all in one, his comfort and solacewhen he can't do any better-is that, notwithstanding the patriotic service it has rendered, to be ignored, too, to be treated with silent contempt because there are are no great moving armies to be fed? Does this New York bean breeder behold the beauties, appreciate the excellence, the solid worth and far-reaching influence of the army bean, and ask for it, the protection to which it is so eminently entitled? We doubt it. Our opinion is that the only bean he takes a scintilla of interest in is the aristocratic bean which supplies the raw material for the Boston family dish, the Boston baked bean, of worldwide renown, and that he is endeav oring under sneaking pretence of taking a patriotic interest in the bean to take a selfish and cruel advantage of the Bostonian, if he is not inspired by deliberate, cold-blooded malice, in this scheming effort to cut off the Canadian source of supply, and compel the Boston bean devotee to come to him as a supplicant aud plank down fifty cents a bushel more for the beans wherewith to make and enjoy his accustomed bake.

Wait till the echoes reverberate from Boston. If she don't get up on her tip-toes, rise to the full altitude of the emergency, and declaim in thunderous tones her righteous indignation at this bold assault, this plunder inspired plot to corner the bean business, the Bostonians of to-day are not the self-asserting descendants of the men who kicked against a little tea tax a century ago, but are simply tame, submissive, degenerate bean eaters to submit in silence to the tribute demanded by this New York bean boomer. If Boston would retain the respect of mankind, she must be equal to the emergency, fill her stocking with sand, brace herself and smite this bean tyrant a mighty blow. This is Boston's fight, and Boston's opportunity to immortalize herself again.

ing themselves against it by daily doses of quinine. If they had to pay from $3.50 to $5 an ounce for it as they did before the repeal of the tariff duty on it, instead of 50 or 60 cents as they do now, they would have found the grip a somewhat more costly visitor. This is what makes the cheek of those Philadelphia quinine makers stand out in the colossal proportions which it does. But cheek is one of the endowments and distinguishing features of the average protectionist.

When Republican journals desire to hit Hon. John G. Carlisle hard they refer to him as a friend of the whiskey trust, which they represent as a Kentucky institution, when the fact is that the trust has its headquarters in the good Republican State of Illinois, in the city of Peoria, one of the greatest, if not the greatest whiskey distilling town in the United States; and the further fact has been shown by a Congressional committee appointed to investigate the whiskey trust that Kentucky is one of the few States which engage in the distilling business to any extent where the business is not controlled by the trust. The whiskey trust, like all the other trusts, is of Republican paternity, and belongs to the Republican party.

STATE TOPICS.

There is war brewing in the Republican camp of the 5th district of this State, which indicates a cat and a parrot time before the next political campaign opens. There are, as there have been for some years, two factions in that district which hate each other as the devil is said to hate holy water. They are never more congenially occupied than when knifing each other, and the only time when they can be got to sit together in anything like apparent amity, is when the fascinating scent of

Whether this demand for bean prote turn applies especially to any particular member of the bean family, or is sufficiently comprehensive in its scope to embrace the whole connection, we are left in harrassing doubt, but if it is not there is a discourteous discrimination in favor of some pet bean which does cruel injustice to the other respectable membert of that distinguished fraternity who are entitled to as much consideration, and whose services to the country are quite as much entitled to recognition

How about the castor bean, for instance. Is it to be entirely ignored, treated as a nonentity, and left to the tender mercies of the foreign pauper? Is it not a native product worthy of respect and paterproudly, in the full vigor of luxuriant the vast possibilities that are centred in it if it had half a chance? MINOR MENTION.

Republicanism in Florida is showing up handsomely. It has been charged and thoroughly established that U. S. Marshal Mizell wrote a letter to one of his deputies named pear in the role of protector of culprits and the sneaking intimator of another forgery when the criminat-

When Senator Edmunds in his effort, which by a strict party vote proved successful, to prevent the investigation of the conduct of United States Attorney Chambers of Indiana, in the Dudley matter, insinuated that probably the "blocks-of-five" letter was a forgery, the following telegram from Indianapolis was sent to him:

We will pay Col. Dudley $1,000 if he will come to Indianapolis and swear that he is not the author of the letter which you suggested in the Senate to-day was a forgery. This offer has been open since Nov. 1, 1888, but has not been accepted. -Indianapolis Sentinel.

Senator Edmunds knew when he indirectly and meanly tried to make the impression that the letter was a forgery, as well as he knows that he is baldheaded, that it was not a forgery. He knew, what every other nal care? Does it not lift its head reader of newspapers in the United States knows, that Dudley has not fecundity and give us to understand | dared to go into the New York courts, to which he had been repeatedly summoned, to prosecute the suits for libel which he instituted before the election against several papers in New York city for publishing that letter, and he knows, too, that on the day when Dudley was in Indianapolis under the shielding arm of the United States District Attorney, the Indianapolis Sentinel republished the letter and dared Dudley to sue it for libel. He knew this and this makes his espousal of Dudley's cause and his

But Brower the little boss now, who is ladling out the soup and as he is giving it all to his own crowd and not a drop to the other fellows here is where the trouble comes in and where the racket begins. The Winston Republican whose editor and friends have been mercilessly ignored and sat upon by Brower, in a lengthy editorial last week raises the war cry, from which we take it there will be some fun in the future for those who stand off and look on and whose scalps are not in peril.

One of the evidences of the indusrial interest in North Carolina, and also of industrial progress is shown in the numerous illustrated trade editions issued by the press in the different sections of the State, all of which tell well for the communities for which they speak, and some of which show marvellous progress. Years ago such papers occasionally appeared but now they are of such frequent occurence, as to have lost their virtue for novelty. While they show that the State is moving they show also that the newspaper men of the State are keeping up in the march and are doing their full share in the grand work of progress.

FIRE AT PLYMOUTH.

Correspondence Morning Star. PLYMOUTH, N. C., Jan. 10 .- A fire broke out about 2.30 p. m. to-day in this place, originating in a small shingle and grist mill on the upper part of Water street, which destroyed several buildings, a cotton gin owned by L. L. Newby and a large warehouse, owned by me. The wind shifting down the street, fire ignited the roofs of many of the buildings used as stores, which, however, were all extinguished by the town engine. Sawdust caught about a quarter of a mile from where the fire originated. and below the depot recently built for the Atlantic Coast Line, and was still burning to-night, but it is carefully watched.
