The Agricultural and Mechanical College.

The Raleigh correspondent of the Star writes: "In the hall of the House of Commons Wednesday evening there was a joint meeting of the committee of the House on Education and Agriculture and the committee appointed at the State Farmers' Convention held during January. The purpose of the meeting was the discussion of matters relative to the proposed State College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts. Mr. Leazar, chairman of the Committee on Education, called the meeting to order. Senator Pemberton read the bill establishing the college above mentioned. Mr. Leazar made some remarks upon the bill, and upon the plan of the meeting. He said the 'talks' would be of fifteen minutes' length. He called on Mr. Primrose as a gentleman well informed on the question of industrial education.

Vessels off Hatteras.

Vessels arriving at this port report passing the wreck of a small vessel floating bottom upward, supposed to be the schooner Edith Linwood, which was sunk in collision off Body Island on the 3d inst., and the crew of which were rescued and brought into this port by the schooner Jennie Hall, now repairing at Skinner's ship yard. The wreck was last sighted by the schooner Harold C. Beecher, (at Savannah, February 15th from New York,) in latitude 35.35, longitude 76. It is in the track of vessels plying up and down the coast, and is probably the same wreck recently reported by several vessels arriving at New York. The same day the Beecher passed through a large quantity of coconuts floating on the water, which were no doubt a portion of the cargo of the wrecked vessel. The steamer Louisiana, at Baltimore, reports passing a barque capsized, down by the stern and apparently of about 900 tons, some thirty miles north by east from Hatteras light. This wreck, also, is a great danger to vessels passing up and down the coast.
