The Morning Star

By WILLIAM H. BERNARD.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

SUNDAY MORNING, OCT 28, 1894 A BREEDER OF STRIFE.

A lady living near Washington, Beaufort county, remarked that she did not know much about politics but she knew that before the Populist party came upon the stage there was a friendly feeling among the people, but since then there was against brother and friend against friend This is true not only in Beaufort county but all over the State-all over the South and also in the West, where the Populist party has gained any foothold. In this State the leaders of that party, who are men of small mental calibre, have done more to sow the seeds of discord, and to create strife and estrangement among men who were friends than the leaders of the amount to anything unless there was Radical party did during all the an international agreement as to the years in which that party contested ratio of coinage, which is identically for supremacy, and there were some the position that the Chicago convery bad and unscrupulous men vention took, which was opposed by among the leaders. Not since 1868, when these Radical leaders had their cates like Bland and others, who inpliant followers banded in secret, sist on free coinage on a ratio of 16 oath-bound organizations, and filled to 1. If Buck is correctly quoted in them with devilment, and with hat- his Goldsboro speech he does not red of their political opponents, and agree with the Populists nor with inflamed their passions and encourag- the free silver Democrats. It is not an mere matter of speculation, nor is it uncommon thing to hear one of certain that the leaders in the rethese mouthing orators dilating on form movement can count on the persuasive and salutary effect the support of all of them rights of which they are de- that they cannot elect their prived by a "fraudulent election," and whenever they are beaten the elections are "fraudulent." They haven't yet gone so far as to hint at and thus indirectly counsel the torch and the dagger, as was done in that memorable address issued by the Radical managers in 1867, but they have learned so much from their Radical associates since they have formed the partnership with them that there is no telling what they will stop at. Convince people that they are the victims of ostracism, proscription, persecution and oppression and it will not be hard to put them in a frame of mind to seek vengeance in some way, and this is precisely what the incendiary leaders of that party are trying to do. They tried "Gideon's Band" two years ago but they found that in organizing an order like that they subjected themselves to punishment provided by law and they prudently discontinued the work they had entered upon. But they are doing much of their discord sowing in secret now, and have so poisoned the minds of many of their followers that they will not listen to any one who does not subscribe to their views, nor will they listen to any speaker who does not make the kind of a speech they like to hear.

In the days of Radicalism when the party was strong and held the negroes solid with it, their minds were so prejudiced against Democrats that they could not be enticed to a Democratic meeting without a big barbecue or something of that sort, and then they sometimes hesitated about eating for fear of being poisoned by the Democrats. It is a little remarkable that after the lapse of so many years men should be endeavoring to create the same distrust among white men that the negro then felt for the white man who differed from the party to which he belonged.

If there were no other objection to the Populist party this one should be enough to condemn it in the estimation of all good and State-loving people, who believe in good-will and fraternal feeling among neighbors. The men who sow discord, create distrust and breed hatred and strife do the State infinitely more harm than they could atone for by a life of effort, if they should ever realize the enormity of their crime. Across our Southern border we have an illustration and a warning of the baneful effects of this kind of teaching, where incendiary and reckless men have secured a controlling influence over many of their fellowcitizens, and have wielded it wickedly to promote their own schemes, as the Populist leaders are doing in this State. In our sister State the feeling has long been such between the opposing factions that blood has been shed, lives taken, and civil war narrowly averted. The triumph of Populism or of the combination between Populism and Radicalism would put North Carolina in about the same condition South Carolina has been in for several years, and that is something surely that no truly patriotic, or really sensible North Carolinian wants to see.

MINOR MENTION.

The Populist spokesmen in this State are making much ado over the free coinage of silver as if that were a panacea for all the ills that are afflicting the people. In the campaign of 1890 when several of the State Democratic conventions declared for free coinage the Populist leaders took the position that free coinage wouldn't practically amount to anything as far as relieving the necessities of the people were concerned, and that it wouldn't add to the currency more than seventy-five cents per capita. What they wanted strife and brother was arrayed and what they must have was an issue of Treasury notes to bring the volume up to $50 per capita, and subtreasuries to distribute it among the people. Now in this State they have reversed the position, rejected the sub treasury and are banking on free comage. Capt. Buck Kitchin, however, who doesn't seem to agree with them in anything, doesn't agree with them in this, and told the people he talked to at Goldsboro last week that free coinage wouldn't the more advanced tree silver advo-

State, although when the Democrats shot guns to achieve the to the end, for many realizing ticket, and that voting for it will not only be throwing their votes away but aiding in the election of a Re-Republican, may reconsider and vote for the ticket headed by Hill. There is no one who knows the State of New York better than Senator Hill. and no man in it who can come nearer bringing out the full vote of the party. He understands the situation fully, what he has to contend against, and we do not believe that he was talking thoughtlessly nor in a spirit of bravado, when he declared at Oswego, Friday, that the Democratic party was going to win.

The Building and Loan Association, properly conducted, is an important factor in the betterment of the condition of people of small incomes. Through them thousands of persons of small means have become owners of homes, which they never could have owned without them. The Baltimore Sun gives the following facts and figures, gathered from the ninth annual report of the Commissioner of Labor, which will be read with interest:

"The number of building and loan associations in 1893 was 5,838, of which number 5,598 were local or "State" associations and 250 "national." The total dues paid in on installment shares in force, with the profits on the same in the year named aggregated $450,667,594. This represents a large business, and when it is added that but 35 associations showed a net loss last year ($23,332) it will be seen that the people who run them, though not experienced bankers, are competent to take care of their savings. Of the 5,598 local associations, 1,671 were "permanent," 750 were organizations "terminating" at a fixed date and 3,168 were "serial," or accustomed to issue shares in series, thus making their business in effect continuous. Maryland had 237 associations, of which number 214 were "permanent," 18 "terminating" and 5 "serial." They are numerous in Pennsylvania, which has 1,-079 of them, but Ohio has 718, Illinois but 76 and West Virginia 54. Maryland has besides 3 "national" associations, which are all classed as "serial." The utility of the associations is thought to be indicated by their popularity. The statistics show that in 1893 there were over 1,745,725 shareholders and over 456,004 borrowers. Some 315,000 homes, besides 28,500 buildings other than homes, have been acquired through the instrumentality of the 4 444 associations that report on this point. Thrift and industry have doubtless been promoted by the prospect of winning a home afforded through the existence of building and loan associations.

The couple had no children, and the wife took a little girl to raise and be her companion. The story spread that Mrs. Hood had treated the child in a most inhuman manner and cut and bruised her on many occasions. As the stories spread they became magnified, and the whole town of Haywards was excited about the matter. At last a warrant was sworn out for her arrest on a charge of battery. At the first trial the jury disagreed, but on the second hearing she was acquitted after an exciting contest. The publicity given to the matter wrecked the happiness of Dr. Hood and his wife. The latter was never the same woman after her arrest, and as she was idolized by her husband he grieved to a great extent over the unjust persecution, as he termed it, which had been made against her. One morning when Dr. Hood awoke he found his wife dead by his side. He had heard no struggle during the night. The shock to nim was a great one. They said she died from heart disease, but the doctor told his friends that she really died from a broken heart. The disgrace that had been brought upon her name wrecked her happiness and health irretrievably.

A few weeks ago Dr. Hood wrote his will and left it at Haywards. His health had been failing, and he decided to take a trip to Europe. The start was made, and when he reached Rochester, Ills., he died suddenly. The will is a most extraordinary document. The testator makes a few bequests to relatives and concludes as fol-

A Ghost Said to Haunt the Mississippi River at Dallas City, Ills. Fully 20 years have passed since Lizzie Clark, an orphan with a heritage, disappeared from a hotel in Dallas City, Ills., as completely as if the earth had swallow ed her up. In all the Mississippi valley there has never been a stranger case than the disappearance of poor Lizzie Clark and, too, there has never been a greater ghost mystery than has been and still is occasioned by the evidently disembodied spirit of the girl.

The story of Lizzle Clark has been county history, says a Chicago Times corre-

HE ROWED THROUGH THE GHOST.

had been appointed, and Lizzle, being ambitious to add to her little store, set about to work in a hotel hard by the river's edge. It was one afternoon about 20 years ago that Lizzie Clark, who had been washing dishes in the kitchen, stepped out into the vard of the hotel. She was seen to leave the kitchen by several people working around the house, who paid no attention to the girl. But that was the last ever seen of Lizzie Clark. Those who saw her step out into the yard heard no scream, no stifled mean, no struggling. But there are people yet living who be lieve that the girl was suddenly seized, strangled, concealed in the house until dark and then east into the dark river. It is said that the murderers did not leave the locality for some time thereafter, and yet, again, others say the girl was never murdered, but drowned herself, and that her ghost is not one of a murdered person's, but one of a suicide. All one can gain from the different stories and theories is that the girl was dealt with foully in some manner, and that her ghost still haunts the locality. Of course every effort was made to ferret out the mystery. Detectives hunted high and low, money was spent to no purpose, and finally the guardian of the girl's estate turned her money and property over to the county authorities, in whose hands it remains to this day, because there is no kith and kin

The girl's ghost was first seen in December, 1887, when a party of duck hunters were returning to Dallas City from the islands. An excursion steamer had become disabled late in the season and was lying on the bank of the island across She was in rather bad fix. It was expected to leave her there during the winter. As the hunters neared the craft a form in white was seen to run out upon the upper deck. It was a young girl's figure, and she was evidently being pursued, for from across the water came screams and then the following words: 'Let me alone, let me alone, or I will With that the specdrown myself!" ter flung itself into the river. There was a splash, and the cold waters closed over the white body. Several times during that winter the ghost of Lizzie Clark was seen the disabled steamer. When the steamer was taken away the next spring, work men and steamboatmen heard pitiful screams from the willows on shore as the boat moved away. The spirit did not leave the island, and it is believed now that she was buried on the island after the murder.

Of late years, however, the girl's ghost has been seen in a skiff at night, and it was only a few evenings ago that one of the St. Louis and St. Paul fast steamers ran into the spectral thing. The pilot did not see the ghostly craft until too late. He says he saw a boat of white that looked In the boat was a young girl in white alment, but there were blood clots on the white dress. "She was rowing swiftly When the prow of the steamer struck this frail craft, it cut through it like mist. The ghostly occupant only laughed a sort of uncanny laugh, a half scream, and when we had passed I saw the spectral craft dancing on the waves behind. I doubt if an ordinary skiff could have lived in the waves of our steamer, right under the pad dles." Thus spake the pilot, and he is a man of few words and sterling integrity. "Have you seen Lizzie Clark's boat? is now the question that goes from one mouth to another during the summer season. In winter hunters have come into Dallas shaking with fright and calling for a dram to brace their nerves, saying that while coming down from the islands above on the ice they had met Lizzie Clark walk ing toward them. She always wears that white dress, and the blood stains on the neck are plain. The girl's eyes are staring wide open, as if she were being suffocated Her spirit has been known to step out from behind a clump of dead trees at the head of the island and face passersby. She will give them a terrible look and then scream piteously. In an instant more the spirit

Those who have seen the girl in her spectral skiff say that she seems to be owing as if some murderer was after her She bends to the oars vigorously, and if a boat appears in sight she makes for it di rectly, as if seeking protection. One man says he rowed right through this spectral boat and its occupant and says he felt a sensation like passing through a heavy mist. No effort is made to "hunt down this ghost.

People feel that this girl was murdered and some think she cannot rest because the murderers have never been brought to

Says He Never Kissed a Woman James W. Hasty, a 65-year-old bachelor was born within two miles of Owingsville Ky. He is a gunsmith and watch fixer home in 25 years. He lives in his shep keeps house by himself with a dog and two cats, and never saw a railroad train or a county seat in 30 years. He never kissed one of the fair sex in his life and says he can hardly imagine how such fruit

How to Remove Cinders From the Eye. When traveling, always carry a tiny box of flaxseed for possible cinders. The instant a foreign substance is felt in the eye throw the head back and drop two or three flaxseeds on the ball of the eye and lift the upper lid and draw it down over them, so as to hold them in. There is no disagreeable sensation attached to putting the seed in, and the relief will come-instantly. The moisture of the eye dampens the seed, and it gives out a mucous substance, which spreads over the eye and covers the grit. After awhile the seeds will begin to work out and will bring the offending particle with
