The Morning Star.

By WILLIAM H. BERNARD. WILMINGTON, N. C.

THURSDAY MORNING, JAN 4, 1894.

WEALTH CREATES WEALTH.

The wealth of this country has grown amazingly within the past thirty years. So has the wealth of the world, but both in this country and in others, it is the few who are wealthy while the many are poor, and the few are growing wealthier while the many are growing poorer. There are two reasons for this, one which is that wealth creates wealth and is constantly, if invested, which it generally is, adding to itself, and the other is that nearly every legislative body in the world guards wealth with a zealous and jealous care, and sees that it does not suffer from want of protection.

Wealth is sensitive, alert and quick to perceive anything that might militate against it, and where there is danger and when there is need of action or concert of action it is quickly organized to bring its influence to bear upon legislative bodies to carry out what it is interested in or to prevent carrying out what it is opposed to. We have had frequent demonstrations of this in our own country, even within the past few months, and there is no legislative body in the world which has not furnished illustrations of it at some time. There is a fixed and tangible value set upon money by all legislative bodies, and it is the only thing upon which a fixed value is put, and yet money is not a value in itself, but simply a representative of value, a convenient medium of exchange, but by the laws that have been framed this representative of value, this medium of exchange, has become the standard by which all values are fixed. And that is where the man that has the money has the advantage of every other man, and that's why the man who has money has the power to still further enrich himself simply by the use of that money, provided it be judiciously used. Of course a man may lack judgment, tempt fortune, or become the victim of combinations and lose all he has, but the prudent man, who invests wisely and keeps close track of his investments will in time

The history of the Astor, Vanderbilt, Gould, and scores of other families in this country are striking illustrations of this, for there is not one of these families that didn't start with moderate means and some with nothing but pluck and stick, and the capacity to plan and the patience to wait for the fruit of the trees they planted. Every dollar added to the dollars they accumulated made them that much stronger to plan and to accomplish results until the time came when their millions multiplied themselves with less effort than it took to realize the first thousands. Dollars that are wisely handled draw dollars on the principle of accretion, for dollars command interest, and interest whether in the form of dividends from investments in enterprises or industries, or as a royalty for the use of money loaned is the potent factor that adds to the wealth of the rich and builds up those colossal fortunes that we read about and hear of in this and in other countries.

There is no business in the world more profitable than lending money, where there is no danger of loss of the number of unemployed in 119 Large size 50c. and $1.00.

principal or interest, even at a low rate of interest, for in any other business there must be more or less chances taken, and there are more or less contingencies, which, even with much foresight, cannot always be anticipated. If invested in manufactories prices may run low, and dividends be thus cut down; if in rattroads business may be dull, and there may be accidents or disasters that cut up dividends; if in farming droughts or storms or something else may ruin crops, or if crops be good prices may tumble below the profitable notch; but the money at interest goes right along adding to itself until it doubles, trebles, quadruples, adding to itself more rapidly and largely every year, regardless of prices, storms, accidents, disasters, dullness in business, or anything else. The money lender who follows that as a business, not only reaps the benefit of interest, but of compound interest, for the interest of this year goes into the principal of next, until the thousands grow into millions.

The manufacturer, if he depends upon the legitimate profit of the things he makes can add to his wealth only in proportion to the effort he makes to put goods upon the market. He gets but so much and but one return from the goods, be it large or small. There is no doubling up or compounding profits

The tarmer gets a certain price for the products of his soil, and but one. There is no doubling or compound-

The mechanic or the laborer earns fixed compensation which varies but little and is generally fixed at the price the employer can conveniently pay. There is no doubling of wages for him unless there is double work or an extraordinary de mand for his services, and no compounding.

At the end of ten years, prices run ning the same, the output the same, and expenses the same, the manufacend of ten years under the same conditions, the farmer's return is the same. At the end of the ten years the money lender, if he has collected his interest, is twice as rich as he was, or more than twice as rich as he was ten years ago. And in the meantime while he has taken no chances, nor labored nor shown any particular industry or energy, his money has gone on and doubled or more than doubled itself by the power of attraction and accretion commonly known,

Some one once asked Stephen Girard how he accumulated his great fortune, great in his day, but what would be a small affair now. His reply was that he never found any difficulty in making money after he made the first million, and that would probably be the answer of most of the men of great wealth to day, although they might not jocularly put the turning point at a million, for a much less sum would do. There is a magnetism in money that draws money to it, and which always makes it an easy matter for the rich man of ordinary capacity or judgment to

MINOR MENTION.

The reports from all over the South show that this section compared with other sections has more than held its own since the "hard times" began. The manufacturing industries have done reasonably well considering the general stagnation in business, while the cot on manufacturing industry has done remarkably well, the mills declaring dividends varying from six to twelve per cent., many of them running right along and having as much as they could do while mills in other sections were closed. Perhaps the most gratifying feature of these reports is the statement that the farmers genererally are in a better condition than they have been heretofore, that they are less in debt, that there are fewer mortgages registered, and that while they have little spare money there are more of them who have an abundance of home-raised food supplies, and are therefore more independent than they have been for some years. More attention has been given to diversified farming than ever before, the good results of which are apparent. If our farmers continue on this line until diversified farming becomes the rule instead of the exception, and every farmer has his own well stocked grain bins and meat houses, they can get along and keep on top even if the price of cotton shyuld continue among the low notches. They can live and live well whether cotton pans out satisfactorily or not. A recent number of Bradstreet's journal, after careful inquiry placed cities in this country from which figures had been received, at 801,055, and of the dependent at 1,950,110. Out of these 119 cities 20, or a fraction less than one sixth, are Southern cities, in which there are 42,065 unemployed and 122,650 dependent. This is comparatively a good showing for the South, for it shows an average of only 2,103 unemployed to each of these cities and an average of 6,132 dependent. Of course the cities of the South here referred to are not as large as the larger cities in the North nor are they such great manufacturing cities, but making all allowances the proportion of unemployed to the population is sot as great as in the North, and in addition to that dependency down here doesn't mean all that it does up there, for here with our mild winter weather and comparatively cheap living, there is less distress and it is much easier to provide for the dependent. While the cry of distress comes from many Northern cities and municipal authorities and charitable associations are taxed to the utmost to relieve it, we hear of no great cry of distress from any Southern city and of no extraordinary effort being required to provide for the dependent. It must be remembered, too, that at this season of the year there is always more or less of a floating element of the dependent which has drifted Southward, which is probably counted with our dependent in the reports made out.

It begins to look as if the bottom was dropping out of the insurrectionary movement in Brazil, which seems to have had either too much head or not head enough. The fact is both Admiral De Mello and De Gama, have been playing a double game, holding out the pretence to the friends of the Republic that they were for the Republic and to the friends of the monarchy that they were for the restoration of the monarchy. De Gama, who is either more impulsive or less discreet than De monarchy, and when he found that this lost him the support of some of his most trusted officers, he took water, began to explain and claim that his declarations had been misinterpreted and got his foot into it worse than it was before, for the friends of the Republic didn't believe him and the friends of the monarchy became disgusted with what they construed as an exhibition of insincerity and cowardice. With the monarchists and the Republicans both alienated the prospects of picking up recruits for the insurrection seem to be rather slim, if it ever had any substantial recognition among the people, which does appear to have been the case.

CURRENT COMMENT.

-- The operation of the laws re stricting the sale of oleomargarine has been to throw business into the hands of dishonest dealers. There should be no other restriction on the sale of oleomargarine than a heavy penalty for disposing of it as butter. Those who wish to buy it and use it should not be hindered. Those who do not wish to buy it should not be imposed on .- Phil. Record, Dem.

- The minority of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House is too emotional in treating Hawaiian affairs. It starts out with the declaration that "it is an unwritten but universally accepted law that no Administration of any representative Government ever condemns the international policy of a preceding administration"-which may be doubted, as otherwise the international policy of the first Administration must remain forever unchanged.

-Phil. Ledger, Ind. - It seems to have been a bad year for railroads. If there is business depression or stagnation in trade no other great interest feels the effects more quickly. During 1893 investments in railroads aggregating over $1,000,000,000 have gone in the hands of receivers. Receivers have been appointed for no less than seventy-one roads, representing 23,-000 miles of track, with an outstanding bonded indebtedness [of $754,-000,000 and capital stock aggregating $554,000,000, making nearly $1,300,000,000 of stocks and bonds in suspension from returns. Two of the great Western systems, the Northern Pacific and Union Pacific, along with the Reading and New England systems, are the principals to the great crashes of the year .-

Wilmington's Big Racket Store

Having such a steady run of customers during the holida rush. We could not near wait upon our custoners, as we would have desired to do. We had more to do than we could do, and our sales were almost double those of any previous year. However, we have some very nice pre ents left, and lots of pretty and cheap things for the little ones.

We would like to sell our Toys and Fancy Articles for cost. We have not the room to carry them over. All Toys reduced about 25 per cent. to close, and if the Sunday School, come to see us we will lend a helping hand, as we appreciate the many him nesses. helping h nd, as we appreciate the many bin ne-ses the wa as by the generou public.
