IN 182 YEARS

The World Will Be Entirely Peopled Startling Calculations. Pall Mall Gasette.

At the meeting yesterday there was a joint assembly of the geographical and economic sections, to consider the subject of the lands of the globe still available for European settlement. The audience consisted of a proportion of quite seveneights of ladies. Sir Lambert Playfair dwelt upon the importance of the subject, especially after the official inquiry recently held in London, upon the question of colonization, which showed that many old fields of emigration were being closed to European emigrants. E. G. Ravenstein produced an elaborate set of statistics to show that the world will, in the ordinary course of things be fully inhabited in about 182 years, which estimate considerably extends the period at which some learned men believe humanity will be crowded out. Having previously swept away the arctic and antarctic regions as not being essential for his argument, he parceled the remainder out of the earth into: Cultivable land, 28,469,000 square miles; steppe, scrub, poor grass, etc., 13,901,000 square miles; barren deserts, 4,180,000 square miles-a total of 46,350,000 square miles. The population living on this he reckons at a little over 4,467,000,000, divided thus: Europe, 360,200,000; Asia, 850,000,000; Africa, 127,000,000 (a much lower estimate than most people compute); Australia, 4,730,000; North America, 89,250,000; South America, 36,500,000.

Mr. Ravenstein showed how, supposing the standard of life among the various peoples to remain the same, supposing the population increases at the rate of 8 per cent. in every decade, and supposing there are no extraordinary improvements in agriculture, the population of the world in the year 2072 will be 5,994,000,000. In speaking of the bear (mentioning 207 individuals to the square mile as a fair average), he suggested that the productiveness of the earth might be better utilized when people understood economy. In expressing a general opinion that tropical countries are not fit for Europeans, he granted exceptions to the rule, as, for example, in certain wellknown highlands of Africa. One of the theories propounded is that there is a gradual migration of people southward, so that in time a race of European origin may arise who will be acclimated to the tropics. Europe. On the whole Mr. Ravenstein does not despair that the world will be over populated, because as new developments occur new adaptations will be found to meet them. The Rev. John Mackenzie expressed the opinion that the Zanzebesi will all, in course of time, be suited for European residents. J.W. Wells who has traveled 3,000 miles in Argentine and Brazil, thought that there is every prospect of a speedy construction of a vast system of rail and fluvial communication all over the country. The sum total of the discussion so far was an assurance that there are plenty of places in the world fit for population; that there is a demand for population all over the world, and that we need not particularly worry ourselves as to whether the globe will be over-populated in generations to come. John Coles, the Geological Society and travelling editor of the Field, later added that he had yellow fever in Brazil, and seen a fever in the high plateaux of British Columbia that was very like it. He had known malarial fever produced by irrigation in new countries, and he warned his hearers that many of the lands in the far West of North America which were represented as available by the extortionate demands of speculative and sharks.

but I haven't got no grit. Any boy can lick me. Come now." "May 1 lick you ?"

"Yes. Now I'll get down on my stomach, and you just pile on to me and hammer till I holler.' He took position, the little one plled on and pounded him about the shoulders till he cried "enough." And when they got up the small boy was radiant and exclaimed :

"Didn't I make you holler, though! Now I'll go home and lick my two sisters.'

SATURDAY MORNING, OCT. 10, 1891

A CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION.

A couple years ago the Democrats of the West inaugurated what they called a "campaign of education." Speakers who had made the tariff a study went among the people, addressed meetings to which every one was invited and discussed the tariff question, not from a partisan but from an economic standpoint. That this campaign of education educated is shown by the result of the elections last Fall. The educating process is still going on and the consequent revolution in public sentiment is going on, too.

One effect this campaign of education had, and that was to get the people to thinking for themselves and to asking questions, two things which they had been but very little in the habit of doing before that, which accounts for the successful false or irrelevant issues, and to humbugging of the people into the support of measures most detrimental to them until they began to think and study for themselves.

One of the most remarkable things in all this game of humbug is the success the tricksters met with in fooling the working men of the country into the belief that a high tariff was a good thing for them, when such an assertion carries absurdity on its face; but the working men and farmers that placed their faith in the men that talked that way, didn't do any thinking for themselves, and consequently could not see the absurdity which was plain to every one else. It is not so bad now. The tricksters are not playing the game as successdue to local causes. In addition to fully as they did. The farmers and the new enterprises announced or the toilers in other callings are docontemplated, aggregating investing a little more thinking for themments amounting to $3,785,000, it selves than they formerly did, and announces the signing of a contract are not so easily duped. His queer-shaped stirrups are redolent of the old mines. His bridle is in like manner adorned, with metal in the shape of half a dozen big silver plates, and to his bit is attached a pair of knotted red cord reins, which he holds high up and loose. How Young Brown Won the "100" Mark. Youth's Companion.

A teacher in a suburban schoo not long ago gave her pupils twelve minutes in which to write an "abstract." A shoe was the subject selected by her, and the boys were to write in the first person. No limit to the number of words or lines was given them. Most of the boys wrote-and erased, during the whole time alotted, but the teacher noticed one fellow who sat idle until the time was within two minutes of expiring. As the scholars filed out she said to him: "Brown, did you finish your ab stract?" "Yes ma'm," he answered. Curious to see what he could have
