WILMINGTON, N. C.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JAN. 13, 1892.

STAVING IT OFF. The disposition among the leaders of the Democratic party is to avoid distracting issues and to fight the next campaign on the issue of tariff reform and the record of the Billion Dollar Congress. They do not consider it wise whether they favor free silver coinage or not to let that be an issue and to put the Democratic party on record either for or against it. There are Western and Southern Democrats who favor it, and there are Eastern and Northern Democrats who are opposed to it. There are Southern and Western States which would vote for it, and there are Eastern and Northern States which would vote against it. If the effort were made to commit the National Democratic Convention to it, the effort were unsuccessful, while it is doubtful whewould win one State which the Democrats cannot carry without it, it would endanger several States whose vote is absolutely necessary to Democratic success in the next election, so that we would run the risk of losing the election without getting one inch nearer to free coinage, but on the contrary would be getting still further from it.

This is the situation as thoughtful Democrats see it, and this is the reason why there is a disposition to side-track that issue and let it bide its time until more important issues are settled.

In his speech at the banquet given by the Business Men's Democratic Association of New York on the 8th inst., Congressman Springer such as would meet the approval of Democrats of all sections of the country.

It comes from other sources that a plan has been agreed upon by the leading members of Congress, to stave off the agitation of that question for the present, by which a bill will be passed authorizing the Presicomposed of delegates from the swer. As between the State and the commercial nations of Europe, to in- man let us always be on the side of vestigate and make such recommendations on the silver question as they may deem proper. The nations sending delegations to this congress will not be bound by its in the House, Monday, for the apaction, as its object will sim- pointment of a committee to investiply be to investigate and discuss gate the Pinkerton detective agency, the question of silver money and it was recited that this agency emmake such suggestions or recom- ploys in the respective States an visable. Each country will select its men, who may be called out, pre-

House of Representatives from the House, and five from the Senate as it may elect. It is said that the Republicans will also favor this plan as they too are afraid of the silver question and would be very glad to give it a rest and co-operate in any plan which promised to do that. Color is given to this by the resolution offered in the Senate Monday by Senator Tel-

As a party it is a more troublesome question to them than it is to the Democrats, for they are committed against it and must remain committed against it if it continues to be a question for agitation, while the Democratic party, as a party, is committed neither one way nor the other. The Democrats can let it alone without being any the worse for it than they are now, but the Republicans can't let it alone if it be agitated, for to be consistent they must oppose it square out. This being so, in the uncertainties attending the agitation, they will be very glad to put it to sleep, and go into the campaign on other issues which they think haven't so much dynamite in them.

But whether this be so or not, the Democrats will act wisely in eliminating that from the issues on which they are to make the next canvass, and subordinating it to the more important issues on which all Democrats are united, especially as there is no possibility of carrying through a silver coinage bill if they were united upon it. If a bill passed the House and the Senate Mr. Harrison would veto it, for his position on that question is too well known to leave ground for the hope that he would sign it. He could not do so without stultifying himself and swallowing his own words. In his message he intimated that he would favor free coinage on an international ratio of coin values and expressed a belief that a majority of the American people would also or it on this basis.

This idea of calling a congress of nations is a step in that direction and perhaps that is the reason why he and other Republicans are in favor of the plan suggested, as it provides for this. At all events it is about the best and wisest disposition that can be made of the coinage question at present.

MINOR MENTION.

When the U. S. Supreme Court reversed the ruling of Judge Graham in the case of Charles Counselman of Illinois, as reported in the STAR of Tuesday, it did the right thing, although it may hamper, as suggested, the operations of the Inter-State Railway Commission. In the language of Senator Hill: "In the long-standing case of the State against the man we should always be on the side of the man and his liberty." This is where the Supreme Court stood in this case when it held that the clause of the constitution which provides that in a criminal case a man may not be compelled to criminate himself, shall have the broadest interpretation. There has been a disposition for some years, in the effort to secure what is called reformatory legislation, to ignore the individual and hence the laws sometimes vest tribunals with inquisitorial powers, as has been done in the case of the Inter-State Commission, the census bureau, and sometimes in the case of special investigating committees of Congress and State Legislatures, which have under these laws assumed the right to ask all manner of questions, and to demand answers to them. In this case Mr. hinted at an understanding, and said | Counselman very properly refused there was not the slightest probability | to tell whether he had ever secured of a free coinage bill being passed at | from any railroad company special this session of Congress, but declared | rates for the shipment of grain lower that if any action would be taken | than the open rates to other shipupon the silver question it would be pers. Practically speaking, the commission by these questions, if they had been answered, proposed to make Mr. Counselman a prosecuting witness, and at the same time hold him liable under the law as a party to its violation. He refused to answer, the Supreme Court says he was right and that Judge Gresham was wrong when he held Mr. Coundent to convene a monetary con- selman for contempt in refusing to gress at Chicago next year, to be obey the order of his court and an-men, as they have done in many instances. They are some times employed for the special reason that many of them being sent in from other States they are presumed to have no sympathy with the striking workmen, and will therefore be more useful and effective than sheriff's posses or the militia. There were few people who had any idea that this agency controlled such a force as that, and was such a power, commanding really a larger body of men than the United States Army. It is a subject well worthy of investigation, and of thorough and serious investigation, too.

Hon. J. S. Henderson Represeutative of the 7th District of this State, has introduced a bill in the House to repeal the ten per cent. tax on the circulation of State banks, and Senator Teller, of Colorado, has introduced a resolution in the Senate instructing the Finance Committee to report a bill for the same purpose. It is a somewhat significant fact that this resolution has been introduced by a Republican Senator and one of the strongest advocates of the free coinage of silver. It comes logically from him, however, as one of the principal reasons for advocating free coinage is to increase the volume of currency, which can be done by repealing this ten per cent. tax on State bank circulation, more speedily and effectively than in any other way. The result will be the prompt establishment of State banks whereever there is need for more circulating medium than the business interests can command under the present monetary system.

STATE TOPICS.

The Hendersonville Times says there is a practical miner out there who thinks there is a fair prospect of finding coal oil or natural gas in that section, and is so firmly convinced of it that he has made a proposition to the owners of 23,000 acres to agree to bore a well 2,000 feet deep, unless coal oil or gas be struck at a less depth, on condition that they give him a five years' bond on the property and contribute $1,000 to help defray the expense of boring. While the bond lasts no one is to have the privilige of mining or boring for oil or gas upon the land. This looks like business unless it may be a scheme that this man has resorted to for getting possession of a valuable piece of mineral land. He might very well afford to bore a two thousand foot well when the owners of the land contribute $1,000, for the privilege of five years' time to speculate on 23,000 acres of mineral land.

CURRENT COMMENT.

- Senator Stewart's discovery that a free-coinage law is already on the books, gives a decidedly argentiferious appearance to the horizon. President Harrison will surely have his silver brick turned into coin now. -Louisville Courier-Journal, Demo-

- Why should we assume that Chili has done what is right only because we blustered? The bantam Republic has shown Castilian courtesy for years in making no outcry against Egan. The same grave courtesy recalls Matta's unauthorized letter without regard to bayonets or squadrons or other relics of barbarism .- N. Y. Com. Advertiser,

- It is no doubt true that Mr. Harrison was elected president largely on his promise to make Mr. Blaine Secretary of State. There's where Benjamin had the advantage of James, for if the latter were to ask for the votes of the people on the assurance that he would make Mr. Harrison Secretary of State it would snow him under .- Chicago Mail, Democrat.

- This would be a good time for President Harrison to send his gerrymander message to the Ohio Legislature. The proposed apportionment law will give the Democrats four out of the twenty-one Congressmen of that State. The present law gave the Democrats fourteen out of twenty-one. The fair proportion would be about ten Democrats and eleven Republicans. And this is what we call popular government.-Indianapolis Sentinel,

SENATOR PLUMB'S SCARS.

He Carried Them Through Lafe as Evidences of Heroic Devotion.

Years ago, when Plumb was a poor and comparatively unknown man, he found himself in Lawrence, Kan., says a Washington correspon-There he heard of a man who in a miserable dugout on the prairies was dying of the smallpox, alone and without the benefit of either clergy or doctor.

Smallpox was then more dreaded than it is now, and when his neighbors knew what was the matter with him, they fled for their lives and refused to go near him.

Mr. Plumb heard the story and was moved by it. It seemed incredible to him that a man should be allowed to die in this way. He went to the superintendent of the poor and urged him to take some action in the matter. The superintendent was as much afraid of the scourge as was everybody else. His official eyes were conveniently closed to the

If friends of the sick man, he said, would report the matter to him he would investigate it, but until that was done he could not be expected to run round looking for dying men. He happened to remember that about twenty miles from Lawrence lived a family that were acquaintances of his. He hired a buggy and drove to their farmhouse, explained the situation to them, and offered to pay them if they would take care of the patient. They agreed to do this, and the next day the farmer's big wagon carried the poor fellow to where some kind of comfort and attention awaited him.

Plumb himself stayed with him for some days, attending him as faithfully as if the man had been his brother. Then the future Senator went about his business, but in a short time he was down with the smallpox and came very near dying. Plumb recovered, although the scars on his face remained to tell of his heroism and humanity. The man who was rescued by Plumb also recovered. He pros pered and was sent to the Legislaure. He never forgot that it was Plumb to whom he owed his life, and when Plumb's name was first mentioned for the Senate this man worked early and late for him.

He told his associates the story, and it did as much as anything else to elect Plumb to the United States
