MORNING EDITION.

OUTLINES.

The railroad strike at St. Louis has ended, the strike being declared off by the Executive Board of the Knights of Labor.

The River and Harbor bill is now ready for the final vote of the House.

Secretary Manning will not resign. So it is all about Sam Randall's being appointed in his place.

It is thought that the Congress will be able to adjourn early in July. Well, the country needs rest.

Mr. J. F. Wilkinson, of New York, paid $330 for two vases of Coppola Monte ware. They were afterwards sold for $27,500.

The two Sams have opened their fight in Baltimore. At the first meeting fully 8,000 men were present and crowds could not get in.

The teachers of Nevada are well paid, especially for a State that has not been able to hold its own in population and otherwise.

Huxley has written an ingenious attack upon Christianity for one of the English Reviews, which he calls the "Evolution of Theology."

Jeff Davis's triumph through Alabama and Georgia is very worrying to Radical flesh. But awful howlings do not stop the fun.

One of our Southern exchanges had a gallery of portraits of Ex-President Davis and his Cabinet.

Miss Clara Louise Kellogg indignantly denies the rumor that she is about to retire from the stage.

No, Clara will not retire, but everybody else knows she ought to retire. Clara ought either to let her audiences have a rest or she ought to borrow another voice.

Mr. Tilden has spoken. He likes the idea of Mr. Cleveland's marriage, and thinks his sister is not the sort of woman to make things pleasant and attractive around the White House.

That was very considerate in the President to send a basket of choice flowers from the White House conservatory to ex-President Arthur.

Old Fred Douglass is green enough in his article in the North American, to assert that the Caucasian race in the United States will be absorbed by the Africans.

Mr. Davis met with a splendid ovation all along his route from Montgomery to Atlanta and from Atlanta to Savannah.
