PERSONAL.

Capt. John Barry, Superintendent of the Bishopville, S. C., railroad, is in the city.

Capt. T. C. McIlhenny, jr., conductor on the Savannah, Florida and Western railroad, is here on a short visit to relatives and friends.

The friends of Col. Wm. P. Craighill regret to hear that his father, Mr. Wm. N. Craighill, is dead.

The large circle of friends and acquaintances of Mr. W. H. McFarlane will be glad to learn that his health has greatly improved during his trip to Weldon, North Carolina.

Mr. H. C. Twining, the polite and efficient Baggage Agent of the Atlantic Coast Line, has just returned from a vacation jaunt, much improved in health, and is now once again ready to check your trunks either to Florida resorts or to the North Pole.

We regret to hear that the health of Mr. J. W. Thompson, now in Charlotte, is still feeble. Since the attack of paralysis he had in July he has been unable to move about without assistance.

The Saratogian of September 4 thus refers to a prominent citizen of Wilmington: "One of the solid men, physically, mentally and financially, who find much comfort and recuperation from business wear by an annual stay in Saratoga, is Mr. R. R. Bridgers, of North Carolina, president of the Wilmington and Weldon and the Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta railroads, comprising two trunk lines of about 400 miles, with nearly 300 miles of laterals.

Gen. Lee's accomplished daughter, Mary Custis, is in London. She is a great traveller.

Josephine McElroy.

Josephine McElroy alias Rose Nesbitt, the colored washerwoman who absconded two weeks ago, and was subsequently arrested in New York and brought back to this city, arriving last Friday night, was arraigned before Mayor Fowler yesterday afternoon at the City Hall, charged with embezzlement of clothing belonging to Mr. C. C. Covington. At the conclusion of the hearing she was committed to jail, in default of $200 bail.

The witnesses in attendance at the hearing were Mr. and Mrs. Covington, Mr. De Lancey Evans, and Mrs. Ward. They all identified Josephine as the woman to whom they had given clothes to wash that they never received. Mr. Covington had a list of 175 pieces that she had carried off. A large trunk that the woman took with her to New York and which was brought back by officer Skipper, was unlocked and its contents spread upon a table in the court room. The trunk was filled to its utmost capacity and nearly every article in it was identified either as the property of Mr. Covington or Mrs. Ward.

This thieving washerwoman, who has created a decided sensation in domestic circles, is a small, rather delicate-looking mulatto, about twenty-five years of age, and of quiet demeanor. In reply to a question, whether she had anything to say, she answered "no," and when asked why she carried the clothes away with her, said that she had secured a situation in New York after she had taken the clothes to wash and she did not want to return them.

The woman's little girl, a child about three years of age, was seated on her knee during the trial, munching an apple. After her committal to jail was ordered, a number of colored women made application for the child, but the sheriff decided to wait until Monday before determining the matter. The other child, a boy of five or six years, has been placed with a colored man named Haynes.

Under the head "A Nut for Cotton Men to Crack," the Charleston News and Courier prints the following: "I tell you what it is," said a local official of the Atlantic Coast Line to a reporter for the News and Courier, yesterday, "Wilmington is going to push Charleston mighty close for cotton this year. As things stand at present, she is drawing cotton from right under Charleston's nose, and it is not railroad discrimination that's doing it, either. She has sent her cotton buyers over to North Carolina, and they are now at work on Charleston's stamping grounds, buying cotton which ought to come here, and shipping it to Wilmington."

As a matter of fact, to my knowledge, Wilmington has at the present time two cotton buyers stationed at Bishopville, who are buying cotton for Wilmington shippers, and yet there is not a single buyer there from Charleston, although Bishopville belongs properly to our district. Wilmington has cotton buyers at Florence, Manning, Timmonsville and other important cotton centres, and a great deal of the cotton from that section is going to Wilmington instead of coming to Charleston, just simply because Wilmington has people there to look after her interests and Charleston has not."

Deputy Collector Myers made a raid upon the illicit distilleries reported as being in operation in Pender county, as "published exclusively in the" STAR last Friday. The Deputy Collector went up Friday evening accompanied by officer Niek Carr, and Deputy U. S. Marshal Bunting. The latter returned yesterday afternoon with two prisoners—Wiley Stokes and Hines, and reported finding a still, which was seized, at Bone Taylor's place near Rocky Point. Deputy Marshal Bunting came in on the freight train in the afternoon and the Deputy Collector and officer Carr arrived later by private conveyance, with one prisoner—a white man. All the prisoners—four in number, including Taylor, previously arrested—are lodged in the county jail. The cases against them will probably be investigated next Tuesday before U. S. Commissioner Gardner. It is claimed by the alleged illicit distillers, that no liquor was made, although arrangements had been made to begin.

An increase of 4,486 bales of cotton in the first ten days of September, over receipts for the same time last year makes a pretty good showing for Wilmington. The figures are, 4,071 bales, against 336 last year. The receipts yesterday alone were 1,273 bales.

The exports so far this month amount to 2,984 bales—all domestic. The stock here is 3,392 bales, against 403 bales at the same time last year.
