MORNING EDITION. OUTLINES.

Charles B. Duffield, who died a few days ago at Asheville. He was a Marylander. It says: "Well born, well reared, well educated, and above all a thoroughly good man, he made friends for himself wherever he went."

The reported negro insurrection in Laurens county, S. C., is more noise than reality. A special to the Charleston News & Courier says there is no danger of an outbreak.

Gen. Averill has been interviewed since his return to the North. He gives a pleasant account of his trip to Staunton, Va., and his reception, and is exceedingly well pleased at what he saw and heard.

"I beat anything I ever saw or read about the city that I have ever seen. The city was thronged with people, and the three principal streets were so densely packed that vehicles could not move about in them."

There is a rumor in Virginia that Jeter Phillips was not hanged until he was dead, but is still alive. Dr. Lafferty says in the Richmond Christian Advocate:

"I had been in the region where the man was hanged, Jeter Phillips, lived, or rather his father resided. He was hung in Richmond more than a decade ago. There are a number of people in the vicinity who do not believe he was hung till dead."

By the decision of the Supreme Court, of Georgia, the negress Amanda Dixon, gets property worth $10,000 left her by David Dixon, the famous farmer. Amanda was his child.

THE MORNING STAR

VOL. XL--NO. 81.

WILMINGTON, N. C., FRIDAY, JUNE 24, 1887.

WHOLE NO. 6475

THE CITY.
