as "lemonade," "ale" and "gin." The tional park and zoological garden on lemonade is, doubtless, all right, but the suburbs of Washington. Washwe think there must be some misington is pronounced by many the take about the "ale" and "gin." handsomest city in the world, but it lacked a park, the only thing neces-It which the fellow who fixed up sary to make good the claim.

We are led into these remarks by an announcement in the STAR of Friday that a citizen of Wilmington had offered to donate to the city a tract of land for a park on condition that the city would beautify it and care for it. Similar propositions, we believe, have been made heretofore, but for some reason they were not accepted. Whether this one has enough in it to commend it or not we do not know, but this we do know, that the city of Wilmington should have a park and a fine one, of fair dimensions, and that steps ought to be now taken to secure the site which in the years that are to come will be central as the city's borders expand. Every year this is delayed makes the selection of a site that much the more difficult and the cost of the land, if it has to be purchased, that much the greater. The cost of the land would now be insignificant compared with what it will be ten years hence when the city will have grown to double its present dimensions, and its 25,000 population has increased to 50,000 or

With her grand broad streets, ornamented and shaded with stately, noble trees as they are, smoothly and substantially paved as they will be, and lined with handsome residences and charming grounds as they are and will be, give her a grand park in the heart of the city and she can hold her own in beauty and attractiveness with any city on the Atlantic coast, and one of which not only her own people but all North Carolinians will be proud.

the bill, who had likely been taking some of it, got mixed up with ale and gin. The commission probably got this idea from the United States Senate, where the lemonade and ginger ale figure very largely among the monthly bills which Uncle Sam is called upon to cash. They concluded that if these shoothing and invigorating fluids were conducive to the health of the Senators and necessary" they would also be conducive to the health, and consequently to the efficiency of the Comsion, and therefore quite "necessary." and at the same time "actual," for we don't see how the Commission could guzzle lemonade, ale and ginor ginger ale, without actually doing it unless they did it by proxy, something which in such cases is rarely done. Mr. Cummings, who is evidently aiming to destroy the commission by depriving it of the "necessary" beverages, has in this case, it seems to us, offered an amendment which wears the hue of a distinction without a difference, One of the strong points made by the protectionists to popularize and secure the votes of the workingmen for protection was that it will enable employers to pay higher wages to American workmen. In the interest of the American workman the contract labor act was passed to prohibit the importation under contract of workmen from Europe, to take the place of American workmen when they demanded higher wages than the protected employers saw fit to pay. That law has been constantly evaded and is being now evaded as has been clearly demonstrated to a Congressional committee appointed to make an investigation which is now in progress at Castle elicited evidence enough to show that through agents in Europe these protected employers can get and do get all the workmen they want from Europe, and that thousands of workmen are sent over through these agents, who are now at work under contracts made before they were shipped to this country. The zeal which the protected employers show for the welfare of the American workman is really touching.

Full Text of the Measure Agreed Upon by the Republicans.

The Republicans of the House and Senate have agreed upon the basis for the preparation of a silver bill. The agreement is in harmony with the measure adopted by the Senate Caucus Committee, with one Important amendment. The following is the full text of the bill as agreed upon: Section 1. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to purchase from time to time silver bullion to the aggregate amount of 4,500,000 ounces of free silver in each month, at the market price thereof, not exceeding one dollar for three hundred and seventy-one and twenty-five one hundredths grains of pure silver, and to issue in payment for such purchases of silver bullion treasury notes of the United States, to be prepared by the Secretary of the Treasury, in such form and of such denominations, not less than one dollar nor more than one thousand dollars, as he may prescribe, and a sum sufficient to carry into effect the provisions of this act is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated. Section 2. That the treasury notes ssued in accordance with the provisions of this act shall be redeemable on demand in lawful money of the United States at the treasury of the United States or at the office of any assistant treasurer of the United States, and when so redeemed may be reissued, but no greater or less amount of such notes shall be outstanding at any time than the cost of the silver bullion then held in the treasury purchased by such notes. and such treasurer's notes shall be receivable for customs, and all public dues, and when so received may be reissued, and such notes when Garden, in New York. They have held by any national banking association may be counted as a part of its lawful reserve ; provided, that upon demand of the holder of any of the treasury notes herein provided for the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion and under such regulations as he may prescribe, exchange for such notes an amount of silver bullion which shall be equal in value at the market price thereof on the day of exchange to the amount

PUBLIC PARKS.

In this day and generation no one questions the desirability or even necessity of public parks for cities, and no city, whatever its attractions or acquisitions may be, is fully equipped without one. Some one has aptly styled them the "lungs" of a city. They perform their part in the sanitary system, and while contributing to the pleasures of the public in furhishing a place where the weary can find rest and recreation, they also contribute to the health of those who visit them and spend that much more time in the fresh, open air than they would or could if there were no such enticing places to invite them. It would be better for men and women the world over if they lived less in houses than they do.

There is not a city in the United States now, of any pretensions, which has not a park or parks of some description, some of them among the finest in the world and such as would do honor to any city in the world. A generation ago the site of Central Park, now the glory of New York, the joy of her own people and the admiration of the hundreds of strangers who visit it and spend pleasant hours in it daily, was a stretch of uninviting territory, presenting to the eye only mighty boulders of granite jutting out from the rough broken surface, or malariabreeding bogs. The cost of removing the rock or filling up the bogs to convert the property into desirable building lots was so great that the owners could find no purchasers and it was disposed of to the city, which bought it at a small price and under the inspiration of Boss Tweed, who was then in the heyday of his power and glory, began the work of laying it off into a grand park. Tweed stole millions while he was doing it, and died in disgrace, an outcast, but he performed his work while he stole, performed it well, and gave New York her most charming acquisition and her grandest monument. It Tweed, tried and convicted thief, as he was, could get up out of his grave and show himself in the flesh, the plundered, would now treat him telligent transaction of the public as a long lost citizen re- business, and check a disregard of turned and give him a cordial wel-

Several times during the present session of Congress attention has been called to the number of vacant seats while measures of importance were being discussed, especially in the Senate. During the discussion of the Blair bill this was frequently the case, and Mr. Blair won considerable distinction by the irrepressible determination with which he argued day after day and quoted labored statistics to empty chairs. During the argument of the Mon tana Senatorship cases, it was so too, and on one occasion Senator Pugh called attention to the fact that there were only two out of the forty-five Republican Senators present to listen to his argument. They were finally found and brought in from the lounging places, and Mr. Pugh resumed his speech. On another occasion the Senate had to suspend business for want of a quorum until a number of the Senators got through devouring a big salmon that one of the California Senators had invited them to feast upon. Friday, when a land forteiture case from Florida was under consideration and Mr. Call had the floor, Mr. Blair called attention to the number of vacant seats, when a call brought in fifty-six of the Senators from the lounging rooms. Mr. Call resumed his remarks and hadn't been talking long when he found that he was talking to vacant seats again, whereupon he made some quite appropriate remarks. Whether there was a lay-out of another Columbia river salmon is not stated, but there was evidently some stronger attraction outside than the Florida land business inside, which involved the rights of a great many people. A few days ago Mr. Chandler introduced a revolutionary resolution in the Senate to cut off debate and authorize the presiding officer to count a quorum a la Reed when there was not a quorum voting, the object of the resolution being, Mr. Chandler said, "to facilitate the transaction of the public business." He should now couple with his resolution another requiring Senators to spend at least as much time in the Senate chamber during business hours as they do in the lounging places. This might people of that city whom he have a tendency to facilitate an in-

That the Secretary of the Treasury shall coin such portion of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of the treasury notes herein provided for, and any gain or seigniorage arising from such coinage shall be accounted for and paid into the treasury.

Section 4. That the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act shall be subject to the requirements of existing law and the regulations of the mint service governing the methods of determining the amount of pure silver contained, and the amount of charges or deductions, if any, to be made. Section 5. That so much of the act of February 28, 1878, entitled An act to authorize the coinage of the standard silver dollar and to restore its legal-tender character," as requires the monthly purchase and coinage of the same into silver dollars of not less than two million dollars nor more than four million dollars' worth of silver bullion, is hereby repealed.

Section 6. That this act shall take effect thirty days from and after its passage.

Senator Teller, of the Senate subcommittee, did not agree with his associates in the conclusions they reached, but they were adopted by the full committee of thirteen without his single dissenting vote. Speaking of the matter later, Senator Teller said he had announced his purpose not to support a bill that gave to the Secretary of the Treasury the option of redeeming the certificates in bullion, and he would not do so. He would for himself, he said, make an effort to secure free silver coinage; failing in that he would accept the next best thing he could get. When the measure came up in the Senate for action, he said, he should move to make the certificates legal tender.
