The United States District Attorney in New York will institute suit against the steamer which failed to carry back those twenty-one rejected Italian immigrants. The penalty is a fine of $300 for each of the twenty-one persons allowed to escape.

The introduction of the Australian ballot system in Rhode Island has a depressing influence, on trade on election days. At the late election a good many voters stood about the polls waiting for the customary two dollars before they voted, which didn't come and a good many of them who therefore concluded that their votes were not appreciated didn't vote at all.

While New England missionaries supply the benighted inhabitants of Africa with the light to lead them out of spiritual darkness, there is another class of philanthropists who are resolved that they shall not suffer for want of the spirit that exhilarates and have consequently shipped them within the past year 253,025 gallons of red liquor.

Ex-Congressman McKinley thinks the Republican chances in 1892 are pretty fair, if the Farmers' Alliance don't get to prancing around too lively and knock over the soup pot. He has been trying to pull the wool over the eyes of the farmers and make them believe his tariff is a good thing for them, but thus far he has not met with a brilliant success.

It is said that when she receives her divorce she will marry Dr. Bull, an eminent physician of New York, who treated her in her illness and to whom her cure is attributed.

Wm. J. Florence, of New York, loves to angle for the finny tribe, and sent over to England for five boxes of flies which he ordered by mail. They came by mail when he found that flies were not mailable matter, and that the fine would be equivalent to the duty on them. There must have been a good many flies, or they are high priced flies, since they are billed at $55. With this experience he may now fish for American fish with American flies.

When the New York Press turns itself loose on the English language it is a daisy. If, it says, the Democrats of Chicago "are permitted to steal the city government by fraud, chicanery and false counting," "the Republicans of New York ought to turn their backs like a stone wall on the World's Fair." If the Democrats stole the city government by burglarizing, sand-bagging, picking it out of somebody's pocket, or something of that sort, maybe the Press could stand it, but it is really too bad to have them "steal" it by "fraud, chicanery or false counting." As a matter of curiosity we would like to see a New York stone wall performing the feat of turning its back on the World's Fair. The Press man must have been chock full of indignation if not of beer when he wrote.

Through the verdict of that Dallas jury which acquitted Cash, the Kentuckian who pursued with an avenging shot gun the man who had invaded his home and robbed him of his wife's honor, Texas gives the world to understand that she does not regard the killing of a man in such case murder. If other States viewed it in the same light, and the home invader realized that he took his life in his hand, perhaps there would be less of that thing done.

LAYING THE CORNER-STONE

Of the Y. M. C. A. Building—A Great Gathering—Masonic Ceremonies—Addresses, Etc.

Probably somewhere in the neighborhood of three thousand persons attended the laying of the corner-stone of the Y. M. C. A. building, which took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock with Masonic ceremonies by the Grand Lodge of North Carolina.

A temporary flooring had been laid upon which the stage for the speakers was erected and chairs were placed to seat the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary, the Choir the Second Regiment Band, the Cape Fear Band, and the directors and other officers of the Y. M. C. A. The members of the Masonic fraternity and the Light Infantry were grouped around the stage. The large flag of the Association was suspended in rear of the platform.

The programme was carried out as published in the STAR yesterday. The Light Infantry preceded by the Second Regiment band, escorting the Masons and heading the procession, were followed by the Cape Fear Cornet band of Southport. The Masonic fraternity turned out in larger numbers than ever before.

Mr. P. B. Manning, Vice President of the Y. M. C. A., read the order of exercises and in behalf of the Association expressed the pride and pleasure its members felt in the interest taken in their behalf.

A historical sketch of the Association given by Mr. J. C. Stevenson was short but perfect. It was followed by the laying of the corner-stone with the usual Masonic ceremonies, and then the choir, under the leadership of Mr. H. M. Bowden, sang, with organ and piano accompaniment, "Marching On."

The Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of North Carolina, then addressed the assemblage.

GRAND MASTER GUDGER'S ADDRESS. Live, energetic and enthusiastic efforts, such as have never before been known, are being put forth in behalf of the young men of this country.

They are the hope of society, the stay of the nation, and constitute, in an eminent degree, the happiness of our homes.

From the earliest dawn of Christian civilization, down through the ages to the present moment, the Church and Sunday schools have exerted a most extraordinary and praiseworthy effort to bring them into the paths of right and lead them in the way they should go. Pastors have preached to them, talked and prayed with them, and yet the astonishing fact remains that a large number of them remain outside of the pale of Christian civilization.

The number of the world in which the Christian has risen higher in the scale of importance and influence than the young man. Through his indefatigable labors much of the history which now exists has been written and handed down to posterity. There are but few of the great events of the world in which he has not played an important part.

The greatest statesmen, the most valiant and devoted soldiers, the most successful and devoted reformers of all ages, have been young men.

When it was necessary to change the Hebrew form of government and plant the kingdom of God on earth, God called the young man "Saul" to rule over the people.

Any one at all conversant with ancient and modern history knows the power exerted for good, as well as evil, by the young men.

It was such that made Rome the pride of her people and the envy of the world. In ancient Greece, the young men performed offices which crowned their government with a halo of glory. In both they were the first in athletic sports, the leaders in science and art, and patrons of the schools of the highest and best type then known to the people.

It is a well known fact that the splendor and glory of Athens, the greatness and renown of Sparta, as well as the refulgent light, shed with such brilliant lustre in every country inhabited by the Greek race, had their origin in the result of the energy, vim, and devoted determination of the young men.

In our own country, in the dark days of '76, when the war-cloud hung like a mighty pall over the nation, when the stoutest, bravest and most patriotic hesitated, the young men stepped in and rescued the nation from its peril.

Who can estimate the vast importance of this act? and the influence it exerted upon the crisis which then stirred the nation from centre to circumference?

What do we face? There are in the United States 7,000,000 young men between 16 and 30 years of age. Of this number 5,000,000 are out of the Church, and under little or no religious or moral instruction. They are scattered throughout the country, and come, in their innocent youth, to our cities, to face the great danger of gluttony and intemperance.

The great problem confronts us as a serious proposition: "What shall we do with them? How shall we reach them and save them?"

Many of them are in the paths of vice and shame, and others are upon the very verge which leads to ruin.

There is a great emergency, and how shall we as a people who must give an account, demean ourselves in the solution of this vexed question?

With all credit to the Church which has accomplished such a noble work, we must confess its inability to reach and rescue them. Its messengers and messages have gone for centuries, healing the broken hearted, drying the tears of distress, and performing offices of love and good cheer; yet, with all, five million young men are not reached.

In these associations we have a grand organization extending all over the land, which all denominations can unite for the purpose of doing good. In the rooms are innocent games; the gymnasium, the library, which together with the social features, make it exceedingly pleasant and attractive. What a wonderfully wide field is open for Christian work?

WHAT WORK SHALL BE DONE. The command of these young christian workers is—to go, not alone to the places of luxury and ease, nor to the homes of respectability, nor to the places where the better element congregate; but to every shade and phase of life, in every haunt of crime, in the back alleys of our cities, in every place where there is a brother, (fallen though he may be), to be seen and a human soul to be saved.

As the evil influence like a web surrounds the young men, it is necessary that the better influence be carried side by side with them, to counteract, as far as possible, that which is evil. They must go to our city prisons, jails, houses of refuge, in fact—every where.

DOES IT DO THE WORK OF THE CHURCH? The Y. M. C. A. is not intended to do the work of the Church, or to draw from its life. The two go hand in hand as twin sisters in this great work of reforming. If there is work enough in your church, young man, for you to do, that first and above all things you must do. The experience, however, of mankind is that the more we do the more we can do and the more we want to do. Go early and late. Let there be no one in this entire city who does not feel the powerful influence of your organization and consecrated efforts.

In concluding these remarks, permit me to say, in the language of an eminent writer: "Clouds, black and ominous, hang over us in our national sky, and the heavens are full of angry mutterings; but above shines the sun, and its beams come flooding through the rifts in the darkness, telling us the day is not far distant. Clouds at best are transient things, and have never long resisted the glory and warmth streaming from behind them."

"When we look backward through the ages of human history we find society at a hundred points better than in the centuries past."

"Europe, in the middle ages, was so fearfully corrupt that for awhile it looked as if there would never come a reaction. But under Luther and Calvin and Knox, society swung back towards God in that marvelous movement that gave us all the glory of our modern civilization."

"In the days of Ahab in Israel, idolatry on the surface of national life held everything; but in the retreats of Judea there were seven thousand who never bowed the knee to Baal."

"The student of history cannot lose hope. The general rise of the Christian hope is unmistakable. Sometimes the waters have receded from the shore and the ebb is far out in the great ocean; but those who watch and wait and trust will see the tide come back again with mightier power."

"This is a glorious era. Before us a better; beyond that still better one rising above the other, cloud on cloud, or mountain peak piled on mountain peak till the heights of the future are lost from sight in the glory of the coming Son of man."

After an overture rendered by the Second Regiment Band, Rev. P. H. Hoge, D. D., delivered a short but excellent address, the Doxology was sung by the assemblage, and the people were then dismissed with a benediction pronounced by Rev. W. S. Creasy, D. D.

After the dispersion of the greater part of the crowd, the Light Infantry fired three salvos of musketry, and with the band marched back to their armory, and the Masons to their hall escorted by the Cape Fear Cornet Band.

The articles placed in the corner-stone were: Copies of the Young Men's Monthly, Wilmington MORNING STAR, Messenger, Review, Journal, N. C. Presbyterian, Young Men's Era, N. Y. Herald, programme of ceremonies of the day, historical sketch of the Wilmington Y. M. C. Association, list of officers and committees of the Ladies Auxiliary, list of members of the Board of Aldermen and Board of Audit and Finance of the city of Wilmington, specimens of Confederate currency and of North Carolina currency, a bill of the Virginia State Treasury, letter envelope of the Y. M. C. A.
