COLOSSAL CHEEK.

It would be amusing if it was not disguusting to hear the McKinley statesmen and McKinley organs criticising the Democratic Congress for putting sugar on the dutiable list, and thus "depriving the people" of "free" sugar, taxing the poor man's "breakfast table," as they say, when they, with their dragnet Mc-Kinley bill, caught and taxed nearly every thing from the cradle to the coffin. To hear them talk one would be led to believe that sugar is on the free list in the McKinley bill, when it is not, and there isn't the slightest foundation for the false pretence that it is. The fact is that the people were taxed more for sugar by the McKinley bill than they will be by the Wilson bill as amended by the Senate, the difference being that the McKinley bill levied the tax in a roundabout, fraudulent way, while the Wilson bill levies it in a direct way.

In the disguise of a bounty the people paid two cents a pound on every pound of sugar raised in this country and in addition to this while the McKinley bill gave the Sugar Trust free raw sugar, it also, to cut off the competition of foreign refiners (which might have made sugar cheap) gave it a protective duty of half a cent a pound on manufactured sugars. Every dollar of this been talking of setting up a little bounty amounting last year to about $12,000,000, and would soon amount to about $15,000,000, went into the pockets of the rich sugar planters while the poor sugar planters got none of it, and these rich sugar planters with a few exceptions, were Northern or European capitalists who invested their money in Southern sugar lands and mills. As far as encouraging and developing the sugar-growing industry goes it didn't do it. It only encouraged the investment in large plantations and the erection of more costly plants to work the sugar that was grown by the poorer planters. Some of these drew bounties ranging from $30,000 to $500,000, while the bulk of the bounty was drawn by less than a hundred firms or individuals.

The tax of one-half a cent a pound on refined sugars was intended to be prohibitory, not to encourage the refining industry, which didn't need it, as the immense profits of the Sugar Trust show, but to cut off importations, give the Trust a monopoly of the market and let it fix its own prices on the million or more tons of sugar it handles. Every merchant who deals in sugar will tell you that the difference in the price of sugar under the so-called "free" sugar Mc-Kinley bill and before, when sugar was taxed, was immaterial, while at times when the Trust became more than ordinarily greedy, and the opportunity presented, it locked its warehouses, created a sugar famine and ran the prices up as high as the people would stand.

An instance of this sort of manipulation occurred during the World's Fair when sugar became so scarce in Chicago and other large cities that hotels and housekeepers couldn't get Trust's warehouses, from which it progress and improvement has been

Trust.

Doesn't this show the fraud of the pretence that the McKinley bill gave the people "free" sugar, and that they are going to be terribly taxed by putting sugar on the dutiable list?

But suppose what they say is true, and that sugar was really "free" under the McKinley law, does it follow from this that the people will suffer by putting it on the dutiable list? If there had been no reduction of taxation on other articles used by the people this would be true, for then they would be paying the old McKinley rates with the addition of the difference between the bounty and whatever the sugar tax might amount to. But while a tax has been put on sugar there has been a material reduction of taxation on hundreds of things which are in every day use by the people, the aggregate of which looms so far above the sugar tax that there is no comparison between them. Even upon the most exaggerated estimates by the McKinley bill defenders, where the people would pay one dollar more on sugar (and we predict they will not pay a cent more, for sugar will be as cheap, if not cheaper, under the Wilson than it was under the McKinley bill) they will save fourteen dollars by the reduction of tariff taxation on other things. To the people, while a certain amount of revenue must be raised, it makes practically no difference whether the tax be on sugar or | small. something else, while it is levied on articles which they use and must have. If the total amount of revenue needed could be raised by an income tax, or on high priced goods used by the rich and on luxuries indulged in by the rich, then it might make some difference to the masses of the people, but, of course, this cannot be when so much reve nue must be provided for. Many of the necessaries of life must be taxed and hence what is paid on sugar

Mr. Reuben Kolb, of Alabama, a very much disappointed and dis gruntled man. The trouble with him is that he has a very large-sized opinion of Mr. Kolb, and the Democratic party of Alabama differed from him as to his estimate. He then concluded to swing off and get up a party of his own. This experiment hasn't been successful, either, for he was beaten three times in succession, once for Secretary of State and twice for Governor, and every time he claimed to be elected, just as he is claiming now. He seems to have taken this defeat harder, however, than he did the others, and has government of his own, but on reflection he has concluded to abandon that, and will content himself with simply refusing to "recognize" the Oates Government. Mass meetings of his supporters have been called to be held in the different counties of the State to-morrow, to which cut and dried resolutions have been sent to be adopted, which, of course, will be done, as that is in accordance with the programme drawn up by Kolb and his pals. These resolutions will recite that the Kolbites won in 1892 and in 1894, but that they were counted out, and that they do not intend to submit to that kind of thing any longer; but they will submit all the same, for, on reflection, they will conclude that they will be doing a very foolish thing to kick against the State Government because Mr. Kolb feels sore over his

The Atlanta Constitution speaking of the condition of the farmers of Georgia, says they will "live at home" this year, as they have raised their own home supplies and were never in this respect in a better condition than they are now. With a good supply of food stuffs of their own raising, they are independent of Western grain bins and slaughter pens, and even if the prices of cotton should run low, they can stand it without being badly hurt. In addition to this they are less in debt than they have been heretofore, spent less money, bought less fertilizers, and have made their crops for less money than heretofore, all of which puts them in much better condition in the average than they have been for some years. Georgia is not an exception, for the same is true to a enough to meet their daily wants. It greater or less extent of all the wasn't in the stores. It was in the Southern States. The spirit of

was sent out in quantities to suit the abroad in all and there is every indication that the farmers of the South, profiting by the experience of the past and the happy results of changed methods, will continue on the new lines marked out until they are thoroughly independent and stand on solid ground.

> It is a significant fact that while the New England cotton mills are reducing the wages of their operatives and giving as a reason therefor the small dividends earned in the past nine months, the cotton mills of the South have been earning good dividends and at the same time increasing in number and in capacity. There is no talk of a reduction of wages in this section and no talk of strikes and there never was more confidence among our manufacturers as to the future and their ability not only to keep their wheels running, and pay fair wages but to make money. While they are not selfish enough to enjoy the prospect of the threatened protracted strike in the New England mills they would be the gainers by it. Capitalists who have money to invest in the cotton-manufacturing business will not fail to note the difference between the two sections and that while there is trouble and unrest up there, and complaint of small earnings by the manufacturers, the business is running smoothly in the South and paying handsome profits on investments whether large or

Following the example of Hon. Isidor Straus, of New York, Rabbi Levy, of Philadelphia, has succeeded in organizing a sterilized milk and ice society, which has been in existence two months and has established five stores in the poorer sections of the city, in which sterilized milk and fresh milk, infants' food and disinfectants are sold at cost to those who are able to pay and given free to those who cannot. It has sold 7,300 bottles of sterilized milk and given away large quantities of this and of the other articles mentioned, helping as many as 13,509 persons in one week. The proceeds of sales last week amounted to $405, at an average of 3 cents a sale. McKinley bill gave the country These are movements in the right direction which should be encouraged in all of our large cities. The result would be not only much more comfort to the poor, but a much reduced death-rate, especially among

CURRENT COMMENT.

- The passage of the Wilson-Gorman bill has required only eight months, while it took an undoubted Republican majority ten months to pass the McKinley bill. The Democrats are to be credited with a gain of two months in expeditiousness .-Phil. Record, Dem.

- The last meeting of the Farmers' Alliance in this State hes been held, in all probability. The meeting at Dublin, which began Wednesday and ended Thursday, practically demonstrated that the organization has very little more life in it. This fact is not a cause for rejoicing, but rather for regret. The Morning News, although it was the paper upon which the alliance leaders heaped abuse because it pointed out that the farmers were being used by a lot of political demagogues to advance their political fortunes, believes that the alliance, if kept out of politics, could be made of much use to the farmers.-Savannah News, Dem.

WILMINGTON, April 11, 1894.

MR. W. H. BERNARD: Dear Sir :- I have examined very carefully the 1st Part of the American Encyclopædic Dictionary. I am really surprised at the excellence of the work. both for its intrinsic merit and its price. I have made a parallel comparison with Webster's Unabridged; and with the Century, published also in parts, costing me $2.50 per volume; or, complete, $60. I find the American Encyclopædic Dictionary superior in many respects to Webster's Unabridged, and for genera purposes equal to the Century. The type is distinct and full, the illustrations numerous, the derivation of words scholarly and accurate, the definitions exceedingly complete and verified by many extracts from leading modern authors, the encyclopædic information very full, the diacritical marks plain, with prominent equivalents at bottom of each page. I unhesitatingly endorse the First Part of this Dictionary as meeting the require ments of the scholar and filling the wants of the general reader and man of business needing general information in a compact and reliable presentation. No one need fear that his money will be misspent, who invests in this work.
