Mr. Hewitt, of New York, should not be too severely scolded for those remarks about the Southern statesmen of to-day. Mr. Hewitt sat down to a big dinner which his dyspeptic 'stomach wouldn't let him eat, and he had to vent his spleen in some way. Hewitt is all right but his stomach is all wrong and gets away with his brains, judgment and tongue sometimes.

At a recent dinner given by the Gridiron Club, of Washington, where beefsteak was broiled and served on a slice of bread, without knife, fork or any other tools, Tom Reed won the honors for getting outside of the beefsteak and bread with neatness and dispatch. There were quite a number of Congressmen, Senators, &c., there, but Tom showed the most dexterity of jaw and capacity of girth. Tom isn't an easy man to get girth. MYSTERIOUS RABBIT FOOT The Left Hind Foot Comes to the Front in a Trial at Greensboro.

In the Greensboro Record appears an account of an organ dealer seizing an syrplus of raw cotton. organ, in which a rabbit's foot played a prominent part. Here is the report of

One of these instruments (an organ, not a rabbit's foot) had been sold on the instalment plan to a colored woman. In default of payment the agent of the company made two attempts to get his property but failed. Than he invoked the aid of the law. Aln this be was successful, but instead of taking it by due process, viz: having an officer with him, he, perhaps not knowing any better, went himself and removed the organ. Thereupon the woman had him indicted for trespass. The case was heard some time last fall by Justice Wolfe, and the defendant, the organ agent, was bound over to Court. The case was heard yesterday in the Superior Court. The aggrieved partythe colored woman-testified that the defendant displayed a rabbit's lootsupposed to be the left hind foot of a grave yard rabbit-and that it intimidated her. Asked if she was alraid, she replied she was afraid of the man and the grave-pulled it out, rubbed it over the organ and across her daughter's arm, saying it had never yet gone back on him, thereby, as it were, unnerving her in the performance of her vested rights, allowing such a display of "conjuring," for they returned a verdict of guilty and the delendant was convicted.

Superintendent Byrnes, of the New York police force, says that a distinctive feature of a criminal, especially of a thief, is his foot, and that he can recognize it as far as he can see it. He says that no matter what sort of a boot or shoe a thief may put on, it will take on a rounded look and turn up at the toe.

Generally the arch of the foot is low, but whether it be or not, turning up of the toes is always there, and comes from the thief's characteristic method of walking.

The superintendent said that he had spent many hours studying the feet of criminals, and that in nine cases out of
