PINE FIBRE.

A VISIT TO THE MILLS AT CRONLY.

A Growing Industry-Pine Straw Bagging and Matting Turned Out by Thousands of Yards.

A short run of sixteen miles on the Carolina Central railroad, yesterday afternoon, took us to the flourishing town of Cronly, where are situated the works of the American Pine Fibre Co. The train which conveyed us also took quite a number of our merchants and business men, who wished to witness some of the curious workings of this comparatively new and entirely novel industry, and well were they repaid for their time and trouble.

A special car was furnished for the use of the visitors, and the officials of the company did all in their power to make the visit profitable, instructive and agreeable.

Upon our arrival at Cronly we were at once conducted to the "works" and had the pleasure of witnessing the different processes through which the pine leaves are passed in their manufacture into bagging, matting and other articles of daily use, which is as follows:

The leaves are gathered from what is known as the long-leaf pine, and taken weighed. Thence they are thrown into large vats where they are boiled in alkali for about twelve hours at a low temperature. Then, after being thoroughly soaked in the same vats, they are taken by a continuous process through the rubbing, wringing, carding, drying, carding again, drawing, roving, winding, weaving and calendering machines, when the article is completed and ready for baling and the market. By the former process there was much extra work and delay occasioned by the fact that the material had to be handled for every different stage of its preparation; but with the new and improved machinery now in use the work goes on without interruption from the beginning to its completion, and the same power that feeds it to one machine also conveys it to the next, and to the next; until the leaves that enter as a raw material come out finished into matting or bagging in accordance with the purpose for which it may be intended. It may not only be made into matting and bagging, but it can also be made into carpet lining, roofing and upholstering, and it also furnishes a volatile pine oil which has valuable medicinal properties. The company is now exclusively engaged in the manufacture of bagging, and this business bids fair to demand all the possibilities of the present plant, which has a capacity of 2,000 vards per day, the weight per yard being two pounds. The pine straw bagging is equally as good as jute for baling purposes, and can be put on the market much cheaper than the former article. In fact it was an advance in price by the "jute trust" that first gave an impetus to the pine straw bagging industry, at first as an experiment, but with results that have already demonstrated its superiority over the former article in point of economy, and that it is equally as durable and strong,

Mr. A. Scott, who has been connected with the enterprise from the beginning, and is a thorough mechanic, with a great deal of inventive genius, is the superintendent of the works, and he has thirty-three employes, males and females, under his control. These latter, by this industry, are enabled to earn fair wages, with sure and constant employment at all times of the year.

There are seven machines for weaving bagging and thirteen machines for weaving matting. The latter is woven in colors (as they dye the material to almost any color), and is made from twenty-two inches to seventy-two inches wide. There is also a newly patented drying machine, the cunning invention of Mr. J. H. Lorimer, of Philadelphia, who is one of the stockholders of the company.

The fear is frequently expressed by some who are prone to look on the dark side of a picture, that there is danger of exhausting the supply. To this we unpossibility, as a few statistics gathered from the most authentic sources will show. The fact has been established beyond a shadow of doubt that for every foot of pine timber in this State one pound of green leaves may be gathered. Since the works at Cronly were started, six years ago, they have used 21,428,000 pounds of pine leaves, all of which has been gathered within a radius of four miles, and not a tree has been injured what is destined to be a great industry and an important factor in the prosperity of the South. This enormous amount of raw material would make 3,-000,000 yards of bagging of two pounds for each yard. In the single county of Columbus, where these works are situated, according to the official report, there are 223,000,000 feet of pine timber. Cumberland and Robeson counties, which are the largest pine timber producing counties in the State, have, by the official reports, more than 800,000,-000 feet each, and in fifteen counties in | hood of the Poor House.

North Carolina there are 5,229,000,000 feet of pine timber, which, with one pound of leaves for each foot of timber, would give 747,000,000 yards of bagging from one year's crop.

According to the New Orleans Times-Democrat there are, in the States of Louisiana, Texas, Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina and Arkansas, 212,937,-000,000 feet of pine timber, the leaves of | dies. which, at fifteen cents per hundred pounds, would amount to 810,646,000,000 and would make about 70,000,000,000 yards of bagging, the value of which at seven cents per yard would amount to $4,900,000,000. 1 ms, as the result of one year's crop, without a particle of damage to a single tree or a foot of the timber.

The trouble is not that the supply will be exhausted or can by any possibility be exhausted, but in the fact that there are not plants, and many of them, in every Southern State and even in distant Georgia, where there is pine in abundance, and where there is, and ever will be, a constant demand for this material for bagging purposes. There can be no question that as pine fibre bagging becomes better known there will be a constantly increasing demand for it-such a demand in this State that the works at Cronly cannot supply, and a large increase to its producing capacity must necessarily follow or other plants must be erected.
