the cheerful promises which they listened to, threw up their hats for Harrison and protection, shouted for Harrison and protection, and voted for Harrison and protection.

In these same States now there are some farmers who have learned how they have been fooled, and are organizing against protection and any one who advocates it.

This is not all the result of Harrison's election, for the same might and probably would have happened had any other Republican been elected on a high protection platform.

That era of purified politics which was promised hasn't come either, but on the contrary we have one of the most thoroughly partisan machine-run administrations that we have seen for years.

When, honesty, integrity and efficiency stand no more chance in a contest with partisanship than a lawless cat would in a kennel of bull dogs.

While professing devotion to the spirit of reform and to the civil service the decapitating axe was put into operation and lopped off more heads in the first year than his predecessor did in three and yet the lopping off process goes on.

Neopitism, favoritism and partisanship figured in the appointments made, regardless of merit, efficiency or, in many instances, respectability.

Mr. Harrison's second year may be worse, for that is regarded throughout the country, even by many of those who helped to make him President, not only a signal but a disastrous failure, a disappointment and a humiliation.

MINOR MENTION. The St. Louis Republic has been eliciting from the farmers of the Western States their views on the condition of the farmers of the West, and finds complaints of hard times and distress to be universal.

The prices of farm products have fallen so low that even with abundant crops the farmers find themselves in a worse condition than they ever were, with debts staring them in the face and unable to realize anything from their full granaries wherewith to meet them.

In the meantime, through the action of trusts and combines, the prices of many of the articles which the farmer has to buy and must have, have gone up so that it takes, as one Missouri farmer puts it, "100 bushels of oats to buy a man a cheap suit of clothes," and as another Illinois farmer says, "a load of wheat or corn to buy an armful of store goods."

While the farmer is going down and struggling to keep his chin above water the protected monopolists who compel him to pay the highest price they can put on everything he buys, are making rads on Congress and demanding more protection, and they will probably get it, for they own the majority party in Congress.

MR. MILLS' SPEECH. How It Impressed a Couple of His Color- ed Constituents. The Hon. Roger Q. Mills has been telling a story this week at his own expense, says the New York Tribune's Washington correspondent.

In the exciting political campaign of 1888 Col. Mills had a red-hot fight on hand in his own district in Texas. One of the meetings which the apostle of a low tariff addressed was in his own town of Corsicana.

The people for miles around poured into the town to hear him. Col. Mills was stirred to his inmost depths. He hammered away in that speech on the tariff question to the exclusion of every other topic.

The next morning the Texas statesman was in his flower garden, and while standing near a high board fence admiring the rose bushes that flourished luxuriantly there, he overheard the following dialogue between two negroes who were at work in the adjoining lot.

"Was you up at de big democratic meetin' yestiddy?" "Yes, I drapped 'round an' listened to Col. Mills talk."

"So did I." "Could you make heads or tails 'outen what he was talkin' 'bout?" "Deed I couldn't." He kept a shoutin' 'bout one thing all de time. He talked an' he talked about de tariff."

"Dat was de racket de whole time. I was dar, an' I don't know now what it was; but from de way he han'led hisse'f an' pawed de ar in dat speech, you kin bet yo' bos' dollah dat I was to meet up wid de tariff, I'd give it de road."

THE PURE LARD BILL. An Underhand Blow at Cotton Seed Oil. New Orleans Times-Democrat. The "Pure Lard" bill will scarcely pass Congress, and it ought not to do so.

The investigation made by the committee into the merits of lard, compound lard and cotton seed oil showed that while there were frequently objections to lard made from swine which had died of cholera, none could be raised against the healthfulness and purity of the vegetable oil.

We have had numerous complaints from abroad of our lard, and several countries have prohibited the importation of American hog products on the ground that in some sections of the country diseased hogs are packed or thrown into the lard boiler.

In the face of such facts, for Congress to step in and prohibit the use of cotton seed oil on the ground that it contaminates the lard, is to confess that it is working in the interest of a certain class of packers, and at the same time striking a blow at an important industry.

Cotton seed oil cannot be placed in the same category as oleomargarine. It is not an unhealthy or improper article of diet; and it serves admirably for frying and all other purposes for which lard is used.

We hope to see the bill beaten, as it deserves to be.

BETTER THAN POCKETS. A Dame Who Wasn't Afraid of Being Robbed. It was in the Philadelphia depot at Jersey City, says the New York Sun.

A man who had been half asleep on one of the benches for some time suddenly roused up, carried his hand to the breast pocket of his coat and then called out: "I have been robbed! Some one has picked my pocket!"

"How much money?" asked an old lady who sat near him. "Over $40."

"Sakes alive, but what a loss! Sure you had it when you left home?" "Of course I am!"

"Didn't leave it under your pillow or change your coat?" "No."

"I noticed you feeling around your coat tails before you went to sleep. Better look back there before you give it up."

He carried his hand back, and ten seconds later held his lost wallet up to sight. He began to apologize and stammer, but she checked him with: "Young man, you order to be more keenerful. You might of accused me of stealin' that money, and it would have been a nice thing for my church folks to hear of, wouldn't it?"

When the news got home to my old man he'd have been so kerfustrated that he'd have forgotten to feed the shoats, or milk the cows, and there's no knowing how he'd have got along locking up the house and going to bed."

"Oh, I shouldn't have accused you, ma'am," protested the man. "Well, I'm glad on it, and being as this excitement has come up about pickpockets I guess I'll see if my money and tickets are safe."

And she reached down, slipped off a calf-skin shoe from her right foot, and peered into it, with the remark: "There's the ticket and there's the dollar bill, and I hain't been robbed. Just try it, young man. Beats coat tails and all other pockets all holler. Got to stand you on your head to get it, and every time you set your foot down you know it's thar. I've carried $17 all over New York that way, and got out alive and safe."

GREAT TREES. Some Aged and Grand Oaks of Massachusetts. Buffalo Courier. The latest Garden and Forest contains a picture and an account of the famous Waverly Oaks in Belmont, Massachusetts, a very interesting group of trees consisting of 22 large white oaks, one swamp white oak, and one large white elm, all confined within a space of two or three acres.

The largest girths 17 feet 3 inches at 34 feet from the ground. We have seen the statement made that the Charter Oak at Hartford must have been a goodly tree when William the Norman landed in England, but Professor Sargent would probably not assert so great an age for it, judged by his estimate of that of the Waverly oaks.

As one of this group, which is now 13 feet 4 inches in girth, is known to have increased three inches in diameter in the last 24 years, it would now be 408 years old and its bigger brother would be 508, had the rate of growth been constant. But, although the trees are still healthy and are growing with considerable vigor, the Professor believes there are a number of years, probably several hundred, when they grew faster than they are now doing.

He therefore estimates their age at something less than the figures given, but says it is safe to surmise that the youngest had attained some size and the oldest was a tree of fair proportions before the first settlements were made on Massachusetts Bay.

The lateral development of the branches shows that these trees grew upon land which must have been cleared 400 or 500 years ago, if there was ever any forest growth upon it.

His Name Was Rats. Kraft Ratz was injured in the Milwaukee yards Saturday afternoon. The patrol wagon was called and Ratz was taken to Dr. A. A. Ames' office.

As is always the case, a large crowd followed the wagon, anxious to learn the extent of the man's injuries. After the man was taken into the office the wagon remained to take him away when his injuries were dressed.

"What's that man's name?" asked a well-dressed man of Officer Reece, the conductor of the wagon. "Ratz," was the laconic answer. "What do you mean by insulting a man in that manner? I shall report you to the police commission for incivility to citizens," growled out the man as he trudged away.

PERSONAL. Victor Capoul has written the book for a grand opera, the scene of which is laid in Russia during the sanguinary reign of Ivan IV.

Mr. Stanley's book, it is now thought, will be out in May. It will be translated into French, German, Italian, Czech, Norse and even Spanish, and will be published simultaneously in these countries, with fine illustrations.

The Portuguese government has offered to loan to the Pinto a diplomatic post, it is believed, at Washington, on condition that he refrain from going to Lisbon, where his presence might be fraught with danger not only to the ministry, but possibly to the dynasty itself.

Prince Bismarck long ago highly appreciated Count Andrassy's ability. "Andrassy," he said, "is a first rate statesman—a splendid impersonation of that which is best in the Hungarian character: brilliant, generous, chivalrous, and at the same time penetrating, profound and invincibly firm."

John G. Whittier writes: "I have reached a time of life when literary notoriety is of small consequence, but I shall be glad to feel that I have not for freedom, temperance, charity, faith in the divine goodness, love of nature and of home and country, are welcomed and approved."

Robert Adams, Jr., the United States Minister to Brazil, has some presence, dresses with unnecessary scrupulousness, and, without being a millionaire, has a neat fortune and a salary of $12,000 a year. He is well content with diplomacy, and not being overburdened with years, passes a pleasant life and has hitherto escaped matrimony.

POLITICAL POINTS. The Republicans voted solidly against the Ballot Reform bill in the West Virginia Senate, and killed it. Republicans have done the same thing in almost every legislative body where they have had a chance.

The Republican leaders were desperate. They knew Harrison could not be elected by the people. They knew it was necessary to purchase his election. And they turned to the man who was able and willing to advance the corruption fund if guaranteed the legislation they desired in pursuit of their selfish purposes.

Dr. Harrison will get there after awhile if he keeps on. A little matter of $5,000 for a claim previously rejected, $25,000 for a statue of grandpa, a brand new Washington residence for the Harisons and the baby, and a few drafts on the Treasury for such other purposes as the Doctor may hereafter designate, will help to reduce the surplus and perhaps, after awhile, wipe out the Treasury deficits in taking a tuck in the pension appropriations.

Toboggan Siver. Continue to be in great favor in the North. The management of one of the rinks in large cities proposed to give each patron a small bottle of Hasson's Syrup of Tar free of charge.

Who is Mrs. Winslow? As this question is frequently asked, we will simply say that she is a lady who for upwards of forty years has untriflingly devoted her time and talents as a female physician and nurse, principally among children.

Remarkable Rescue. Mrs. Michael Curtin, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse.

What Scott's Emulsion Has Done. Over 25 Pounds Gained in 10 Weeks. Experience of prominent Citizen. I took a severe cold in my chest and lungs and did not give it proper attention, and it developed into bronchitis, and in the fall of the same year I was threatened with consumption. Physicians ordered me to a more congenial climate, and I came to San Francisco. Soon after my arrival I commenced taking Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites regularly 2 or 3 times a day. In ten weeks my avoirdupois went from 155 to 180 pounds and over the cough meantime ceased.
