FRIDAY MORNING, AUG. 28, 1891

A SIDE ISSUE.

In his opening speech in the campaign in Ohio, Mr. McKinley spread himself on the free coinage question, his purpose being to put the Democrats on the defensive and make that the issue in the contest.

As it is simply a State election, the discussion of the silver question or the tariff question or any other national question seems to be somewhat out of place, but the custom has been prevalent for some time to discuss national questions in State and even county campaigns, and the Ohio campaigners are simply following the custom. Mr. McKinley is shrewd in playing the silver game, or any other game that might divert the attention of the people from the tariff, which is one of the subjects that he don't care to discuss more than he is absolutely compelled to.

In view of the fact that there is such a difference of opinion among the Democrats of that State on the coinage question, and such strong opposition in the convention to incorporating the coinage plank in the platform, it is unfortunate, perhaps, that it was incorporated for it gave the Republicans a chance to make a leading issue out of something which is really but a side issue, and one in which there is no principle whatever involved, the only question in it being whether or not there is a sufficient volume of money in circulation and if not whether all the silver presented at the mints should be coined into currency, or only a stated portion of it. The free and unlimited coinage advocates insist that all should be; others that only a part should be. They both agree on the coinage but differ as to the amount, so that it is not a question of principle, but only of the quantity to be coined between them.

Mr. McKinley and those who agree with him believe in the smaller amount, to keep the volume of currency down, prices down and interest up, while the free coinage men believe in the larger amount to increase the volume of currency, put prices up and interest down. All this clap trap about "honest" money

That Member of the Prussian Parliament who is advocating a reduction of the standing armies of Europe proposes to begin at home and suggests the re-cession of Alsace-Lorraine to France on condition that France join Prussia, Austria and Italy in a league for the preservation of the peace of Europe, thus practically combining against Russia, and the same time permitting a general reduction of and removing the necessity for large standing armies in any of those countries. From a money standpoint Germany could much better surrender Alsace and Lorraine than to hold them. The keeping up of a great army made necessary by the enmity of France, and her determination to recover possession of these two provinces when the opportunity presents has entailed an expense on Germany amounting to more than the indemnity exacted from France, and at the present rate of expenditure it will not be long before another thousand million dollars will be added. And this rate of expenditure must be kept up while Alsace and Lorraine are held or untij France is so badly used up that she will be no longer formidable. Therecession of these provinces, which can never be Germanized would remove the only obstacle to reconciliation between Prussia and France, and would relieve them and other powers acting in conjunction with them of the heavy burden of maintaining in idleness, with gun in hand, so to

Among the various schemes suggested for helping the cotton grower in the depressed condition of the cotton market, a writer in the Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser suggests that the expenses of handling the crop be cut down all around, that the commission merchants and wareis the thinnest rant especially when housemen reduce their charges, that are original claims. being three or four bushels but in other years it is quite scant; if we have a late frost it cuts short the crop but there are always some nuts on the trees.. Our experience is that they begin bearing in about ten or twelve years. There are also pecan trees on the premises of Messrs. B. P. Williamson, C. Bruce Wright and A. W. Haywood.

My father planted six or eight pecan trees on the east side of Capitol Square about fifteen years ago, and they are also thriving well. If I mistake not Mr. J. N. Holding planted about two hundred of these trees on his place in this county in 1885, but what success he had with them I am not informed. In this connection I will add that

Mr. R. H. Battle has in front of his residence an English Walnut tree, which bears most excellent nuts, but I have not heard of anyone else that has tried this nut hereabouts. Truly it seems we can raise almost

CURRENT COMMENT.

---- The Republican organs in this State have given up in despair the attempt to interpret the silver resolution in the recent Harrisburg platform. Possibly the author of the resolution may be persuaded to come forward with an explanation. -Phil. Record, Dem.

- There is something very suspicious-almost alarming-in the care with which Gov. Bois is distributing his speeches throughout the country "in advance of delivery" and "for publication not before" such a date. We greatly fear that the Governor has a bee .- New York Advertiser, Ind.

- The real extent of the boom of Blain for the Republican nomination for the Presidency was never fully realized until after the action of the recent Pennsylvania Convention. It had really been fully determined before that convention met to place a plank in the platform declaring Blaine to be the choice of the Pennsylvania Republicans, and although afterwards it was decided that to do this would be impolitic, it was generally understood that such was the sentiment of the banner Republican State of the East .- Richmond Times, Dem.

- It begins to look as though the generals in command of the Union armies of the war were neglectful of their duties and did not know how many men they commanded. Commissioner Raum, who is disposing of 30,000 pension claims a month, says he has 900,000 still on file, and of these full a half million

6. He says he has been on good behavior for sixteen years, and entitled to a pardon.

And now, having fully answered the jackass allegations brought by the Boston alligator, the defendant prays to be hence dismissed, with his costs in this behalf most wrongfully expended.

BALD-HEADED COTTON SEED.

Something New in the Way of Cotton

Charleston News and Courier. The Spartanburg correspondent of the Greenville News says, in a letter written a few days ago, that the lintless cotton seed plant whose discovery was announced in the News and Courier last year and was much derided at that time, "has come to 'stay.'

Mr. H. T. Ferguson exhibited a stalk of the plant in Spartanburg on Friday, which contained three hundred bolls, each boll filled with large plump seed. He has taken much pains to get the variety perfect, and announces that he "will seed enough this year to plant the entire State.' The estimated yield is four hundred bushels to the acre. The product is easily harvested, but the bolls must be gathered as they begin to crack, else the seed will fall to the ground. The yield of oil, it is further reported, is about one-third more than that of ordinary cotton seed.

If all these statements are literally true, it is seen that South Carolina has developed another new and important agricultural industry, and will soon be able to supply the world with a practically unlimited quantity of vegetable oil, stock food and fertilizers. It would be a remarkable result truly, if the cotton seed crop should largely supplant the cotton crop, but it may come to that in the end. These are record breaking times and the cotton plant is as full of surprises as a monkey. A hundred years ago there was some doubt about whether cotton could be grown in this country. This
