THE ARSON CASE.

THE MORNING STAR.

Trial of H. P. Morgan-Evidence for the State.

The Criminal Court was occupied yesterday with the trial of H. P. Morgan for arson, in causing the destruction of his store and other buildings on South Second street on the morning of the 16th of February, 1886. The prisoner was arrested in August last, but his case has been deferred from term to term of the Court on account of the absence of material witnesses.

The Court opened at 10 o'clock and the whole of the forencon was occupied in the selection of the jury, which was finally chosen as follows: Jos. Silva, M. H. Bass, E. T. Craig, Geo. W. Mitchell, J. W. Mc. Cartney, Josiah Merritt, J. Hand, G. G. Aman, W. S. Warrock, J. E. Bunting, John W. Perdew, J. H. King.

The first witness for the State was Pcliceman Smith, who discovered fire burning in the store occupied by Morgan and gave the alarm.

Mrs. Strock was the next witness. She lived in the building next north of the store occupied by Morgan. The fire occurred on the 16th of February, 1886, between 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning. She was awakened by the crackling of sticks or breaking and smashing of timbers. There was only a partition wall between her room and Morgan's store. She was alarm. ed at the noise, got up and went into the street; saw through the glass window in Morgan's store a man in a stooping position. Tried the door of the store, but it was fastened; the man she saw in the store was not Morgan; but a man she had seen in company with the latter on three different occasions previously When she first saw the fire 10 the store the blaze was about four feet high; the man was apparently kindling it or trying to put it out She returned to her rooms, aroused the members of her family and commenced to remove her furniture and effects; while she

the State, testified: I was born in Russia. Have known Morgan twelve months. I first knew him in Wilmington. I came here to buy goods to peddle; I only saw him that day, and he invited me to call and see him when I came to town again. The next time I came to town I stopped and spent the night with Morgan at his invitation. He invited me to enter in business with him. I declined his proposition. I did go into business with him about a week be-fore the fire. I was in business on Market street and he was my partner nine days before the fire. We kept cigars and tobacco. I bought the stock and paid for it. We slept in Morgan's store on Second street. One morning I got up and Morgan told me that he was going off to see his brother. He asked me to accompany him, and I told him that I had no business there and would not go. About 10 o'clock that day a boy brought a bag of sugar to my store, saying Morgan had sent it. A little later Morgan himself brought tohacco, pepper, sardines, &c. I asked why he brought the things to my store. He said you need ask me no questions about it. At 1 o'clock I went to Morgan's store to dinner, and he again insisted on my going away with him. At 6 o'clock I went to his store; he was standing behind the dry goods counter; he was taking goods from the shelves and packing them in a bundle; he said he was taking them to his brother to pay a bill; he put worsted goods, shoes. towels, shawls, jewelry, tableware, &c., in the bundle; the pack was worth about $75. He then said, "Now is the time to say whether you will go with me or not." He said if I did not go I would have to sleep somewhere else that night. He said "I will pay your way; I will pay half of your losses and all your expenses," and I said all right that I would go. He put on his good clothes, and he took an old shirt and towel and tore them up and poured kerosene on them; he put a half gallon of oil all over the floor. I asked him why he did so, and he told me to ask no questions, that it was not my business. He then went over to the grocery shelf and put something-I don't know what it was-upon the shelf. We then started, both of us carrying the bundle until we got to the livery stable on Sec-ond street, and he said "I forgot to get some money from the drawer." I told him that I had money enough to pay our way; but he went back. I left the pack at the stable with two boys and

Finding that his work was not effective, and that the small blade, which he had used, had been dulled, he opened the larger blade and with both blades slashed the other side of his throat, then got in bed and covered up, head and ears. He was found in this situation and resisted the efforts to take the cover off. Godfrey Hart testified :

Was awakened about daylight by people calling fire. I went down stairs in my stocking-feet. When I got on the first floor the smoke was coming through the floor. When I got to Morgan's store, look ing in the window, I saw flames I pushed the door, and the explosion came and blew me into the street. I was rendered unconscious, and when I came to my senses was in bed at Mrs. Warren's. She told me that she picked me up in the street. After recovering consciousness 1 went back and found the house badly wrecked. I went to my spartment through Mr. Greenberg's. could not reach my room up the stairs, as they were completely blown away. My wife awoke me that morning by knocking at my door, saying, "The house is on fire. went down at once without dressing don't know how she got down from the up-stairs. I did not stop to see to that. John H. Daniel testified:

At the time of the fire was foreman of the Hook and Ladder Company. Heard the alarm about 8 or 4 o'clock iu the morning. When I got to the fire it was under control; two streams were playing upon it. The fire seemed to be in the front part of Morgan's store. The partition between Morgan's store and that of Mrs. Strock was down; apparently having been blown down.

J. P. O'Sullivan testified:

I know Mr. Godfrey Hart. His wife in my sister. I remember the fire. I was at Hart's house about 7 o'clock the evening before. When I next saw the building. i was on the morning after the fire. (He testified that the disgram of the house shewn by solicitor is correct) The stain steps were down and the wood scorched Did not see any coals. I cannot say whether it was ever affame. The stair north of Morgan's store was partly burned. There was a door opening from these stairs to Hart's apartments, but those stairs were not used by Hart to enter his house-nor did he have any control over those stairs.

Joseph D. Smith testified:

I am an insurance agent; have been for about nine years. On the 16th of February, 1886, some one told me that Morgan's store, which I had insured, had been greatly wrecked by an explosion. I went there and found it as it had been described. The steps on the south side of Morgan's store had been blown away; they were lying about where one of Morgan's counters had been. On the north side the stairs were burned so much that I did not think it safe to enter the house by them. Saw no fire on the steps on the south side of the store. The partition between Morgan's store and Mrs. Strock's was blown down. Have known Morgan since 1885. I issued the policy exhibited insuring his stock of goods for $800. When he made application for the insurance he wanted insurance to the amount of $1,200, at least; but upon examining his stock I thought $800 enough to take upon his stock. When I went to his store on the morning of the fire I examined his goods. The goods saved footed up about $280. The damage on these goods was about $100. I don't know how much was consumed, but after my ex-amination of the store I think that $20 would cover the goods totally lost. I went

We came back to Wilmington. after seeing his brother, and on our arrival here we were met at the depot by Mr. Smith, who told us that the store was burned. I told other parties about the matter before Morgan was arrested. J. D. Kerr, of Pender county, the next witness, knew the prisoner. Saw him at Burgaw the morning after the fire; knew Moses: saw them together; heard Moses make a statement in regard to the fire; Moses said that Morgan set fire to the store that was burned; the particulars were corroborative of the statement made by Moses on the witness stand. Kerr said also that Moses said that Morgan had made a proposition to him (Moses) to burn Newkirk's bridge; that the county would have to rebuild it and that the money spent would increase their trade. Moses had a suit against Morgan in Sampson county. Heard them abuse each other about a settlement of their business at Newkirk's bridge. The suit was brought after the conversation had with Moses, when the latter accused Morgan of setting fire to the store.

J. R. Newkirk testified :

I am acquainted with Moses. The first time I ever saw him he told me the story of Morgan's having burned the store. The way he came to speak of it was this: I said to him that Morgan would probably restock his store at Newkirk's bridge as he had a big insurance on the burnt store. Moses said that Morgan would never get that insurance money; that he had better not say anything else about it, as he had burnt his store. Moses told me this three months before Morgan's arrest-and he told it pub-

He said, "they've tried to burn me out, and now they've blown me up."
