. There are now over 300 cases of the kind, and many of the men who imagined themselves snugly ensconced in fat berths have to face an entirely new situation.—Phil. Press. This is a sad illustration of the office-holding greed of the Republican party. Not content with administering the postoffice for twenty-five years, entire Republican communities now combine to punish the new Democratic postmasters by refusing to buy stamps of them. This is not a big business, but it will encourage a great many people to continue the work of keeping the Republicans out of office who are already out and may really stimulate the movement to turn out those who are yet in. Such is human nature.—N. Y. World, Dem.

—Senator Vance does not believe in the present methods of civil service reform. The New York Times does. Mr. Vance has introduced a bill in the Senate providing for the repeal of the Civil Service law, and the Times, anticipating a speech from him on the subject, declares with a remarkable claim to foreknowledge, that "it will contain much vulgarity, and much that a Senator of this generation ought to be ashamed of, but it will not be dull." This is mugwumpery run mad. What excuse can this public journal give for branding beforehand as vulgar a speech not a line of which has ever come under its eye? If Mr. Cleveland's recent letter, so denunciatory of newspapers, had been properly modified in justice to many newspapers in the country, it might still have included the Times, which seems so fond of hurling jagged phrases at those whose opinions happen to differ from its own. * * * But civil service reform does not mean the retention in office of Republican partisans simply because they happened to hold places when a Democratic President was installed. Yet some of those who have been loudest in advocacy of reform have been those who have sinned most grievously against it.—Richmond State, Dem.

THE THREAT OF THE NATIONAL BANKS.

N. Y. Sun.

Senator McPherson, in his other wise feeble reply to Senator Beck's speech on the silver question, makes one significant remark. After rehearsing the stale and thoroughly baseless prophecy that the continued coinage of the silver dollar will naturally cause a contraction of the currency and consequent financial panic, he goes on to say:

"The national banks, which now furnish a large proportion of our circulating medium, would, in self-preservation, assist greatly in the inevitable contraction, not in short, anticipation. They would surrender circulation, redeem and take in gold the premium upon the bonds pledged to make good their notes, and bank, if at all, upon the issues of the Treasury or the Mint. From these two causes alone, to say nothing of the hoarding of gold by private citizens, the effect upon our industries would be frightful."

Were not the silliness of this talk equalled by its malignity, it would not be worth noticing. The circulation of the national banks is now about $200,000,000. None of the bonds pledged for the redemption of it can be withdrawn, except upon the deposit in the Treasury of the identical notes issued by each bank, or of an equal amount of lawful money. The banks could not get in their own notes, and they would not deposit the gold now in their vaults, because they would want to silver or to legal tenders. Now, the total amount of silver dollars and of silver certificates in actual circulation in the country is about $135,000,000, of gold about $20,000,000, and the entire issue of legal tenders is only about $346,000,000, making no allowance for notes lost or destroyed. Consequently in order to withdraw their pledged bonds, the banks would have to annihilate $300,000,000 out of the existing $800,000,000 of national circulating medium. What the premium on the bonds would be after this catastrophe, and what they would sell for, it is not necessary to demonstrate. They simply could not be sold at all, for there would not be enough money left to buy them with. Gold, according to Senator McPherson, would mostly be either hoarded or exported, and only $500,000,000 of gold, silver and paper money together would remain for the business wants of 60,000,000 people.

Supposing, therefore, the Presidents and directors of the national banks to possess the smallest possible amount of common sense, they will not even attempt to do what Senator McPherson threatens on their behalf. But experience shows that this is by no means a safe assumption. There is no measuring the depth of the stupidity nor the wildness of the insanity that may possess a bank manager's mind when he fancies that he sees an impending pecuniary loss.

THE RADICALS AND IRELAND.

London Truth.

Looking to the future of the Radical cause I am convinced that it is of paramount importance to settle Irish matters in a manner satisfactory to the Irish. If we do not we shall have to embark on a career of repression; our position will be like that of Austria to Lombardy, and what is that of Russia to Poland. Now, which party is the better fitted for such a policy? Obviously the Conservatives. These serpents are wise as he of Eden. They know this. Whenever Radical measures are likely to pass their game has been to drag us into foreign complications. This is the basis of Jingoism. Ireland they now look to as their trump card. They ask for nothing better than to remain eternally in office, and eternally crushing out Irish feeling and aspirations. They are well aware that, so long as this Irish question is unsettled, it will so occupy us that we shall not be able to give effect to Radical reforms. Do I blame them? Not in the least. On the contrary, I admire their sagacity. Those whom I blame are the Radicals and Liberals, who allow themselves to be humbugged in so very simple a fashion.

A WISE BOY.

Detroit Free Press.

For an hour yesterday forenoon a woman walked up and down the ladies' waiting room at the Third street station in her efforts to hush the screams and yells of a child about 2 years old. The little one was hopping mad about something, and could not be soothed by soft words or sticks of candy. There finally came a moment when everybody saw the mother's face take on a look of grim determination, and at that moment a new-boy who had been warming himself at a register broke for out doors.

"What's the row?" asked one of his outside friends as he joined them.

"There's a woman in there goin' to spank her young'un."

"Why didn't you stop and see the fun?"

"Um! 'Spose I want to be hauled up as a witness in an assault and battery case and have the lawyers givin' me sass?"

OUR STATE CONTEMPORARIES.

The subject of diversification, too, has been treated copiously in these columns. We don't propose to let up on that until our farmers become in a measure independent of the North and West for their provisions for man and beast. And this brings us, by a logical sequence, to the absorbing question of crop liens. So long as our farmers cultivate an exclusive crop, to the utter neglect of home supplies, so long will they founder in the mire of adversity. When a man mortgages his future he may rest assured his mortgage fully recognizes his own risk and fully calculates the many vicissitudes and exigencies that compass about the making of the crop long will they founder in the mire of adversity. Rev. Dr. Curry, who has been appointed Minister to Spain, is said to be worth several hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Cleveland had better leave the preachers alone in their proper calling. We never knew a preacher who dabbled in politics and public affairs while preaching the Gospel, who did not get smirched "sooner or later."—Charlotte Democrat.

Mr. Walter H. Page and Mr. Cleveland are still in favor of civil service reform. We suppose their entire administration will be run on that line, no matter how long it takes.—Clinton Caucasian.

CONTAGIOUS.

Diseases are Prevalent all over the World.

I am a native of England, and while I was in that country I contracted terrible blood poison, and for two years was under treatment as an out-door patient at Nottingham Hospital, England, but was not cured. I suffered the most agonizing pains in my bones, and was covered with sores all over my body and limbs, I had vertigo and dizziness, with partial loss of sight, severe pains in my head and eyes, and, finally, nearly ran mad. I took all the best medical treatment in America, and was treated at Knoxville in this city, as well as by a prominent physician in New York, but had no occasion with the hospital.

I saw the advertisement of Swift's Specific, and decided to give it a trial as I had heard that I had given up all hope of being cured, as I had gone through the hands of the best medical men in Nottingham and New York. I took six bottles of Swift's Specific, and I can say with great joy that they have cured me entirely. I am as sound and well as I ever was in my life.
