WILMINGTON, N. C.

There is growing in central North Carolina a thin-shelled hickory which is superior in quality of meat and respect and recognition as a white person, and that color alone should not be a bar to his recognition. This has been logically, if not so ex-growth. Warmth is greatly needed. In portions of the Central and Western Districts the rainfall was heavy enough to do some damage to cotton. Transplanting tobacco is in progress. On the evening of the 12th a severe hail-storm occurred in the south-eastern part of the Western District, especially over the eastern half of Gaston county, and the central part of Mecklenburg county, extending down into Union and Anson counties. It was particularly heavy at Charlotte, and did great damage to crops over all the region covered. EASTERN DISTRICT. Weather continued very dry and warm up to the night of the 12th; followed by much cooler weather with rain, which has been very beneficial. The rainfall was only slightly in excess of the average in the northern portions of the district. The excess for the week was .30 at Norfolk; the deficiency at Wilmington .80 inch. The deficiency in temperature has been about 14 degrees for the week all occurring on the last three days. Cool weather has retarded growth of crops. Rainfall for the week: Wilmington, .08 inch; Blackman's Mills, 1.33; Weldon, 1.20; Tarboro, 1.75. CENTRAL DISTRICT. The rainfall was much heavier in this district, the excess being over 1.50 inches. Cotton was slightly injured by heavy rain and cool weather in southern portions. The rain would have been more favorable had the weather continued warm, but the result on the whole has been to put crops in betand about to squeeze the daylights ter condition. ### NUT CULTURE.

We have several times in these columns called attention to the sub ject of nut culture, especially of the pecan, as an industry in which the farmers of this State, especially in the eastern and central portions of it, might engage with profit. The pecan belongs really to the hickory nut species and can be successfully grown wherever the hickory tree will grow.

The culture of the pecan is now engaged in to a limited extent in this State, in South Carolina, in Florida and in Texas, but the culture is yet in its infancy and will never be very extensively engaged in because there are few persons who have patience to wait seven or eight years to realize from a crop planted. This is one reason why there need be no fear of the industry being overdone.

We were very much interested in a letter published in the Charleston News and Courier, a few days ago, written by a gentleman at Bamberg, what he knows about pecan growing a paying industry.

He began planting fifteen years orchard to which he will add sixty-$150 to the acre, and at fifteen years at the rate of $300 to the acre. There is only one crop in this country that will do that, and that is the finest kind of tobacco. It is from four to eight times as much as fair cotton land will produce. It is five times as much as the average tobacco crop will yield, fifteen times as much as the average wheat crop the average corn crop.

The man who plants cotton, tobacco, wheat, corn, etc., has to plow, plant, cultivate and harvest every year, taking his chances on frosts, floods, droughts, storms and insects, and then when the gauntlet of growing and harvesting the crop is run, must take his chances on a market which may be oversupplied and the prices consequently low, too low to pay the cost of cultivation and leave a margin for profit.

flavor to the average pecan, and equal to the best, which if planted and cultivated would prove almost if not quite as profitable as the pecan. And there is the walnut, too, which in eight or ten years would be valuable not only for the nut but for the timber, becoming more valuable for both every year as the pecan and hickory do.

There is an inviting field open for he didn't see her, said: "Mr. Presinut culture in this State for the young man who will enter it. As a source of revenue, with little labor or little risk, it holds out inducements that no other crop grown can offer.

The people of New Orleans were not wanting in justification for the viction that his professions were not heroic method they adopted to extirpate the Mafia, but if there was anything lacking in their justification it was supplied in the declarations of the Italian Consul just before his recall to Italy. He said that the night after the lynching of the men in the parish jail, a meeting was Barnwell county, S. C., who tells held at which it was resolved to assassinate the Mayor of the city, and the possibilities that are in it as Messrs. Parkerson, Wickliffe and other men prominent in the proceedings against the Mafia. A number ago, and has now a thirty-five acre of the men who were at this meeting, filled with a thirst for vengeance five acres more this winter. At ten and determined to take it, called on years his trees yielded at the rate of him and informed him of their purpose. He says he had to argue and expostulate with them for hours before he could dissuade them from carrying out their bloody resolution. Later another party called, just took right hold of that snake by eastward into the Central District. among whom there was some women, loud in their demands for vengeance, to inform him that they had determined to blow up with dynamite the club house to which the men whose will yield, twenty times as much as blood they demanded belonged, intending to destroy them in the wreck of the house. He had to use his most persuasive powers to prevent this plot from being executed. It does not seem that at any time he about it which staggers us. We took the precaution or the trouble don't mind the big snake, for snakes to inform the parties whose names were on the death roll of their danger or of any plots against them. If there was any proof needed of the vicious and dangerous character of the men against whom the people of pressed, Mr. Harrison's position; but he has never carried it out in practice. That he carries within him, in spite of all his professions, the color prejudice as deeply rooted as anyone was strikingly shown at Portland, Oregon, where he refused to shake hands with a respectable old colored woman. When she extended her hand, he turned away. She, thinking dent, I want to shake hands with you." Instead of shaking hands with her, as he had been doing with the white people, he simply said: "Excuse me," and turned away from her. The old woman felt deeply hurt at this rebuff from a man whom she was taught to look upon as an especial friend of her race, and she went away fully impressed with the con-

The Greensboro Record trots out the champion snake story so far this season. It was about a snake about as big round as a stove pipe and between twelve and some more feet long, twisted around the neck of a cow girl came meandering along and interrupted the proceedings. This girl was attracted by the noise which the cow made in her efforts to get released from the snake which was tightly coiled around her neck. When that girl saw the snake it might be supposed that she would "git up and git," but she didn't. She the nape of the neck, gave it a twist and landed it very much surprised upon the ground. The snake, taken so suddenly, without time to collect its thoughts, didn't stop to ask that girl any questions, but it just waddled off into the thicket. There are some people who are so incredulous that they do not believe this story, but there is only one thing do grow pretty large sometimes and there is plenty of room in Guilford county for snakes to grow; it has a good and healthful climate, also, We don't doubt the cow part of it but we do doubt that it was a Guil-
