A Large Audience Greet the Prescott-Mc-Lean Combination.

One of, if not the largest audience of the season greeted the Prescott-McLean combination in "Cleopatra" last night. In selecting this strange, weird tale of Haggard's for dramatization, Miss Prescott showed discriminating taste, for it is the only work in which the artist rises superior to the story-teller, and enchains his readers by his analysis of the character, giving to the world a woman we can separate from the background action and contemplate as she was; not one who secured our attention solely by reason of the situations in which we found her. Haggard's conception of Cleopatra is the popular one; therefore for an actress to create the familiar personage of Egypt's queen in a manner to completely capture her audience as Miss Prescott did, is an evidence of high histrionic ability. Though at times the actress was too prominent, and the character essayed subordinated, yet on the whole it seemed as if we were present in the days when Egypt's Queen ruled in her beauty, and beneath the shadows of the -The Mayor has given notice Libyan hills were actors in the sad

> The Harmachis of Mr. McLean was superb; his fine stage presence aiding greatly his audience in their appreciation of his excellent conception and personation of the noble prince.

A Big Blaze But a Small Fire.

Fire broke out last night in an undertakers shop in the center of a row of small wooden buildings belonging to the Bettincourt estate, on Second street near Princess. The place had been closed for the night sometime before and the flames which burst from the rear gave the first notice of the fire to persons passing on the street. An alarm was sent in from box No. 15, Front and Mulberry streets, and the engines and hose reels of the Department were soon on the ground and in a remarkably short space of time had the fire under control giving them a chance to extend to the buildings adjoining. The damage to the property will not exceed $150, and is probably covered by insurance. The owner of the undertaking shop, D. C. Evans, a colored man, had no insurance on his stock; his loss will amount to about $250. Isham Sweat, colored, occupied the place adjoining on the North as a barber shop, and sustained some damage by water.

The relief valves and shut-off nozzles used by the Department were again brought in play and were of valuable service in preventing damage by water to property of the shop-keepers through whose premises it was found necessasy to carry lines of hose to play on the fire in the rear of the building.

The paints, oils and varnishes and other material ir. Evans' shop made a big blaze which caused a great gathering of people in the neighborhood, the streets at the time being thronged with shoppers. But the crowd was in the main an orderly one, though the police were forced to arrest two or three colored persons who were disorderly and insolent.
