WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 17,1889

SPOILS, NOT PRINCIPLE.

There was a time when the Republican party, sectional in its ori gin, and as sectional to-day as it was in its origin, could lay claim to some principle. Its founders had a deadly antipathy to slavery, while they denied with emphasis that interference with slavery in the States was a part of their policy. Non-extension of slavery into the territories was the fundamental plank upon which they fought, upon which the party was based, the principle upon which they based their political creed, and on which they challenged discussion and gave gage of battle It was a principle with the men who severed their connection with the old parties and formed the new. Most of them were honest and thoroughly in earnest. On that issue they roused this country up from one end to the other, and finally by persistent agritation, and appeals to sectional passion and sectional prejudice they won the victory of the ballots over a divided enemy and gained possession of the government. From the day it got control of the government to the present day it has been a party of spoils and not of principle. The party as it stands before the world to-day is a party of spoils, where the spoils loom up so boldly as to overshadow everything else.

There are two classes of spoilsspoils of office and spoils of legislation, the former insignificant compared to the latter. When there are a hundred thousand offices to fill it is not a matter of surprise that there should be considerable of a scramble and a good deal of unseemly behavior. Whatever party may be in power while there is so much patronago within its gift there always will be a contest over the offices to be given, but it is notorious that the Republican party has a greater number of men who expect to live on the Government when the party is in power than any other party this country hая отог seen.

To live by office has become to a great extent a matter of education with them. In the twenty-four years in which they held control of the Federal government up to the time of Cleveland, with the control of the patronage of all the departments of the government, with the Senate and the greater part of the time the lower House of Congress in their possession, office became the ruling passion and a generation grew up under this influence. It became a kind of a family affair, and Preedents, members of Cabinets, Army officers, Navy officers, Senators, members of the House of Representatives, and scores of others occupying the higher positions in the respective departments whom they billeted upon the government. Thousands of people have thus lived upon the government for years, who would starve to death if they were turned adrift and were compelled to earn a living in any other way.

The present administration is following up on this line with its eye quite as steadily fixed upon the spoils as any of its predecessors. Among the first to be appointed to place were relatives of the President, Vice President, Cabinet officers, Senators, Representatives in the lower House, and the higher officers in the various departments, who were snugly provided for before outsiders get a chance at the orib. Never in the history of the party has the rage for spoils been as strong nor as widespread as it has been under this administration, and never have the spoils been so distributed for the benefit of the connections of the distributors as they have been under this administration. Nepotism, which has characterized to a greater or less extent all Republican administrations, has been the predominating characteristic of this.

For the legislative spoils, which rob the people of countless millions compared with which the money paid annually to the office-holders is insignificent, look at the land grants, the mail contracts, the government building contracts, contracts for army and navy supplies, for ship building, for Indian supplies, protective tariffs, combines, &c., all of which have at one time or another robbed the people out of millions, a robbery made possible only by favoring legislation or the connivance of those entrusted with the making or the execution of the laws. These are the big spoils grabbers, and between the big and the little the people of this country have been and are plundered more shamelessly than any people on the civilized globe ever have been or are. While they tolerate a party whose corner stone is spoils they must expect to be plundered.

STATE TOPICS.

There have been some remarkably good grain yields in North Carolina this year, giving evidence enough that with proper effort and culture North Carolina may rank with the best of grain growing States. We have already noted some remarkably large yields of wheat. The Charlotte News states that the steam thrasher, which was in operation for two days and a haif on the Wadsworth farm a couple of miles from Charlotte, thrashed 3,827 bushels of wheat, oats and rye. In addition to this immense crops of clover and timothy have been cut from this farm this year. We think it embraces about two hundred acres, a large part of which is under grass and corn. When such a farm, which not many years ago was classed as old field, yields in addition to large crops of grass and corn, this amount of wheat, oats and rye, it shows what can be done with North Carolina soil under fair and intelligent treatment. In Montgomery county, which does not rank amongst our best wheat growing counties, Alexander Russell reaped from six bushels sown 222 bushels, 37 bushels to the one sown. We repeat, that with such facts before us North Carolina need not import a bushel of grain from other States if our farmers give that attention to grain culture which they should.

The peach crop in the central counties of this State is enormous this year, in some counties said to be the largest ever known. In the early part of the season large quantities were shipped North, where the shippers realized handsome prices, but not withstanding the fact that the railroads largely increased the facilities for prompt handling and rapid transportation, still at some of the shipping points the rush and supply was so great, that much of the fruit had to be held from twelve to twenty-four hours for want of cars. There is no demand in Northern markets for late peaches, after the Maryland and Delaware crops come in. The home peach growers, to make the crop pay should be prepared to dry or can the late peach. With canneries in the towns and evaporators in the country the bulk of the peach, as well as apple crop would be preserved in a shape to bring paying prices.

MINOR MENTION.

Some of the leading pegroes of Alabama are beginning to give expression to their indignation at the treatment of the negroes of the South by the Harrison administration. The Birmingham Courier, had their relatives and connections which is owned and edited by color- the siege of Paris he left that city to ed men, is vigorous in 1ts denunciation, and warns Mr. Harrison that the negroes have rights which even a President of the United States must respect, and intimates that the self-respecting negroes of the South will take occasion to remind him of this in 1892. They are not satisfied with a few small offices, but think they are entitled to some more substantial and honorable recognition. But Mr. Harrison is pursuing exactly the same course with the "man and brother" which the Republican party has pursued all along.

The reported dissatisfaction at the way in which the fund for the relief of the Johnstown sufferers has been handled and distributed by the committees appointed by Governor Beayer, has culminated in a big mass meeting at Johnstown, in which speeches were made and resolutions adopted denouncing the methods pursued and condemning Gov. Beaver for the appointments made on the commission. It was stated that it cost more than twenty-five per cent, of the gross amount of the fund to distribute the goods under the methods employed, and it was further asserted that the statement attributed to Gov. Beaver, that a million and a half of dollars had already been distributed, had no foundation in fact. A suspicion prevails that the fund has not been honestly

The President has taken up his summer quarters at Deer Park, Maryland, where he will be relieved for a while at least from the importunities of office seekers. In the meantime brother Wanamaker will continue wielding the ax in the postoffice department, and Corporal Tan ner will still swing around the circle, raid the surplus as vigorously as he can, and furnish the chin music for the pensioners and the G. A. R., especially for the pensioners whose votes are an important factor in elec-

CURRENT COMMENT.

- The irregularities of the mail service in the Southern portion of the Union are deserving the rough criticism they are receiving at the hands of the press. Not only the newspapers suffer great inconvenience and often loss by these irre gularities but private parties are subjected to great annoyance. The service on the Southwestern mail routes needs a complete overhauling and reorganization. - Knoxville Tribune, Dem. - The Interior Department sent Cornelius McBride to Oklahoma as a special agent to be present at the opening of the district and to report concerning the enforcement of the law, and the St. Louis Republic now states that he is to be retired from office because in his report he told the truth as to the violation of the law by certain officers of the government and other person who have since been appointed to office. -New York Times, Ind.

- It is already reported from Petersburg that the recalcitrant Mahoneites are creeping humbly back to the footstool of the Boss. The smartest ones come quickly without standing on the order of their coming, but the stubborn ones sulk for a while before undertaking the ordeal of humiliation. - Richmond Times, Dem.

Large Quantities of Silver, Gold, and Bank Notes Stored Away. Chambers Journal

It has been remarked generally that thrifty people like the French, Swiss, Belgians and Dutch hoard coin more than the Scotch and English. The Irish were addicted to hoarding bank-notes, but the practice prevailed in former years more than now. In Italy large quantities of gold and silver were hoarded from 1862 to 1869, because paper money was then declared legal-tender, or forced on the country. In 1881-'83 the gold standard was established in Italy, and the gold necessary to effect this change was drawn to a great extent from hoards. In France a great deal of Loarding has existed for a long time, especially among the peasantry, who are the most parsimonious in Europe. Many causes have contributed to the creamarket is easily overstocked, so that | tion of this habit, not the least being the insecurity arising from the unsettled forms of government in France. Lately, however, these hordes have been extensively drawn on in connection with the payment, at the close of the Franco-German war, of the French indemnity of £80,000,000. Of this amount one-half was paid out of Freuch hoards. An ex-Governor of the Bank of England, in his evidence before the Bimetalism Commission, estimates the contributions from hoards as equal to two-thirds of the amount of the indemnity. In illustration of peasant hoarding he related how one of the leading French

bankers told him that at the time of

go and look at his estate in the neighborhood. He went to a peasant and told him that he had just come out to look after his affairs, and that he was very anxious to pay his people their wages, but that under the circumstances he had no money. The peasant said: "If 40,000f. (£1,600) are any good to you, I have got them in a stocking under my bed, and I will go and fetch them." They were in gold coin. These hoards the French Government wisely attracted by offering inducements to the peasant classes in the way of preferential allotment of the rentes, or through premium on the price paid. Hoards are not common in Germany, but there is a large war heard lying at Juliusthurn, in Spandan, belonging to the Government of 120,000,000 marks, or £6,000,000, which goes under the name of the German Empire war treasure.

LEPERS IN INDIA. hey Are Common and They Go About

the Country Begging. "I do not think," said a man who has passed a quarter of a century in India, "that the report of the death of a Brigadier-General of the Enghah army in Hindoostan of leprosy is to be relied upon. I suppose there are many kinds of leprosy, and some of it, like the disease spoken of in the bible, may be very infectious. Certainly Father Damien died of leprosy in Molokai, communicated to him by the lepers around him. But lepers are very common in India, especially in the central and northwestern provinces, and, though every one tries to keep them as far from him as possible, nobody has the slightest fear of being inoculated with the disorder. It seems to be almost entirely confined to the natives, and they usually make their living by it. They are all beggars and ride about on small ponies soliciting alms.

"The doors of the Indian bungalows are always open, and when a sahib looks up from his breakfast and sees one of these horsemen sitting in his saddle, almost naked and looking indescribably wretched as he holds out his hand in silent supplication, he is apt to be willing to part with a coin to induce his unwelcome visitor to pass on. In fact, the leper won't go until he receives something. II. might, I suppose, be driven away with s stick, but nobody cares to flagllate him and he makes a good deal of money. I nevar saw a white man with the disease, though I believe there are a few isolated cases. It is not necessarily fatal, and lepers who looked as though they must soon die of old age have told me that they were born with it."
