SENSE AND NONSENSE.

The Louisiana sugar planters who met in convention in New Orleans a few days ago, ratified the action of previous meetings of planters and resolved to tie themselves to the Republican party. They declared not only for protection for sugar but for all other American industries. What a nice figure the aforesaid Louisiana planters cut when they decided to form an alliance offensive and defensive with the Republican party, against which they had been fighting for nearly thirty years, because, as they declared, they were opposed to its principles, a cardinal one of which was protection. All this time the Democratic party had been fighting the protective policy of the Republithat it didn't denounce that policy, and these same planters endorsed Democratic platforms.

With the Democracy of other States, years, they voted two years ago for a tariff for revenue only, and when the Wilson tariff bill was under consideration they endorsed all the reductions of duties that were proposed and never thought of finding fault until sugar was touched and there was a proposition to lop off the bounty from that. Then they showed how far they were actuated by principle and how honest they were in their former tariff reform utterances. It was all right to put other things on the free list, and to reduce the tariff on everything else, but sugar was too sacred to be touched, and the bounty must remain on that, which means that every person, rich or poor, who bought a pound of Louisiana sugar, had to pay the sugar maker a royalty of two cents a pound.

If they had been deprived of all protection they might have some shadow of excuse for the position they now take, but they still have in lieu of the bounty of two cents a pound, a protective duty of a cent a-quarter a pound, which is really better for the average sugar grower than the two cent bounty was, which went into the pockets of the rich planters and sugar makers, and not into the pockets of the poorer planters, who sold their cane to the wealthy men who operated the sugarmaking plants.

What a contrast between these selfish, greedy, unprincipled proclaimers of their own political insincerity and dishonesty and the Democratic wool growers of Texas who never whimpered when wool, one of their principal staples, was taken from the dutiable list and put upon the free list. There has been no kicking in Texas, no denunciation of the Democratic party, no renunciation of the principles they had been contending for, and no bolting from the Democratic party because it enacted into law the declarations embraced in its platform.

logic of their own argument, and like honest men are willing to be dealt by as they would deal by others. That's the difference between the Texas Democratic woolgrower and the Louislana (so-called) Democratic sugar cane grower.

Aside from the consistency and adherence to principle which the Texas wool-grower shows and the Louisiana planter does not show, the former shows business sense and the latter lack of sense in the courses they respectively pursue. The sugar grower in Louisiana made sugar and made money on it when the had no protection and no bounty. Within the past five or six years the beet sugar industry has been growing and may eventually become a formidable competitor of cane sugar. This is comparatively a new industry in this country; the cane sugar industry is old. The beet sugar men declare that protection or a bounty is essential to their success. If this be so, then it is the height of folly for the sugar planters of Louisiana to be insisting upon a policy which the beet sugar men say, and they admit, will build up the beet sugar industry. Common business sense would suggest their advocacy of such a policy as would not foster this new industry to become a dangerous competitor of theirs. The reverse of this is just what they are doing, if a bounty be necessary to the preservation and growth of the beet sugar industry.

The Texas wool grower shows more sense when he cheerfully accepts free wool, because he knows that he can grow wool without protection, while the wool growers of the Northern States declare they can't. If they can't then the woolgrowing industry must perish in those States, and survive only in States like Texas, which have the ample pasturage, climatic and other advantages which enable them to grow wool without the fostering care of the Government. Reducing the area of wool-growing and the consequent reduction of the output will, of course, make it all the better for those engaged in the business.

From a business standpoint the Louisiana planter shows a lack of sense, the Texas wool-grower lots

MINOR MENTION. It is quite evident that the Republicans in the North are going to run can party, never met in convention | their campaigns this Fall on the sectional issue, in which they will subtitute the tariff for the bloody shirt, that denunciation and rallied year which they flaunted until they wore after year at the polls and voted for it out. The key note was raised the candidates who stood on the during the discussion of the tariff bill in Congress and has been taken up all along the line. When Goverthey held that unnecessary taxation nor McKinley went to Maine to was unjust taxation, and that a tariff rouse the Republicans of that State for protection was essentially the burden of his discourse was that wrong. They voted that way for the new tariff is a Southern tariff, gotten up in the interests of the South and against the North the great manufacturing section. They don't believe this and they know it is not true, but it is politics and when the Republican politician gets down to business truth cuts a very small figure. The Republicans of New York followed up vigorously on this line in their convention Tuesday, that being the striking and significant feature of the platform adopted. It is a sweeping denunciation of the new tariff as a Southern measure, accompanied by a denunciation of the Northern Democrats who voted for it, and voted for that income tax, which hurts them about as badly as the new tariff does. They were singularly inconsistent, however, when they appealed to the voters who do not want any more tariff agitation to put the Republican party back into power and restore McKinleyism. These platforms, however, do not amount to much any further than that they show the hands and the game of the party we have to fight.

> The nomination of Levi P. Morton as the Republican candidate for Governor of New York, last Tuesday, has been foreshadowed for some time. He was the choice of the machine. Boss Platt was not only playing for a candidate of his own, but for a candidate with money, who would shell it out freely, as it than expected. is taken for granted Morton will. Mr. Morton isn't so anxious to be Governor of New York, but as New York is a very important State in Presidential elections, if he can carry it, it will put him away up at the front as a candidate for the Presidency. This was, doubtless, the consideration with him in agreeing to run for the Governorship. His nomination under the circumstances is as good as the Republicans could have made. if not the best, and it means work record, as far as we know, and will command the solid support of his own party and possibly much of the floating vote. The Republicans will work hard not only for the moral effect of a victory in a great State like New York, which is really Demcratic, but for the same reason that the Republicans of Maine worked hard. Victory will make Morton a prominent Presidential possibility as the victory in Maine did Reed.

The picturesque Republican campaign prevaricator is already beginning to get in his work from the other side of the Mississippi river. The latest is a dispatch imparting the amazing information that the sheep owners out in that country have become desperate since free wool has become the order of the day and have gone to slaughtering their sheep right and left. They are in such a hurry to slaughter them and get them off their hands that it will tax all the railroads out in that section to carry this mutton to market, and every available freight car on a half-dozen of the roads out there has been impressed into service to haul dead sheep, and some of the roads have been compelled to borrow cars. Since the world began, according to this veracious dispatch builder, there never was such a simultaneous and unanimous slaughtering of sheep, nor such a prospect of cheap mutton. The only fear is that they will overstock the market and make mutton so common and cheap that even the sheep-killing dog would turn up his nose at it and pass it by. If there was any truth in this liar's dispatches, the Southern wool-growers might exclaim, "let 'em kill. That's doughnuts for us."

CURRENT COMMENT.

- The New York World's declaration that the Sugar Trust is behind the Louisiana bolters from the Democratic party may or may not be true; we have no way of passing judgment on the case; but this we do now, that if the Trust thinks the bolt in Louisiana is going to have any influence upon Democrats elsewhere except to strengthen them in their allegiance to the party, it is mistaken .- Mobile Register, Dem.

- If the Republicans are correct in their assertions that the sheep raising business in this country has been ruined by the new tariff law, why are those Colorado ranchers so wrought up because somebody killed a few of their sheep the other day? The ranchers have taken their guns and gone off vowing they will shoot or hang the miscreants that troubled their flocks. Would they do that if the sheep business were ruined?-Savannah News, Dem.

WEATHER CROP BULLETIN. For the Week Ending Monday, Sept. 17, 1894.

CENTRAL OFFICE, RALEIGH, N. C. -The reports of correspondents of the Weekly Weather Crop Bulletin, issued by the North Carolina State Weather Service, for the week ending Monday, September 17th, 1894, indicate that the weather has continued very dry. The showers Tues-day evening and Wednesday were too light to be of much benefit. The temperature and sunshine continued above normal except on Wednesday, which was followed by several comparatively cooler days. Prospects for cotton not so good as was once thought. The crop is about half open, and picking is progressing rapidly. Much pea-vine hay saved this week. Drought is injuring peanuts, potatoes and other late crops considerably. Several reports received of damage to fodder by army worms. On account of drought, late hay crop not very good.

EASTERN DISTRICT .- The weather during the past week has been very warm and dry. Rain is needed badly, as turnips are suffering for lack of moisture, and also peanuts, late potatoes and peas. Weather was splendid, however, for outdoor work, for saving hay, fodder and picking cotton. Fodder-pulling nearly over and hay-making going on. Cutting rice continues. Cotton seems to be about half open; there are some complaints of short staple and that it has been too dry for late crop to mature. The general opinion seems to be that the cotton ctop will not be as large as anticipated a few weeks ago.

CENTRAL DISTRICT .- The temperature and sunshine were above normal during the past week, and the rainfall much below. Dry weather is very injurious to peas, turnips and potatoes. Since the pulling of fodder some farmers are disappointed with their crop. Cotton picking is going on rapidly, with good weather for it. Crops will apparently be less
