tive tariff as now understood and administered under the Republican regime are the most inconsistent men in the world. They pretend that a protective tariff which increases the tected American manufacturers a monopoly of the home market, that prices will fall. This is so absurd on its face and so emphatically contradicted by facts, that it is astonishing that men should have the cheek to assert it in the presence of an intelligent people.

But they don't mean this, for they know better, and they don't intend it either, for the sole object of a protictive tariff is to keep foreign manufactures out of this country and to give home manufacturers exclusive

Did any one ever hear people who have not a personal interest in a protective tariff ask for one?

goods petition Congress to levy high duties to keep foreign woollen goods out of this country ?

Do the men who manufacture woollen goods petition Congress to levy high duties on foreign wool to keep it out of this country so that they can't buy it ?

There never was a protective tariff established in this country which was not planned and passed at the dictation of manufacturers who asked it for their benefit, and for their benefit alone.

But how could it benefit them if it didn't cramp foreign competition and thus enable them to fix their own prices and keep them up?

a man who would implore Congress to pass a law the effect of which would be to make him manufacture and sell goods at a lower price than he had been selling them before such a law was enacted, and yet this is simply what they would be doing if the assertion of these protection advocates be true.

We have had abundant proof of the new factories going up all over the falsity of these assertions underthe various protective tariff acts which have been passed, but the besides the scribe who wrote the parproofs have been multiplied in the agraph quoted? That factories are brief period since the new tariff went going up is doubtless true, as there into effect.

It seems hardly credible that such monstrous sentiments as these could find expression through the columns of a paper making claims to anything like respectability, and the fact that they do, shows that the rancorous sectional animosity is not dead by a long sight.

Unbounded cheek is one of the characteristics of the high tariff boomers, and of the editors who He would be a queer compound of champion their cause. The New York Times has the gall to remark interrogatively thus : "With new "factories going up all over the "country, which will give employ-'ment to hundreds of thousands of persons, is there any sane or unpre-'judiced man who will say that the workingmen are not benefitted by "the McKinley bill?" ----- An Ohio Republican is quoted as saying of McKinley: "He does not enthuse. He may at a distance, Lut he does not at home." When we hear the execrations of McKinley that are daily going up from those who are feeling the burden of the outrageous tax-raising tariff scheme, it is not at all clear that the Ohio Congressman enthuses even away from home. least $500,000, and will employ 1,000 men. Each machine will cost between $300 and $500. Last year, they say, it cost nearly $100,000,000 to pick the cotton crop, and they claim that their machine will do it for one-tenth that sum, and that the quality of the cotton will be improved. One machine will do the work of twenty men.

The cotton picker consists of a two-wheeled cart, with a boxed receptacle to catch the picked cotton. The wheels give motion to the machinery by simple cog connections.

The cylinder looks like a grain thrasher cylinder, except that the teeth, or fingers of it are from four to six times longer and revolve with the cylinder. They also have another distinct, different and more rapid revolution. The forward motion of the cart corresponds exactly to the travel of the ingers or spindles on the cylinder, or mechanically offsets the forward motion of the car wheels, so that while the spindles are permeating all through the cotton stalks they at the same time remain perfectly motionless as far as the forward motion is concerned. Mechanically the fingers extend through the bush spinning on all ripe cotton, and from the fact that there is no forward movement of the individual lot of spindles than in the bush, the plant and the unripe
