FOR YOUR SCRAP BOOK.

Three Good Recipes—They Are Worth Remembering.

DEVILED PEAS. When the peas are boiled take out the meat and cut it into small pieces, then clean the shells thoroughly. With six ounces of crab meat mix two ounces of bread crumbs, two hard-boiled eggs chopped, the juice of half a lemon, Cayenne pepper and salt. Mix all with cream, or what is still better, Bechamel sauce. Fill the shells with the mixture, smooth the tops, sprinkle over sifted bread crumbs and cook them in a quick oven.

COCOA ICING. Cocoa is now much used in the place of chocolate for icing cake. The icing is made by beating the whites of two eggs and mixing with them nearly a cupful of powdered sugar. Add two teaspoonfuls of cocoa. An icing that many prefer is without any eggs. Boil four tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar with the same quantity of water for a minute, then add a teaspoonful of vanilla in pieces. The salt pork may be boiled a minute longer, and the icing will be ready to use.

CLAM CHOWDER. Put fifty clams on the fire in their own liquor, and when they have boiled about three minutes strain them and return the liquor to the fire. Chop a medium-sized onion into small pieces and cut six ounces of pork into dice; fry both a light color in butter. Use a piece of butter the size of an egg; then stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour. When thoroughly cooked add to the clam liquor, with a pint of good stock or milk, the same quantity of cream, a salt-spoonful of mace, a salt-spoonful of thyme; salt to taste, and eight ounces of potatoes cut into dice. When these are cooked and the chowder is about to be sent to table, add the clams cut in dice and four ounces of shipboard or crackers broken in pieces. The salt pork may be omitted, and for the cream use milk with butter melted in it.

ELEVEN HOUSES BURNED.

On the Outskirts of the City—All Small Buildings and Fully Insured.

Fire broke out last night shortly after nine o'clock on the roof of a small dwelling on Lockey's alley, between Seventh and Eighth and Dawson and Wright streets, on the extreme south-eastern border of the city. The fire Department turned out promptly in response to the alarm and the firemen labored earnestly to stay the progress of the flames, but the water supply was remote and insufficient, and before they succeeded, eleven buildings were burned.

The nearest hydrant was at the corner of Eighth and Castle streets, six squares distant, and only one stream could be had, as it took all the hose to make a single line from the hydrant to the fire. In addition to this disadvantage, the Adrian engine working at the hydrant, broke down just as the water started, and the Cape Fear had to be substituted for the Adrian. The delay resulted in a further spread of the fire, and when a stream could be obtained to play on the fire four buildings were in flames.

The houses were all small cheap structures, occupied by colored people. Six were two-room buildings, owned by Mr. C. P. Lockey, and insured for $80 each, and the other five three-rooms each—one owned by C. P. Lockey and insured for $175; three owned by Mrs. E. J. Mott and insured for $150 each, and one owned by Geo. Bell, colored, and insured for $150—in companies represented by Messrs. Atkinson & Son, E. P. Boatwright and Walker Taylor.

The occupants of the houses saved their furniture and other effects.
