Cotton crop in sight, 6,300,452 bales. Three men drift in a boat six days without food or water, were picked up at sea by the league Kate C. Maguire. Some Northern exchange says that both the eagle and the crow live for 100 years.

Maj. P. M. Hale entered the class of 1843 and was graduated in 1849 from the University.

A report from Africa is that the natives have attacked the British and French settlements.

Madame Janauschek has brought suit for $20,000 damages against the hotel for the breaking of her arm by a fall.

Premier Rouvier is said to be forced to humor the Monarchists in the French Chamber of Deputies in order to secure a working majority.

We find in the graduating class at West Point from North Carolina, Richmond P. Davis and Charles Gerhardt. From South Carolina, John M. Jenkins and Thomas Q. Donaldson, Jr., and from Virginia, John A. Hartman, Robert G. Paxton and Wirt Robinson.

Pennsylvania certainly owes a monument to William Penn. He begged the territory from the Indians without shedding blood or spending money. William was a peaceful man, and very clever at a bargain. See the issue of the 15th.

The expression "hogged" is new to the expressive. With the Red Men "hog" means to die. But "hogged" is not a parlor word.

The Augusta Chronicle points to instances to show how some people will not be satisfied with the situation. It says:

Some people are hard to please. A white man is kicking before the late State Commission because he was refused the privilege of riding in a negro car and a negro is asking damages because he was not allowed to travel in the white people's car.

We went to the charming and most creditable entertainment on Friday night at the Tilston School and did not see our editorial proof. In writing we made a blunder that was precisely the opposite of what we purposed to say relative to the health record of Wilmington for May. We meant to say the death rate was low—only 12.05 in the 1,000 inhabitants upon a basis of 24,000 population.

There is talk of a new railroad from Oxford to Clarksville, Va., and from Oxford to Danville, Va. The latter is to connect the Raleigh and Gaston railroad at Henderson with Danville by way of Oxford. The road from Henderson to Oxford is the best paying road in the State for its length, 12 miles. The Danville Register says:

"As to the outlet for the Danville and New River and its western connections, it stretches out so far and wide that I shall not try to take it in. They would reach Norfolk just as near or nearer than by the Danville and Atlantic."

State Gleanings.

Graham Gleaner: From all sections of the county we hear good reports for abundant grain crops. The outlook is very encouraging.

Pittsboro Record: Notwithstanding the reduction made by the last Legislature in the price of marriage licenses fewer of them were issued in this county last month than almost ever before—only two to whites and one to a colored.

Tarboro Southerner: While out riding Saturday with his wife near Mr. Geo. L. Wimberly's, Dr. R. H. Spight received some very painful if not serious injuries by being thrown from his buggy. His wife was thrown out and bruised about the neck and face, but the buggy fell on Dr. Spight. Fortunately no bones were broken, but his hip was badly bruised. Monday he was reported as doing very well. He is confined to his bed.

Henderson Gold Leaf: We venture the assertion that Vance county now has one of the best and safest jails in the State. It is small, it is true, but adequate to all necessary purposes, and with the patent steel cells is absolutely safe and non-destructible. It is well ventilated and its sanitary condition is near perfect as an institution of its kind can be. The arrangements for heating and making it comfortable in winter are also good.

Dr. Rosser is at Louisville by sea from the Times. A negro girl senseless with a base ball, but the other day. She is badly hurt, we learn. We hear it rumored that a newspaper is soon to be started at Tosino. Company A., of the third North Carolina Regiment, State Troops, held a pleasant reunion at Snow Hill, on Wednesday. There was an enthusiastic gathering. Speeches were made by Capt. Swift Galloway, Dr. W. J. Jones, Dr. W. T. Ennett and others.

CAROLINA BEACH.

Its Beauties, Its Uses, Its Advantages. Fifteen miles from this city on the banks of the ocean, is situated the above resort which is daily, rapidly, and deservedly growing in popular favor.

Stepping aboard the Passport at her wharf at market dock you soon find yourself gliding down the Cape Fear and enjoying the breeze as it fans the cheek and tumbles the hair. Place after place of interest is passed, and the sights one sees along the banks of the river are of such variety as to make the trip a charm in itself. One hour is hardly spent on the steamer when there is a cessation of the monotonous throbbings of the engine and the boat moves slowly to Harper's Pier, where the pleasure seekers disembark to find in readiness a train of cars awaiting to carry them to their destination. These cars are made after the manner of cars used at Coney Island, and are convenient and commodious. A ride of five or six minutes through a level and interesting country, filled with flowers and green shrubbery, brings you at full view of the ocean and lands you at what is destined to be the most popular resort on the coast, Carolina Beach!

Evidences of thrift and industry are seen on every hand. Out of the sand houses have arisen, and a spacious pavilion, with smooth floors which invite the dancer, stands ready for the reception of guests. Bathing houses, conveniently situated, are erected, and a surf which beggars description rolls and tosses at your feet. The shore is hard and as level as a ball room floor, and so gentle and sloping is the incline that the swimmer can easily and without danger penetrate beyond the breakers, and on the slow and graceful curves of the advancing waves drive the dull cares of everyday life away. Opposite the beach are wrecks of blockaders, and he who is fortunate enough to find a day so calm as to allow him to reach them, will find the merriest sport with hook and line and sheepshead that the Atlantic coast produces; and just beyond the wrecks are the far famed blackfish grounds, whose reputation for numberless fish has enticed many landmen to visit them, but who have paid for their cupidity by rendering their account to old ocean and their tribute to the fish.

Good News for Fishermen.

Recent arrivals of coastwise vessels at Southern ports report an immense school of mackerel coming South. Capt. Steelman of the schooner Susan B. Roy, at Savannah from Norfolk, passed through the school a short distance south of Cape Lookout on May 28th. On that day, Capt. Steelman says, about 11 o'clock in the morning, off Cape Lookout, with light southwest winds, the vessel ran into an immense school of sharks in seventeen fathoms of water. The sharks measured from three to eight feet in length. They were as thick as they possibly could be and could be seen as far as the eye could reach. The schooner ran through them for fully an hour, making only about three miles.

After leaving the sharks the vessel ran into a tremendous field of mackerel and sailed through them for four hours. The crew turned fishermen and caught 180 fine mackerel with a common cotton line over the vessel's stern. Capt. Steelman says it was the longest school of mackerel that he has ever seen, and all the more remarkable as he had never before seen them in Southern waters. They were never before known to go south of Body's Island. There has been a scarcity of mackerel in the regular fishing grounds in Northern waters during the past season. This school may furnish an opportunity for some enterprising fishermen to secure ship loads of fish.
