which is said to be taking shape, is one to divert the trade of Mexico, South and Central America from New York and other Southern ports to New Orleans, making it the great

port of entry, and thence by rail to Chicago, which is to be the great distributing point.

The Illinois railroad, one of the strongest railroad corporations in the country, is in it. The scheme embraces the building of steamships to ply between New Oorleans and the Mexican, Central and South American ports, and an international bank at New Orleans and at Chicago to faciltate exchange between the respective countries traded with. There is money enough at command to accomplish all this. Agents are now in Mexico and the South and Central American states enlisting cooperation in this scheme, and making contracts. If this scheme be carried out in anything like the proportions contemplated it will make New Orleans and Chicago the two greatest commercial cities in the United States. New Orleans in addition to being the port of entry for the commerce of the countries south of us will also be the great shipping point for the grain, meat and other products of the West which pass through Chicago to the markets of the world. As Chicago, the great metropolis of the West, becomes more closely identified with New Orleans, so will the West become more closely identified with the South, and as their interests become identified so will their action be directed to their mutual prosperity. Commercially bound together they will be politically bound together for the accomplishment of those objects in which they have a common interest, such as improving the South Atlantic and Gulf harbors and the construction of internal water-ways to afford cheaper transportation for the products of shown to be a myth.

A CHICAGO PROJECT.

Chicago is the livest city in America. There is no enterprise too colossal for her to tackle and she will unhesitatingly undertake schemes which more matter-of-fact cities would regard as visionary impossibilities. She is to-day, although a town to its present proportions within the life of men who are still moving in her business circles, the metropolis of the West and will be at the present rate of increase, within a couple of decades, the metropolis of the Republic. She has become what she is mainly by the energy, enterprise, liberality, public spirit,

A correspondent of the Raleigh Chronicle writing from Kittrell says a mineralogist who recently visited Granville and Vance counties found fifty-seven minerals on the edge of Granville county adjoining Vance. Fifty-seven minerals would be a pretty good showing for a whole county and a pretty good sized one, too, much less a small slice. Some of this mineral is valuable, or will prove so if found to exist in sufficient quantities. The fact is few people have any idea of the variety or extent of the mineral resources of North Carolina, for but little attention has ever been given to this subject, which, however, is now beginning to command some of the atten-
