The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania was just rendered a decision in a case coming up from Pittsburgh, where a restaurant keeper brought an action against two men who took dinner in his house for $100 damages, where a restaurant keeper brought an action against two men who took dinner in his house for $100 damages, where a restaurant keeper brought an action against two men who took dinner in his house for $100 damages.

A petition has been sent to Congress praying that women be represented on the Board of Managers of the proposed World's Fair. In a world's fair there is no good reason why the fair of the world should not be recognized, especially as they will take no small hand (no reference here to Chicago women), in the exhibits made; but besides that if a woman hadn't backed Christopher and stood by him, we might not be talking so big about a World's Fair now.

A St. Louis lady says when she sees a man rise in a street car and give his seat to a female, she always concludes he is "a gallant Southerner, an actor, an artist or a newspaper man." This shows the force of association. In New York when a man does that the native Gothamites conclude he is just in fresh from some of the bucolic districts. That's one of the kinds of gallantry the average denizen of Gotham sits down upon.

The World's Fair is attracting a good deal of attention in certain sections of the country, and there will be a pretty lively tussle over it in Congress. The World's Fair is all right, but what the toiling masses of the American people are interested in is to have a fair show in the struggle for bread, and relief from some of the burdens imposed upon them by the monstrous protective tariff system which has been crushing them to the earth.

Aristocratic circles in Philadelphia have a new fad, the organization of societies for the protection of shop girls. The members of it refuse to trade with houses where the girls employed are not kindly treated and reasonably paid. This is an improvement on some of the aristocratic fads that are sometimes indulged in in Northern cities. The inventor of it is entitled to a blue ribbon.

Methylacetparatolendine is one of the French remedies for the grip. We suppose it is taken in broken doses. If that couldn't get away with the grip it might as well have full swing.

CONGRATULATIONS. Roxboro Courier. The WILMINGTON STAR has donned a new dress and is much improved in appearance. It bids fair to twinkle just as brightly as ever. Success to you Bro. Bernard.

Ashville Democrat. Our very excellent contemporary appears now with a complete outfit of new type, and, in appearance is greatly improved. The STAR is one of the oldest and best of our State papers, and is a credit to the South. May it live long and prosper.

Ashville Citizen. The WILMINGTON STAR has come out in a new dress from top to toe, and a very bright dress it is. It does not assume to make the STAR better, but it makes it brighter, just as the dimness that gathers around what is long used is enlightened by the lustre of what is new. Long may the STAR continue to shine.

Charged with Arson. William Myers and James Rountree, both colored, charged with arson, in setting fire to the house on King's Alley, near Front and between Queen and Wooster streets, which was destroyed by fire last Friday, were arrested and brought before the Mayor yesterday, but the investigation of the case was postponed until to-day. The house was the property of Mr. W. H. Alderman, and was occupied by colored people, with whom Myers and others, it is alleged, had quarrelled.

Death of Mrs. E. A. Purnell.

We are again called upon to record the death of another one of our old native citizens, Mrs. Eliza Ann Purnell, which took place on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the residence of Mr. Washington Catlett, in this city. Her death was not unexpected, as she had been a sufferer for a long time, with an incurable disease.

Mrs. Purnell was born in Wilmington in 1822, and consequently was in her sixty-eighth year. She was the eldest daughter of the late Gov. Dudley, and was a highly educated woman. She married in 1841, Mr. Thomas R. Purnell, of Halifax, a prominent young lawyer, and a man of more than ordinary ability, who died in 1846, and by whom she had three children, but one only surviving, T. R. Purnell, Esq., of Raleigh. She was one of the most generous of women, kind hearted and liberal and devoted to her kindred and friends, giving amply of her means before misfortune overtook her in the loss of property, to all who were suffering or distressed or who needed assistance. There are many in our midst who will remember her for her many deeds of generous kindness.

Her funeral took place from St. John's Church yesterday afternoon, thence to Oakdale Cemetery, and the following gentlemen acted as pall bearers: Col. Jas. G. Burr, Hon. O. P. Meares, Col. E. D. Hall, Mr. Wm. Watters, Mr. David S. Cowan, Mr. J. Alys Walker.

KILLING OF W. T. BROWN.

INVESTIGATION OF THE CASE BEFORE MAYOR FOWLER.

Dr. Burbank's Testimony—Walter Yates Committed in Default of Bail to Answer to the Charge of Manslaughter.

There was again a great gathering of people in the Court at the City Hall yesterday afternoon to hear the continuation of the investigation before Mayor Fowler, of the circumstances that led to the death of Wm. Thos. Brown, in the early morning of Friday last. The persons under arrest charged with participation in the difficulty that preceded the finding of the dead body of Brown on the railroad track—Walter Yates, J. M. Woollard and J. J. Canaday—were present with counsel, Mr. John D. Bellamy, Jr., and Mr. J. A. Marshall, while Col. B. R. Moore, Solicitor of the Criminal Court, and Mr. D. B. Cutlar were also in attendance in behalf of the State.

All the witnesses, a score or more in number, were sworn, and the examination was at once proceeded with.

Dr. T. S. Burbank was the first witness called. He testified that he had made an official examination of the body of W. T. Brown Sunday morning about 11 o'clock, at the place to which it had been removed, near Sneed's Ferry; it had not been buried; found the body in a coffin, and stripped it; found the right side of the face badly bruised; found a cut on the right side of the nose that extended to the membrane covering the bone; there was a smaller cut a half inch in length—outside of the right eye, about the same as the other; the right eyelid and eye, and the right cheek were much bruised and swollen. On the back of the head, found a wound a half inch long that went down to the skull. Examined the body and found no wounds upon it. Dissected the scalp and found the tissues all bruised and much diffused blood; removed a portion of the skull, and found a blood-clot just beneath the cut on the front of the head near the nose; the brain was very much congested; found a very large clot of blood on the brain on the back of the head; in his opinion these wounds were sufficient to cause death. Asked about the possibility of the deceased freezing to death, and being shown a tabulated statement of temperatures on that night and the morning following, ranging from 32 to 38°, he explained the effects of cold on the system when the heart stopped, he said the whole external surface would be cold. In his opinion the fall at the railroad cut could not have caused the wounds on the head of deceased. If deceased had fallen and his head had struck on the angle of a cross-tie, it could have caused a wound such as was found on the head, but could not have caused all the wounds; the wound on the outer corner of the right eye was made by a blunt instrument; the wound on the inner corner was a lacerated wound extending downwards about half an inch. Striking on a cross-tie could not have made such a wound; both wounds could have been made at one time by brass-knuckles or a blow of the fist. Gave it as his opinion that the lower edge of the seat of the chair with which Yates struck Brown would have caused the wound on the back of the head of the deceased.

Green Brown, brother of deceased, testified that he accompanied Dr. Burbank, and identified the body as that of W. T. Brown, his brother.

Walter Way was again called and testified as he did last Saturday. After the conclusion of Way's testimony Solicitor Moore said it was a prima facie case that called for the holding of defendants; but at the request of the defence the examination of witnesses was proceeded with.

J. M. Woollard, one of the parties accused of assaulting Brown, was called and testified. Denied striking deceased, but did put his hand on Brown's breast and ask him not to raise a row. Woollard said in answer to questions, that he had lived in Wilmington three or four years; was born in Columbus county, and knew Yates some time, but was not a particular friend of his; did not see Yates treating anybody; was not drunk himself; some of the crowd had been drinking; Brown was drunk; policemen entered the room at the time Yates struck Brown; the police officers were there two and-a-half or three hours; Brown was advancing on Yates when the latter struck him with the chair.

J. M. Holloway testified that there was a little row at the dance, between J. J. Canaday and Yates; the latter struck Canaday; Brown came to the door and cursed Yates; Woollard put his hand against Brown and told him not to raise a fuss; Woollard did not strike Brown; Brown backed and came again to the door and advanced on Yates; witness heard the crash of the chair, but did not see the blow; if Woollard struck Brown, he (witness) did not see it. After the blow with the chair, asked Brown, "Are you hurt?" and Brown sorter smiled, and said, "no, just stunted a little." To the best of his knowledge, Brown went out of the back door of the house.

After hearing Howland's testimony, and arguments by counsel, the Court committed Yates to the custody of the sheriff in default of $800 bail, on the charge of manslaughter, while Woollard was discharged, and J. J. Canaday was held in a bond of $100 to answer for engaging in an affray.

The Coroner's inquest, postponed from last Saturday, will be held at the City Court room this morning at 10.30 o'clock.

A Fleet of Square-Riggers. A fleet of ten square-riggers arrived at Southport yesterday and Sunday and were reported by the Signal Service observer yesterday afternoon as on their way up to Wilmington. The names of the vessels are, the Norwegian barques Sulphide from Rio, Camilla from Table Bay, Dove from Port Natal; German brig Clara, from Demarara; German barque Bertha, Buenos Ayres; Norwegian barque Gyldebrandt, from Savannah; British barquentine Centre, German brig Carl Johan, and Norwegian barque Ofir.

The Doctor is preparing a treat for his audience, and will doubtless give some practical points that all may not only enjoy, but make use of as well. The lecture will be free, and all young men in the city, whether members of the Association or not, will be heartily welcome.

Steam Tug Sunk. The steam tug Sophie, owned by Messrs. Ross and Sanford, contractors, of Savannah, Ga., sunk yesterday evening in the lower Cape Fear river. The tug was shifting anchors for the dredge boat Savannah, at the time of the accident. Capt. S. W. Skinner, with pumping apparatus, will leave here this morning for the scene of the disaster, and will soon have the sunken tug afloat.

had no bruise on his face when witness asked him if he was hurt, and he immediately left the house.

Emma Jackson was again called and told the same story she did on Saturday, as to the fight. Had known Holloway for years; he sent some of the invitations to the ball; she sent some, and Miss Blizzard sent some of them.

N. Casteen, like most of the other witnesses, didn't know much about the fight, although he was in the room; he turned his head and looked out of a window, and when he turned again Yates had struck Brown. That was all he knew about it, although he did hear Woollard tell Brown to keep quiet sometime before. In answer to a question from the Mayor, witness said Brown was not advancing on Yates when the latter struck him with the chair.

A youth named LeGwin was the next witness; he repeated the same story he told Saturday; there was a quarrel between Yates and Canaday; Brown came in and cursed Yates; he (witness) with Emma Jackson got Yates into a corner and tried to keep him quiet, and when Yates got up to strike Brown, witness ran out of the room and did not see anybody strike a blow.

J. A. Hankins was also present in the room when the row began, but when he saw Yates raise the chair he left the room; he went back again after some of the girls, and with them went to Yates' house and told him to go to the Mayor's Court in the morning. In answer to questions, Hankins said he went to the house with the musicians; went to have some fun; hadn't danced before in fifteen years.

R. H. Moore, policeman, testified that he went to the house about 12 o'clock; was called by Emma Jackson, who said she expected trouble. He was on the piazza of the house and heard a scuffle and went in, and saw a chair raised and Brown struck; caught the chair and took Yates into custody, as he striking Brown again; it was a pretty severe blow on the front of the head; Brown and Yates were facing each other. Saw Woollard in the room; did not see him strike any one; saw no marks on Brown's face; saw him go out the front door; called to officer Howland to arrest Brown; was at the house three-quarters of an hour altogether; Brown, Yates and Canaday were under the influence of liquor; Yates got away from witness after they left the house.

Officer Howland testified that he went to the house a few moments before 12 o'clock; was called in by the woman Emma Jackson; went on back piazza with Moore; saw Yates advancing with chair raised and strike Brown; other officer caught chair before a second blow was struck; Brown said he was not hurt; arrested Brown and turned him loose to arrest other parties—Woollard and Canaday—and when he returned to where he had left Brown the latter had gone; saw no marks on Brown's face, and he said he was not hurt; did not see Woollard do anything, arrested him because he was in the crowd. In answer to the Solicitor, said he was on the piazza when the blow was struck; house was about twenty yards from the place where Brown was found dead the next morning. Emma Jackson asked him two nights before to come to the house that night.

After hearing Howland's testimony, and arguments by counsel, the Court committed Yates to the custody of the sheriff in default of $800 bail, on the charge of manslaughter, while Woollard was discharged, and J. J. Canaday was held in a bond of $100 to answer for engaging in an affray.
