AN EXODUSTER'S WARNING

"Buck Hill" Returns from Arkansas, Enabled to do so by His Friends Here-The Following Card Speaks for Itself. To the Colored People of East North

I propose to give an outline of the sufferings of the negro emigrants from North Carolina to Arkanssa. It seems that an impression was created among the colored people that they were going to a land of absolute freedom. But when the truth is told, one who has recently returned from that "promised land" can say that from the very first deception was practiced. They were led to believe that an easy life awaited them; that to turn the sod only was necessary to produce a harvest. I propose to tell you of some of the troubles that we had to undergo in getting to the "land of promise," and then I will say something about the disappointments that stared us in the face. To start with, the negro emigrant trainer told us that we would have no difficulty in reaching our destination; that all would be well; that everything was already provided for. The following is the truth: We were absolutely owned by the emigration agent from the moment that we accepted our ticket. We were under his control in every regard. We did not know when an important junction was passed, and if we had known it, it would have been beyond our power to have changed our course. We were promised a certain dispatch and destination, but a most unreasonable delay on the part of the "Emigrant Trainer" kept us for six days and nights on the road. Our first trouble was at Charlotte, N, C., where we were sold as slaves. We reached Charlotte at 8 o'clock Sunday morning, where we were compelled to remain without shelter until 2 o'clock Monday morning, when a gentleman from Memphis, notified the emigrant agent that unless shelter was furnished the women and children he would telegraph George Price to come and take them to their homes. When we arrived at Memphis a trade was made of which we knew nothing. From there we went to Greenville, Miss., at which place we arrived at 8 p. m. We had to remain on the banks of the Mississippi until 2 a. m., without protection of any kind until the boat came, and here we were sold to a Mr. Martin, who carried us to Chicot county, Arkansas, who divided us up as he wished, some families being separated as much as twenty miles. We were promised by the "emigrant trainer" 75 cents per "100 lbs." for picking cotton. Mr. Martin agreed to pay only 50 cents. We notified him that we could not work at those wages, whereupon he seized all of our personal effects. Some families were put in horse stables and others in old out-houses, while some had to remain on the banks of the river--without shelter. When revolvers were drawn on some of us to force us to terms, we were in 12 miles of Louisiana, and were unable to get on the steamer without a pass. Then we went to another point where we were halted by men armed and mounted-who deanded from us where we were going and by whose authority. The last sale was made in Louisiana by Mr. Williams, who sold 600 of us for $5,000. Women and children were roaming about over cotton fields with no money, no friends and no place of refuge. I worked as hard as I could for four months, ditching, etc., and I concluded that home was the best place for me, and started from Rush Point, La. I arrived at Shreveport on my first day's journey, from thence to Pine Bluff where I remained two days and learned all I could of the sufferings of my North Carolina people. From Pine Bluff I went to Memphis, where I spent two days.

From there to Chattanooga, and Knoxville, at which point iseven cents cents worth of rations. I was then over 400 miles from home without one cent. I then, on foot, started homeward-begging my way, and when the sum of fifty cents befell my lot I would ask the conductor to ride me as far as my means would go and would then walk and steal rides on the railroad train-willing to be ejected when I was caught. While walking and riding I thought of my Wilmington friends and wrote to Dave Bryan to send me money to Charlotte, at which place I hoped to arrive by Sunday the 22nd, but I did not get there until Monday. I found that my friends in Wilmington had made all necessary more College of Dental Surgery and to arrangement, for my passage to my home the University of Maryland were awardand I am thankful that I have reached
