character that underlies, for

"Our thoughts, our morals, our most fixed beltef

Are consequences of our place of birth." Nothing is truer than that. To understand and appraise properly the people of North Carolina, you must be of them and with them.

The short chapters into which the author has divided her work are of advantage to the class for which it is specially prepared. It is particularly interesting in the early and more romantic period when the men from England and men from other countries were forming the Commonwealth. The last part-that which concerns Reconstruction in North Carolina, including the Ku Klux

time and Holden's Despotism, is full of interest and should be read by all men who vote and especially by inchoate legislators who are swift to vote for removing the political disabilities under which the broken despot rests. We suggest that all electors who can read shall take up this account of the Holden reign and see for themselves just how he bore himself and why it was he was broken of office and forever debarred from holding office in North Carolina. Mrs. Spencer's account of what happened is clear and correct, we think, in every parti cular, and she has performed a most worthy task in giving such a lucid, forceful, truthful history of the dark est and saddest times in the history of our people.

As we read we noted here and there a few slips of the pen. On the first page the area of the State is far too small, as she will see by examining the authorities. We suppose that she rejects the fact of what is known as the Mecklenburg Declaration. She is proud of the Resolu-historic account that shall be accurate | James Parish-in Wilmington. And we have no doubt in other towns there were libraries and lyceums. Mrs. Spencer is in error, we think, > in supposing there were two daily papers published in the State as early as 1850. We think her estimate, 150,000, of troops furnished by the State to the Confederacy, excessive.

The Roster is known to be full of errors, the names of many soldiers appearing in two or three places. Probably 120,000 would be a fair esti mate. North Carolina in 1860 only polled 112,500 votes. We like the spelling of the book-it is English and not Websterian. We cannot say that we specially take to some of the verse at the end of some chapters.

SHORT STOPS.

The death of Justice Stanley Matthews need not have surprised any one, as his low condition of health had been previously reported in the public prints. He was born in Ohio, and was about 65 years of age. He went on the Bench in 1881. He was a man of decided ability and accomplishments. He was damaged in reputation by his connection with the rape of Louisiana and Florida in get hold of the political teat, not being satisfied with doing nothing on good pay. The Washington correspondent of the New York Times 8878:

There has been a good deal of discussion since the change of the Administration as to whether or not such officers can legally hold any other office under the Government. Parker vs. Sutton et al. An endorser of an accommodation paper is liable notwithstanding the person purchasing the same knew that a verbal understanding between the endorser and maker that the note was to be used at a particular time had not been observed.

Frederick vs. Williams. A mortgagee who buys at his own sale and enters is in adverse possession, and the statute of limitations will after ten years protect him.

When the statute begins to run nothing will stop it. It is not suspended by the infancy of the heir, after it begins to run in the lifetime of the ancestor.

Tucker vs. Tucker.

A homestead laid off to the debtoi n his lifetime, or, when he leaves no children, to his widow, after his death, canno' be divested in favor of the heir by the release or extinguishment of the debts of the deceased husband; but it shall continue as a homestead for the widow during her widowhood.

The heir cannot by paying of the debts divest the homestead and leave the widow only the right of dower. Adrian vs. McCaskill.

Endorsers of negotiable instruments are liable in the order of their endorsements, and no prior endorser can look to a subsequent endorser. And where a prior endorser subsequently becomes the owner of the note he is restored to his original position, and a purchaser from him with | tions. notice, stands in his shoes, the subsequent endorsers not being liable to him. The rule that a holder may complete a bank endorsement does not apply to enable a wrong or fraud to be worked.

One who takes an accommation paper after maturity takes it subject to all equities. The purchasers from the payee who is an endorser, there being other endorsements, after the maturity of the paper, cannot hold the subsequent endorsee.

Woody vs. Brooks. While the statute of limitations bars actions on the bond of the administrator after six years from the of the Republicans by condemning everything done by their opponents, whether

Our people have become too dependent upon the negro. We employ them when we should do the work ourselves. We can point out several instances of parties who run a one horse crop who hire a buck negro to do the work while they loaf around town five days out of seven, when they should be at home at work. This is what keeps our country so poor. The time has come when every man must work, and until this is done our country must remain poor The negro problem is being solved -Rocky Mount Phania.

'FIRST STEPS IN NORTH CAROLI NA BISTORY."

"Wengongratulate Mis. Spencer and her publishers upon the success attending the first volume of "North Carolina Historical Series." We hope if the "First Steps in North Carolina History" is an carnest of what is to follow that the series may be extended through at least two other additional volumes. We have read nearly all of this very neat and attractive little volume of 272 pages with genuine interest, although it was in some sense to us threshing old straw. We expected a book of candor with partialities, written in neat, felicitous, correct English, and we are not disappointed. There is no other pen in North Carolina that could have written this clever book in just that way. It is full of opinion, full of wisdom, and with the womanly touch all through. We thank her quite sincerely for the good work she has done, and we hope her canning hand will not be idle, but that she may take other "Steps in North Carolina History." She moves on so steadily, so strongly, so wisely, chatting pleasantly as she advances, that we are constrained to say, and with a new reading, that one good turn deserves another.

The very attractive little volume, so handy, so neat, with its pretty back, and clear, open type and clean paper may be read by old heads as well as by the young. We have told the young women and men of "our" household that it is a pleasant and instructive book to read and we set them the example by giving precious hours to the very interesting story of dear old North Carolina. We like the whole thing hardly excepting the opinion about State Rights, with which we do not agree, and a statement of the beginning of the late war that is not written exactly as we would have preferred to see it written. We think the able author would have perhaps told that part of the story with a somewhat different shading if she had read Bledsoe's very masterful work entitled "Is Jeff Davis a Traitor ?" or the great arguments of Alex. Stephens and Jeffer- | society for the promotion of literary son Davis in their respective mastered that a Declaration was read and adopted at the first meeting held at Charlotte, but the document is lacking, having been burnt as Mr. Alexander stated in the note to the document published by his son in the Raleigh Register in 1819, but the note was suppressed. We note errors in the spelling of some prominent names, such as Stapley, Marphy, Whitwell Hill. We think the best authorities put the population of the colonies at not much above 2,500,000 when the war of Independence began. In her account of the war of 1812, no men tion is made of the greatest battle of the war, that of New Orleans, won on Southern soil by Southern soldiers. She says Andrew Jackson was born in Mecklenburg county. Ought it not to be Union? On page 187, we find among the great Judges John Henderson. It should be Leonard. By the way, the late Hon. Hugh Waddell, of this city, told us that the Legislature wished to put Chief Justice Henderson's eminent brother, Archibald, upon the Su preme Court Bench with him, but be declined, saying, that one of the family was enough. Judge Murphey says in his admirable address at the University that Archibald Hen derson was the model lawyer of the State of North Carolina. The late Chief Justice Pearson, who read law under Chief Justice Henderson, in one of his latest decisions says that the greatest reflective mind that ever sat on the Bench in this State, with the exception of Judge John Haywood, was the great lawyer of Granville, Judge Henderson. We mention what is not generally known that the two great Hendersons are directly descended from Lord Keeling, a British nobleman. In the mention of officers from North Carolina who distinguished themselves in Mexico two Lieutenants from Granville county are overlooked. One of these is especially mentioned by Gen. Taylor, in his official report of the battle of Buena Vista.

We think there are two or three slight errors on page 194, when the author speaks of there being no private libraries and not one lyceum or ing his great brain. improvement and taste in 1850. We were not barred from holding other Government officers. The act of March 30th 1868 provides that no officer on the active list chall hold any civil office, elective or ar pointive, or any diplomatic or consular office The act of March 3d, 1875, relating to retired officers, provides, however, that 'every officer now borne on the retired list shall be continued thereon ' notwithstanding the provisions of the act of 1868."

It is gratifying to us to see that Senators Vest and George and seve ral other Southern Senators are opposing with great vigor the appointment of the bitter partisan who edits the New York Tribune to the French Mission. The correspondent of the Times says of their opposition and the grounds of it:

"They said that Mr Reid had for years been au inveterate foe of the Southern States; that he had foully and malici usly misrepresented them; that through his pa per he had sought to poison the North and the West against the Southern people nd that, as a wicked and unforgiving partisan of the most unrelenting species, he could not fairly represent the whole country at Court of France and ought not and could be confirmed by the help of the Senators whose people he had so vilely traduced As if this was not enough, the Kansas Senators both attacked the nomination expressing surprise that the Committee on Foreign Relations had so far disregarded the requirements of the position as to ask the Senate to confirm Mr. Reid Mr. Hawley is also reported as having added his voice to the opposition, while Mr. Evarts was understood in the speech that he made to offer a very serious remonstrance to the appointment sent in by the President. Mr. Sherman, who did not report the nomination, had nothing to say.

The Democratic Senators say that there is scarcely one of them who has not been foully abused by this dirty tool of Republicanism. He is indeed a fine specimen of an American diplomat to send abroad. We hope the three Republicans will stand up against his confirmation.

Boodle Wanamaker is trying to do three kinds of very important labor, to run the great Postal Department of this vast country; to oversee and manage his huge business establishment in Philadelphia, and every Sun day to conduct the biggest Sabbath School on the continent. This is the work for at least two big-headed men. He is well provided with private secretaries and has a private wire connected with his business of fice in Philadelphia. We suppose that after running his big store so long he thinks he can take in as small an office as the Postal Department of almost a continent without over-tax-

1885, when he ruled that retired officers | auditing of the fical accounts, there is no limitation on the right of the next of kin to sue for his distributive share, as to that the administrator being the trustee of an express trust. In an action for an account where there is do controversy as to the facts, but the defence turns on a question of law, it ought to be decided by the court before a reference is made to state the account.

> The Hight frack N. Y. World, Ind. Dem.

The outbreak of two or three Southern journals, nominally D-mooratic, against "the Carlisles and the Millses," coupled with a call for "new leadership" for the Democratic party, is either cowardly or disingenuous.

To deny or to abaudon the principles of a party because it is defeated by a scratch, though in an actual maority in the country, is poltroonery in politics. To attempt to regain power by false pretenses or by going over to the enemy's camp, is dishonest as well as cowardly.

If the Democratic party be not in direct antagonism with the Republi can party on the question of the tariff and taxation it has no excuse for being The Democratic party is a low tariff party. From Jefferson to Tilden and Cleveland it has, without deviation, declared itself opposed to a tariff for bounties and to taxation for a surplus. The Republican party, as the Senate bill proves, believes in "reforming" the tariff up. The Democratic party be, lieves in reforming it down.

Speaker Carlisle and Mr. Mille have stood manfully for the Democratic principle and policy-not always wisely but resolutely and honestly. It will triumph next time if the campaign education shall proceed at the same rate and with the same object lessons in the effect of "Protection" which are now observable.

Forten years after the war the Democratic party tried the policy of following four years in the rear of the Republicans and crying "We Too!" It is not likely to adopt that stupid and losing game now.

> Opposed to Heid. Alexandria Gazette.

Some of the Democratic Senator are considering the advisability of opposing the confirmation of the nomination of Mr. Whitelaw Reid, editor of the New York Tribune, as Minister to France. They say there is hardly a Democratic member of the Senate from the South whom Mr. Reid has not abused in his newspaper, and whose right to a seat in the Senate he has not denied, and that

NEW YORK, March 23 - The Sun's review of the cotton market to-day says: Cotton futures opened a little depressed under the decline at Liverpool, but made a quick recovery when it became apparent that the receipts at the ports were small, with stocks at the ports more than 100,000 bales less than one year ago, and the close was steady.
