FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 24, 1891

THE WHITE DODGE.

The Republican party leaders have tried every method that has ever suggested itself to them to Republicanize the South, and every effort they have ever made has resulted in making the South, the white people of the South, more solidly Democratic.

After perusing Mr. Griffin's rose-water scheme it is our candid conviction that if Mr. Griffin waits for the White man's Republican party to materialize in the South, the archangel will have to send out on the morning of resurrection and have him hunted up with a search warrant.

There is a movement on foot among the labor organizations of Boston to get the city to establish a municipal coal yard and sell coal to purchasers at cost.

really and beyond controversy a Democratic State Texas, the others being Republican, but for certain reasons carried by the Democrats.

He divides the Southern States into two groups, one consisting of Maryland, Delaware, Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, which he calls the "Upper South," and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Florida, Louisiana and Texas, which he calls the "Lower South."

In the Lower South, he says, although naturally Republican, the Republican party has nothing to expect because the colored voters don't count as a factor, being ignored by the ballot counters, while in the Upper South the Republican party would have a fighting chance if it were not for the negro, whose vote is ignored when occasion requires it as it is in the Lower South, but whose presence in the Republican party on account of the race-prejudice makes the white man who might, if it were not for this, become Republicans vote solidly against the Republican party.

He expresses the candid opinion that if the Republican party intends to wage the campaign of 1892 upon the old lines, and concede the solid South to the Democratic party, the nominee of the Democratic party may write his inaugural immediately after his nomination, for he says it will be difficult to persuade the people to believe that the work of the 51st Congress was good.

The money scheme has been already tried, and if there ever was any virtue in it it never panned out, for the "trustees," who were selected for the distribution of the funds generally distributed most of it around in their own pockets, while the scrimmaging over the federal offices always got the rival factions to pulling each other's hair and bringing their dirty linen to Washington to wash.

MINOR MENTION.

poorer classes with wholesome food at as low a price as possible, and they have met with such success that they have not only proved self-sustaining, but the number is increasing annually.

Reports as to the situation in the mining region of Tennessee are somewhat conflicting. A Knoxville dispatch of Tuesday says that Gov. Buchanan came to that city, where, after a conference with the officers of the militia, who had been sent to suppress the outbreak, and with citizens, he met a committee representing the miners, whom he informed that he had called the Legislature together, that he had recommended a modification or repeal of the convict lease law, and proposed that if the miners would pledge themselves to be quiet, and permit the convicts to work in the mines until the Legislature could take action, he would withdraw the militia.

The Farmers' Alliance of Maryland is not taking any stock in the third party movement, but proposes to work as the Alliance in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and other Southern States did last year, within the Democratic party lines. This is level-headed, and will prove much more effective in securing at least some of the demands they make than kicking out of the traces and striking out on the independent line.

Ex-U. S. Senator Jones, who resides in Dubuque, who represented Iowa in the Senate previous to the war, has the distinction of having named the States of Wisconsin and Iowa. He also had the distinction when in the Senate of being the most gifted, graceful, eloquent, effective and able swearer in either House.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Ohio has the secret ballot law, and it is presumed that a very large percentage of the campaigning there this year will be done on the underground plan also.

Cable companies are said to be severely suffering from the McKinley high tariff law. Since it has crowded out imports and stopped traffic with other countries the merchants and manufacturers of Europe have no use for the cable because they have no business with America.

The able politician who is booked to succeed Senator Quay as Chairman of the Republican National Committee is the same adroit Mr. Clarkson, of whom ex-Senator Platt, the political boss of the New York Republicans, said at the Coney Island banquet last Friday: "We love him for the heads he has cut off." With Mr. Clarkson at the helm, Civil Service Reform would quickly go the way of the vanished Treasury surplus.

THE COLORADO DESERT.

Characteristics of the Great Area Now Becoming an Inland Sea. The Colorado Desert covers 3,000 square miles and extends about 100 miles from the Colorado River to Seven Palms, on the Southern Pacific Railroad. It is in San Diego county, the southernmost county in California. It includes the Indio, or Coachella, Valley, lying between the San Bernardino range of mountains on the northeast and the San Jacinto range on the southwest.

on the south, 395 feet above sea level, to Salton, seventy-five miles north and 263 feet below the sea level, is said to have no parallel in railroading in this country.

The dry lakes are flat, yellowish-white patches of soil that to the eye are as level and smooth as a marble floor. They vary in extent from a few yards to three or four miles in diameter. During the rainy season they are covered with a few inches of water, and are thus converted into actual lakes for a short time.

The soil in many places is very peculiar. It is known as "self-raising ground." After being wet it rises and cracks open, and after becoming dry is so light and soft that one will sink six or seven inches into it at every step.

Lizards and horned toads abound. They dart past or lie panting on the ground unnoticed, unless it be some peculiarly marked or brilliantly colored one.

Rattlesnakes are numerous. The most interesting of these is the "sidewinder." This is a small, grayish snake with ordinary rattler's markings. Its length is about eighteen inches. Over each eye is a horn about one-eighth of an inch long. The peculiar features of this snake are its horns and its occasional mode of locomotion. It is the most dreaded of the rattlesnakes.

Many lives have been lost on the arid desert. In many of the cases of death by heat and thirst gross carelessness and ignorance of known watering places was the primary cause, though it is difficult to conceive of the terrible heat of those veritable ovens of the desert.

Those who have visited it say that it is beyond human power of description to picture the wholly unnatural scene to be beheld in some parts of the desert—the vast stretches of white plain variegated with black lava, the alluring mirages, the total absence of trees, the dearth of animal life and the intense heat, from which there is no escape.

IT WAS HOT.

Marcus Daly, the rich miner and crafty politician, of Montana, stood in front of the Auditorium yesterday when the sun's rays were hottest. He was waiting for a carriage, and wishing for winter. It seemed as if every acquaintance that nodded to him said something about the warm day, and this was becoming tiresome.

"Good morning, Mr. Daly." "Morning." "Hot, isn't it?" "What say?" asked the politician as he almost looked through the young man.

"I say it's hot." "Didn't quite get you," and he put his hand to his ear. "I said," and the fellow yelled, "It's hot; quite hot." "Step into the hotel a moment." The two men walked inside the hotel and Mr. Daly said: "You have known me for three or four years."
