B) WILLIAM H. BERNARD.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 5, 1890.

THE GREAT DANGER. The great danger that threatens the people of this country is in the concentration of its wealth in the hands of the few who become rulers by means of their wealth. Extreme poverty in a republic is to be deplored, but not more so than the individuals, because while one becomes venal when temptation offers, the purchaser when emergency requires. Capital is imperious, if we may use the expression. It combines, plans, plots, forms alliances offensive and defensive to protect itself or to extend its sway. In this it knows no nationality, no sect, no party, no race; it is simply coldblooded capital, thinking, planning, acting for itself.

the millionaires and many millionacres of this country are nearly all the growth of one generation.

What will they be in two or three if they continue to increase with the same rapidity that they have in the country. How long will it be at the past rate of accumulation before they own it all?

Thirty years ago farm mortgages in this country were few and far between; now they are so numerous that the man who owns an unmortgaged farm in some sections, is looked upon as a rare exception. These mortgages are held by the men who own the wealth. Suppose they were to decide to foreclose the mortgages which they hold on the people who were unable to meet they would become the owners of law of the State unconstitutional, the majority of farms in this country and the former owners would become mere tenants? That they have hey do not care to incumber themselves with the possession which would involve the care of the farms | law, figuring out a majority of 757 and are satisfied as long as they for him, while if the law (unconstireceive the interest on the amount of | tutional they say) was strictly fol-

fit to demand the payment of the declaration of the unconstitutionality and in the spot where it had stood debts, dispossess and beggar thousands upon thousands of the farmers | Democrat's seat, they would have of the country.

way systems and are reaching out to them to steal a seat is as good as possess themselves of what they do any other law for their purposes. In not own, which they may deem it their seat stealing they are not desirable to own.

They own the telegraphs which like this. span the continent, and connect State with State, city with city, and world with the new.

which colossal fortunes have been made; they control the meat business of the country, and can dictate the price of every pound that goes on the market. Through their combinations and exchanges they control the staple crops of the country quite as effectually as if they were actually in their possession.

Owning and controlling these, is it astonishing that in this venal and self-seeking day and generation they should own and control legislators, who do their bidding as the trained dog does the bidding of his master?

Is it strange that boodle figures so effectively in filling seats in the legislative halls of the country, national and State?

Is it surprising that the standard | wind. of qualification for a seat in the U. S. Senate is getting to be the possession of many dollars and that in contests of this kind money almost invariably talks charmingly and convincingly? This accounts for the presence in the Senate of men who, if it were not for their money, would not attract attention in a fourth rate

These are the men who are directly and indirectly ruling this country today by shaping the policies by which it is governed and securing their legslative enactment by the law makers whom they control.

This danger is becoming greater nstead of less, as year follows year. The people should cry a halt to the striding money-kings and insist upon having a little more voice in this government than they have had within the past generation at least.

MINOR MENTION.

The House of Representatives indulged in a farce Tuesday in the socalled argument of the contested case of McDuffie, Rep., vs. Turpin, Dem., from the 4th district of Alabama. These "arguments" are mere formalities, it being understood that the action of the committee settles these cases, and that the seat is given to the man in whose favor the committee reports. Mr. Crisp, speaking for Turpin, called attention to the farcical character of these proceedings when he asked how many members of those present had even read the reports of the committee, and one solitary individual responded that he had. And yet they sit in judgment and decide by their votes a matter possession of colossal fortunes by in which not only the two men claiming the seat are interested, but the people of the district, whose the other becomes the corrupter and | rights are thus flippantly trifled with and ignored. The farce will be wound up, as usual, by seating the Republican contestant. They went so far to make out a case for their man that they even impugned the integrity of their own election officers, Mr. Rowell declaring that there were not six precincts in the district where there were "trustworthy Republican officers." There The great fortunes possessed by is nothing remarkable in this, for "trustworthy" Republicans are rather a scarce article in the South, and it might have been difficult to find more than a half dozen in the 4th Alabama district, but the appointing powers did, as Mr. Crisp said, the best they could with the material Less than three thousand men own they had to select from. It is over one-half the total wealth of the hardly fair to make the untrustworthiness of Republican judges an excuse for stealing the seat of a Democrat whom they had declared

The majority of the House committee on elections has extended its scope of action so far as to resolve itself into a court to decide upon the constitutionality of State election laws and began its report Tuesday on the contested case of Miller, Rep. vs. Elliot, Dem. from the 7th South Carolina district by declaring the them, how long would it be before whole legislation law and election because, as they assert, certain provisions of these laws, are in conflict with the State constitution. But not done so or do not do so is because | this does not prevent them from declaring Miller elected, on their own statement, under an unconstitutional money represented in the mortgages. | lowed he would have had 1,448 ma-They could, however, if they saw jority. If they were honest in the mortgages upon maturity of the of the law, and were not over zealous to count a Republican into a declared neither entitled to it. An They already own the great rail- unconstitutional law which enables restrained by small considerations

One of the most genteel raspings the cables which stretch along the that the ranting Shepard, of the New Ocean's floor and connect the old | York Mail and Express, has ever received was administered by Rev.

State, but now of New York, in a sermon last Sunday on "Sectional Journalism." He quoted some of the rabid expressions and misrepresentations of Shepard's paper, showed their meanness and falsehood, and contrasted them with the manly, patriotic and magnanimous utterances of Lincoln and Grant, and party and non-party papers in the North. The ravings of idiots like Shepard are hardly worthy of serious consideration, for while they are read there are very few sensible people who pay the slightest attention to them. In the city of New York, where he is best known, he amounts to no more, as far as shaping political opinion goes, than a bob-tail cat in a whirl-

It seems that the Senate and House Conference Committees can't agree on the Pension bills, the Senate endeavoring to have the House adopt its Dependent bill in lieu of the Service bill, and the House insisting on the main features of this bill. The majority in the House caucussed on it and resolved to stand by this feature, which is the main one to which the Senate objected, and the real point of difference between them. As the case stands now, the Senate will have to take water or both measures will be hung up, for the present session at least, "a consummation devoutly to be wished.'

STATE TOPICS.

The Sanford Express quotes an English gentleman who has travelled extensively in Europe, as saying that the grapes grown in some of the vineyards of Moore county are superior in flavor to the grapes grown on the banks of the Rhine. In this connection the Express remarks that the pine forests of Moore, Cumberland, Robeson, Richmond and Montgomery counties which are disappearing so rapidly before the axe will give place to vineyards, and that will become one of the great grape and fruit growing sections of the State. There is no reason why it should not in time rival California, in grape and fruit culture, for while it has all the advantage in a natural point of view, the land does not cost one-tenth as much, while the best of markets can be reached at the farthest in ten or twelve hours by rail. But there is no portion of North Garolina in which the grape does not grow to perfection, from the planes of the east to the rolling lands of the centre or the rugged mountains of the west. The same may be said of all the other fruits that grow in this latitude. North Carolina is pre-eminetly a fruit State, and a great one.

CURRENT COMMENT

-- One sad thing about the takng of the census is that it will probably result in finding Foraker somewhere. - Phil. Times, Ind.

- Sccretary Blaine has no enemies of his Pan-American schemes so persistent and so malignant as Speaker Reed, Chairman McKinley and the Republican majority in Congress. Still, the Secretary bears it all with a patient shrug.-Phil. Re-

- When three months ago the Herald predicted that the Republicans would not be able to agree on a Tariff bill at the present session, some of the protectionist organs denounced this as a mere "free trade misstatement." We venture to repeat it now: There will be no Tariff bill at this session .- N. Y. Herald, Ind.

 "Practical statesmanship," a Republican organ says, "pays some respect to the decisions of the people." Republican statesmanship is the reverse of practical. In the Presidential election the people voted by 100,000 majority in favor of stopping the surplus by reducing taxes. A Republican Congress is spending the surplus and trying to increase the taxes.-N. Y. World, Dem.

A HOUSE SINKS OUT OF SIGHT. A Subterranean Torrent Undermines an

Ohio Man's Farm. Phil. Times.

At a late hour last night the family of Christopher Menzel, a German truck gardner, living about three miles south of Springfield, Ohio, was awakened by the sound of a heavy fall and a subsequent violent trembling of the earth. Rushing out of the house in affright they found that length and nearly that in breadth. A | dry goods merchant. It seems that | sound of rushing water tumbling and plunging over rocks and down a precipice was distinctly to be heard, and in approaching the brink of the hole ice cold spray was to be felt. The outbuilding, which had evidently been submerged, had contained, besides any quantity of garden seed, twenty or thirty sacks of oats and millet, five grown pigs and fourteen young ones, a buggy and truck cart, all of which had disappeared before Mr. Menzel reached the spot. When morning dawned one of the pigs could be seen standand after some difficulty was finally rescued. The stream, as nearly as can be measured, is at least one hundred feet wide, although only about twenty feet of its width is visible, and only thirty of its length, for it lost in the depths below. The trembling of the earth still continues, and Mr. Menzel has removed his family and goods, fearing that more will cave in. Crowds have visited the spot to-day, but all approach to it is esteemed so dangerous that no attempt has been made to gauge the depth of the cavity. Eighteen hours have elapsed since it was made and there is as yet no diminution apparently in the stream, which is probably fed by some inexhaustible source.

HE TOOK A CAR.

But He Wasn't Quite Used to the Cus-

Detroit Free Press.

"I am a stranger in this town," said a man with a fur cap on, as he entered the Woodbridge street station house the other day.

"Well?" queried the sergeant. "Well, I was up here on the avenue looking about at the buildings, and I says to myself, says I:

"'It's a mighty lively town, and every man seems to be good-natured.'" "Yes. "That's what I said, you know, when a car came along. The man who was a-driving of it motions to me and asks if I want a ride. "'This is kind,' says I, as I hopped on; 'I'm only a stranger here, and yet the people can't do too much old part of Boston. for me. "I see.

"Well, I had only got seated when fellow comes up and holds out his hand. Says I to myself, says I: "'Ow's this? They not only ask me to ride, but are glad of my company. I'll shake, of course I will." "Well?" "Well, what did the deceiver do but laff in my face and demand pay, and when I expressed my feelings as to such conduct he gave me a lift off the car and rumbled on. Says I to myself, says I:

"'I'll go around to the police and see if it is regular and above board,' and here I am."

When informed that it was regular and according to custom he replied: "Then it's all right and my ignorance is to blame for it. It's all in being used to the customs, you know. I'm thankfully obliged, and when I was coming here I says to myself,

"'If the police say it's all right then I've nothing further to say, but the next driver who asks me to ride will get my left duke on his blinker as a warning that I'm no hayseed."

HIS SON BILL.

A Farmer's Criticism of a Picture Proved No Account.

New York Sun.

A New York artist who was down on the Jersey shore sketching and painting last summer, sold a farmer a crayon drawing in which the central figure was old Father Time with his deadly scythe. The buyer took it away well pleased with his purchase, but returned next day with a grin on his face and the picture under his arm, and said:

"I've got a son Bill to home." "Yes.

"He hain't but 15 years old." "Yes."

"He's got tow hair and a cataract eye, but he's smart'n chain light-

"Indeed, but I'm glad to hear it." "I hadn't this pictur' home five minits when Bill set up a-roarin' and laughin' and pinted out-what d'ye think? You've gone and drawed old Father Time a-mowin' left-handed.

I might never have noticed it, but you can't fool Bill for cider.' "My dear man," answered the artst, "did you ever see Father Time?"

"Of course not." "Did your son Bill ever see him?" "Sartinly not. He ain't to be sawed.'

"Well, then, how do either of you know whether he was right or left-

"By gum!" gasped the farmer, as he stood with open mouth, "you've got the yoke on us. That's it; how do we know? I've had three hired men who were left-handed, and I've other folks to be. I jist jumped at it without stopping to think. When Bill began to haw-paw and pint to the scythe, I jist sot in and agreed with him. Say, mister. "Yes."

"I've got a son Bill."

"He's smarter'n chain lightning at sizing up a tin peddler, but the biggest fool in the State on picturs."

Failing to subdue him, the Mexican Government made him a Major General in the army and put him in charge of the Roi Grande border. He was furnished with a full staff and headquarters force, and started out in full enjoyment of his dignity. At the end of the first month of his service his military secretary brought the pay-roll for his approval. It was headed by the name of Major Ceneral Cortina and continued with the names and pay of the other members ing on a rock, the flat top of which of his military family, and ending up They own the great oil mills, out of Thomas Dixon, Jr., formerly of this rose above the dark rushing torrent, with the total for the entire amount I

POLITICAL POINTS.

-- It is said that McKinley's bill is very favorable to many interests in which Mr. Wanamaker is interested, thus showing that Quay and McKinley have an eye singular to the interests of the Boss who ruised $400,000 for Harrison and "Protection" in 1888.—Cleaveland Plain Dealer, Dem.

-Now all clouds are scattered. The meaning of the Republican platform of 1888 has been given by authority It has been embodied in the Mc-Kinley bill, and this bill will, at every crossroads, be compared item by item with the measure drawn by Mr. Mills and supported by the Democratic party. It is not now a question of State supremacy, or of any conflict between National and State authorities; it is a question as to whether, in the legislation of this country, the people or the plutocrats shall be supreme.-Louisville Courier- Journal, Dem,
