Closing Up the Business of the Term Grand Jury's Report. There was only one case tried in Criminal Court yesterday.

William Howard, colored, charged with stealing an ox, was convicted of larceny and sentenced to twelve months in the State penitentiary. GRAND JURY'S REPORT.

There being no further business for he consideration of the grand jury, they were discharged after submitting their report as follows: Hon. O. P. Meares:

We visited the iail and its surroundings and found everything neat and in order and the prisoners well cared for, both in food and bedding. The County Home was also visited by a committee who found the new superintendent, Mr. S. H. Terry, had just taken charge of the institution the day before. The buildings we found in good order and no unusual complaints were heard. We found two classes of patrons, some of whom once had means of their own and should in our judgment be better supplied with necessary conveniencies in their rooms. COTTON CROP PROSPECTS.

Hobbard, Price & Co.'s Weekly Letter Although the market has improved slightly during the past week, it has not gained in activity, and the support which haa brought about this slight improvement has come from Manchester where business appears to be active under the demand from South America and the East. The returns which were furnished by the English Board of Trade as to the exports of cotton goods from Great Britain for the year ending the first of January, are remarkable in showing that during the past season, the exports of yarns and cloths together exceed the exports of any previous year. During 1890, under the influence of a short crop o cotton, and an advance in the price o silver, which was supposed to stimulate activity in trade, the exports were 6 per cent. less than they were during the past

When it is considered that trade with

been practically at a standstill, these figures enable us to arrive at some idea of the enormous volume of trade in Manchester during the past season. One of the greatest arguments in favor of free silver as affecting the cotton producer has been, that it would increase the trade with those portions of the world which are not already upon a gold standard But the fact that the cotton manufacturers of Europe are doing the largest business on record, with silver below 28d. would seem to sustain our idea that the price of silver has absolutely nothing to do with the volume of business in the other portions of the world. If more business can be done with silver at 28d. and the consumption of cotton larger than it is with silver at 54d, it would seem that the question of silver would cease to be a factor in the cotton trade. In the meantime we are facing a large movement of the crop, which certajnly is expected to reach 9,000,000 bales, and the market is sustained by the small investment buying which is continually present and absorbs receipts as they appear. It had been expected by the trade that the movement during the month of January would compare so unfavorably with that during the large crop year that it would cause a decline in prices, but it has not as yet brought about such a depression, and the trade therefore are nonplussed at the failure of the expected to occur. They now look forward to a decline when receipts fall off on the idea that the market having been sustained during the time of heavy movement, when the movement about a decline in prices,

Preparations for the new crop have not yet commenced, although the question of acreage is now receiving serious consideration throughout the entire South, and it is believed that the low price of cotton must lead to a serious reduction through the necessity of adopting some other methods of cultivating large plantations. It is evident that at these prices there is not a living to be made from raising cotton which will support the negro and the white man upon the same land. In other words, it is the land question of Ireland over again, namely, that the land cannot pay a rent and at the same time support the laborers. If those who own plantations are willing to work in the fields themselves without paying for labor, they undoubtedly could raise cotton at present prices; but if any money to be expended, either in pre paring, cultivating or gathering, the crop of cotton has ceased to return the amount of money which is necessary to invest in growing it. The increase in the demand from the English spinners is accepted as indication that business in Manchester is expected to continue good for a long time to come, and shows plainly that the Southern planter has he question of the value of his crop entirely within his own control moderate crop of cotton this year would advance the price materially, as consumption has certainly risen to eight and a half million bales of American cotton, and has driven the Indian cotton from the fields. A reduction in acreage is, in our opinion, therefore, certain. The extent can only be deternined by the inability of the Southern planter to borrow money. What the effect of this reduction in acreage will be upon prices is of course as yet un-known. The effect in the past has been

Mrs. J. B. Potter and Mr. Kyrle Bellew i "Charlotte Corday."

The engagement of Mrs. Potter and Mr. Bellew, presenting the four-act play entitled "Charlotte Corday" at the Opera House last night, was an entertaining occasion for a large number of the most cultured theatre-goers of this city. The play is an interesting one, and begins with the actions of "Charlotte Corday," in Caen, France, shortly after the execution of Louis XVI. and a number of those fearful massacres of aristocrats which won for the "Red Revolution" its more familiar name of "Reign of Terror." The reputations of Mrs. Potter and Mr. Bellew are almost universal, and the pleasure they afforded their patrons last night will doubtless long be remembered by all present. The support was mostly good, and Misses Hudspeth, Lowell and Ward, and Messrs. Clarges, Chanfrau and Bawtree all showed themselves to be artists in their line. The assassination scene in the third act-where Charlotte stabs Murat-was unusually good and the audience were vehement in their applause. The closing scene in the prison cell, just before leading Charlotte off to be beheaded, and the parting of father, daughter, sister and lover was a sad and affecting picture to the already sympathetic audience.

Everything Is Cheap. The sale of the personal property recently assigned by Mr. R. R. Little, of Richmond county, for the benefit of his creditors, says the Wadesboro Messenger, took place last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. About 23 head of mules and horses were sold at prices ranging WELDON, N. C., Jan. 11 .- A South from $10 to $85. Good mules were sold bound freight train on the S. & R. R. R. as low as $25. Corn on the plantation on the Anson side of the river brought from 30 to 40 cents a bushel; on the Richmond side it only brought from 29 to 31 cents a bushel. Oats sold for 25 cents and hogs at 3 cents gross. Mr. Little's fine stallion, which was bought by two Wadesboro gentlemen, only brought $129.

C., Jan. 11.—The main eature of the Senatorial situation to-day is the meeting of the Republican caucus set for to-morrow night. The meaning of it is said to be a play by Pritchard against Settle, Holton, Ewart, Boyd and the rest. Ewart is chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and Settle is attorney the contestants. There seventeen cases, and it is thought some that the seating of the contestants will make them lean toward the anti-Pritchard combination. Mr. Pritchard's friends having caught wind of this, got the caucus called for to-morrow night, for the purpose of choosing the candidate for the shortterm Senatorship. Moreover, the crystalization against Mr. Pritchard seems to be taking more solid shape, and high times are looked for at the caucus. The House to-day precipitated a warm

GREAT FRESHET IN THE CAPE FEAR KIVER.

Flood at Fayetteville - People Driven From Their Houses-Bridges Carried Away-Great Damage to Property-Washouts on Railroads. The recent snow storms in the Western and Central parts of North Carolina and the heavy rains that followed have caused a rapid rise of the waters in all streams and rivers, causing great damage at many places.

The Weather Bureau's synopsis issued yesterday morning from the Wilmington station said: "The freshet in the Cape Fear river is even more extensive than was at first anticipated; the gauge at Fayetteville this morning read fifty-two feet; a rise of fifteen feet in twenty-four hours, and still rising. This is only a few feet lower than the highest record there." There were rumors during the day that the county bridge over the river at Fayetteville had been swept away by the flood, but passengers who arrived by the C, F. & Y. V. R. R. last evening reported that the county bridge was intact when the train passed there; but the water was only foot below the "Sherman freshet" in 1865, and was still rising. It was thought that the bridge would not be damaged. A special dispatch to the STAR last night from Fayetteville, said: "The greatest freshet that has been known since the Sherman freshet in 1865 is now doing lots of damage in this county. The streams are overflowing in every part of the town; bridges are down and the damage to property is among the thousands. People along the streams have had to move out of their houses. The family of Mr. W. H. Newberry, who lives near the Cool Spring stream, was compelled to vacate their residence late this evening, the water being under his bouse and still rising. The water is now (9 p. m.) rising at the 'rate of six inches per hour."

The conductor of the train on the C. F. & Y. V. R. R. arriving last night, said that Deep river was higher than ever be- | for $1.25. fore. The train ran through water a foot deep on the track for over two hundred yards near Gulf station.

The freshet in the river below Fayetteville it is feared will cause great loss, of timber washed away by the flood and stock drowned. Reports from the line of the W. & W.

R. R. indicate no high water in any of the streams. On the Seaboard Air Line washouts near Cameron and near Moncure held trains nearly all day Thursday. The north-bound train was held at Moncure for six or seven hours by the washout of a trestle over a small run. The washout at Cameron occurred after the regular mail had passed.
