THE POMPONS VIZIER.

"I recall the story of a Sultan," said Dean Hole, "and being told himself of the vizier sold him in open market for a slave. The market was not brisk that day, and the vizier brought only eight pence. The Sultan bought him in at this price, and thereafter whenever the vizier became pompous the Sultan had only to mention 'eightpence,' or draw the figure '8' in the air, when the pompous minister immediately subsided."

Wearing of Glass Eyes.

It is a fallacy to suppose that people who wear cork legs and glass eyes are infirm and feeble in appearance. They are often rather than ordinary individuals.

A rich man, for instance, who is obliged to wear an artificial eye will wear these different colored eyes in a very large; an eye for afternoon, when the pupil is smaller; an eye for evening, when the pupil has extended to its full size.

A London eyemaker, who gave this information, said he made about an equal proportion of glass eyes for men and women. Some people keep quiet about their possession. In fact, no less than 13 eyes have been made by this informant for one gentleman within three months.

His son had got one eye made from measurement, and the other fitted so perfectly that the old gentleman, in an outburst of gratitude, wrote off for 10 other eyes. The eyemaker admitted that this was an exceptional instance.—Fittsburg Dispatch.

LIGHT FROM PLANTS.

ONCE BELIEVED TO BE PURE FANTASY, BUT NOW KNOWN AS REAL.

There is a never-fading light which could flash a thought or two to the novelist. The statistician has attempted to classify the action and methods of proposals. As a result, he has presented tabulated figures extremely interesting to psychologists. Out of 100 cases 38 gentlemen take lady in arms, 67 gentlemen kiss lady on cheek, 75 gentlemen kiss lady on forehead, 75 gentlemen kiss lady on nose, 75 gentlemen kiss lady on hand. It is to be presumed these two out of 100 are the timid, diffident kind, though it is possible that they might be of the quietly sentimental nature. One gentleman kisses lady on nose. It must be added that the statistician is careful to insert the wrong clause, "by mistake."

There is even a record of a man kissing a lady on edge of shirt, but, thank goodness, there is only one in 100, and the chances are that this man is peculiar. Seventy-two hold lady's hand, 17 hold it very tightly, 14 have jumps in their throats, and nine exclaim aloud, "Thank God!" Only seven out of 100 declare themselves to be delightfully happy, and five are too full for utterance. Three out of 100 stand on one foot when they make proposal, and two go down on one knee, while nine make a formal proposal—something like the following: "Will you marry me?" "No, thank you, I am not in the mood to be proposed to at the present time." "Will you marry me?" "No, thank you, I am not in the mood to be proposed to at the present time."

ABLE TO TRANSFER LUNACY.

Unusual Result of an Experiment in Hypnotism. Made by a Paris Doctor.

A series of very wonderful experiments which have just been concluded by Dr. Luys of Paris, whose observations and discoveries in connection with magnetism and electricity in relation to hypnosis made a profound impression on the scientific world some time ago, based to a remarkable result. The latest discovery establishes the fact that cerebral activity can be transferred to a magnetized iron, in which the activity of the brain is completely passed on to a second person. Incredible as this may seem, Dr. Luys has proved its possibility by the experiments just referred to.

He placed the crown, which in reality is only a circular band of magnetized iron, on the head of a female patient suffering from melancholia, with a mania for self destruction, and with an intense desire to die. The experiment tended that within a fortnight the patient could be allowed to go free without danger, the crown having absorbed all her morbid tendencies.

About two weeks afterward he put the same crown, which meanwhile had been carefully kept free from contact with anything else, on the head of a girl who had been hysterical and complicated by frequent recurrent periods of lethargy. The patient was then hypnotized and immediately conducted himself after the manner of the woman who had worn the crown. He talked, indeed he practically assumed her personality and uttered exactly the same complaints as she had done. Similar phenomena have, it is reported, been observed in the case of another patient. Another experiment showed that the crown retained the impression acquired until it was made red-hot.—London Telegraph.

A Curious Dream.

My husband was a minister at a large church in a New England village, where he had served several years. One night he had a most curious dream, and reflected in it was the face of a woman he had never seen before. She had dark hair and eyes, and her face was different from mine in every way. I remember I thought it peculiar that I should have changed so suddenly. Then I woke up.

The next night I dreamed the same thing again, but while I was standing before the glass the woman came into the room. I turned and pointing to the mirror asked her what it meant. "Oh!" she said, "that is the way you will look!" The following day I told the family about my dream, and they all thought it very strange.

A few months after this, as I was walking out of church one Sunday I passed a pew with a strange lady in it. She turned as I passed, and what was my surprise to see the very face of the lady I had seen in my dream!

Six months later my husband died. One afternoon the mail announced the lady and gentleman to see me. I went down to the parlor and came face to face with the lady of my dream—the same one I had seen in church. She introduced her husband, who she said, was a minister and who had been chosen rector of that parish.

I soon left the parsonage, and my dream partly came true, for this lady did take my place and become mistress of the rectory.—Illustrated American.

Literary Sincerity.

The poet Bryant had been vision and a loving reverence for what he saw about him. He was in his art a true American. Not because other lands were not also rich and beautiful, but because he preferred to describe the blossoms growing at his own door. In a letter to his brother, written in 1838, he says:

"I saw some lines by you to the skylark. Did you ever see such a bird? Let me counsel you to draw your images in describing nature from what you observe around you unless you are professional foreign country, when, of course, you will learn what you can from books. The skylark is an English bird, and an American who has never visited Europe has no right to be in raptures with it."

He had true reverence for the past and what is to be learned from it. For the accepted traditions of literature he had the veneration of all scholars. Yet he would not have permitted himself to harp away upon themes fresh in other lands and times, but quite foreign to his own thought and feeling.

What is so sincere—that is the best thing, better even than resembling some man whose fate was writ in "enduring brass."

LOVE AND PROPOSALS.

How Men and Women Act in This Instance.

There is a never-fading light which could flash a thought or two to the novelist. The statistician has attempted to classify the action and methods of proposals. As a result, he has presented tabulated figures extremely interesting to psychologists. Cheerful Philosophy.

People ought to be happy in this life. All the best things are agreed out before them for their delectation. There are just enough clouds to make all her married tendencies. The gloomy raindrops that trickle down the wayward blades of grass turn to glittering diamonds when touched by the first rays of the sun. There are rosebuds and green leaves in the spring, the golden blades of grass turn to glittering diamonds when touched by the first rays of the sun. There are rosebuds and green leaves in the spring, the golden blades of grass turn to glittering diamonds when touched by the first rays of the sun. There are rosebuds and green leaves in the spring, the golden blades of grass turn to glittering diamonds when touched by the first rays of the sun.

Infantile Emotions.

Professor Drummond, in his work "The Ascent of Man," gives the following table, which has been compiled from a careful study of the emotional states in a little child:

Fear is perceptibly manifest in a little child 3 weeks old. When it is 7 weeks old, the social affections dawn. At 12 weeks of age, the child begins to weep, and sympathy appears after 5 months; pride, shame, remorse and sense of the ludicrous, after 13 months.

These dates, of course, Professor Drummond is careful to observe, do not indicate in any mechanical way the birth-days of emotions. They represent rather stages in an infinitely gentle mental ascent, which are nevertheless so marked, that we are able to give them names and use them as landmarks in psychogenesis.

Hint to Theater Managers.

More people are driven away from the theater by the suggestive titles, repulsive, tasteless and vulgar pictures, posters than are ever drawn to the box office by such pictures and titles. The great mass of the American people are not interested in the pictures, but in the spectacle and the women who wear the best, not the poorest. For every quarter of a dollar drawn to the box office by an indecent or suggestive poster $100 is drawn away by the picture of a woman who goes to see a play of suggestive title 300 women and matinee girls and at least half as many men stay away. These are the eternal verities of the modern theater.—Dramatic Mirror.

THE POOL TO NARCISUS.

You never loved me, but you saw in me. Echoed all the flowers your own soul bore. That only eyes like those your stars should be.

You heard your flower soft face toward my face.

I waited, heartless, for the crowning hour. You looked and longest and loved—not me, fair flower—

You loved the mirror of your own great grace.

You leaned down with the lily that you were. Had I but loved to meet your lily divine. You and your flower of love had now been joined.

Drowned in my love, to waken nevermore.

But as it is—ah, love, you know the rest! Bobbed of your image, how the pool seemed.

You will find many a mirror for your face. But no more flowers will bloom across my breast!—The Athenian.

WHERE AMERICA LEADS.

The Discoveries of a Literary Visitor From Queen Victoria's Realm.

In respect of some things America leads all countries easily hands down. Perhaps the most surprising genius who is said to be now engaged in the manufacture of these carpets has solved this problem by establishing an elephant farm in some mountainous locality in Asia or Africa. We have had camel and ostrich farms in this country, and it is reported that the fur rug trade is to be materially benefited by the skunk farms which have been established—so it is said—in the west.

But unfortunately our climate is hardly tropical enough to suit the conditions of baby elephants. Still it is possible that the harness system might be adapted to this "infant" industry.—Carpet and Upholstery Trade Review.

Why She Was Frightened.

Mr. Perry, the blind pianist, tells this amusing story of himself and his wife. He travels with his own piano, which is packed in two cases, the body and the legs in another box. On one occasion the latter box was not put off at the proper station, and he was obliged at that evening's performance to have the case set on wooden sawhorses. He left the town the next day, but thought that the other package, when it should come to light, should be reported, not to him, but to his wife, as her address is stationary and his own constantly changing. Then he wrote her an explanation of the intelligence she would undoubtedly soon receive. This letter did not come to hand until Mrs. Perry had been told that the case contained a message as this: "Mr. Perry's legs have been found at such and such a station. Shall we keep them or send them to you?" As there had been a terrible railroad accident the next day, the distraught wife naturally concluded that her husband's scattered remains were alluded to.

A Clever Dog.

Mr. Stacy Marks' anecdote of the monkey finding dog, which he attributes to Landseer, is a very price among all stories of "the kind. The dog's master, in the presence of a skeptical friend, hid a 25c note in the hole of a tree when the dog was paying no attention. "Get fetch!" he said, some time afterward, while returning by another road, without further explanation.

The dog trotted off, and it was a few hours before he returned with the note. As there were no signs of a note, the skeptical friend grew satirical. But he had opened the dog's mouth, and 5 or 6 notes were seen in his tongue. He had found the note, been to the bank's and exchanged it for gold.—Spectator.

Elephant Hide Carpet.

A reporter for a daily paper is responsible for this yarn relating to new material for carpeting. He says that elephants' skins are being tanned for this purpose, and that they make a floor covering which is 3 inches thick and practically indestructible. But before any one invests any large amount of capital in an elephant carpet factory it may be advisable to inquire where the raw material can be obtained.

Near the principal entrance at Osborne

There is a flower garden in which an immense myrtle bush is to be seen. It has been grown from a sprig which was taken out of the wedding bouquet of the Empress Frederick in 1858. It has been in court with every royal marriage in which either bride or groom was a descendant of the queen some pieces of this myrtle have been placed in the bride's wedding bouquet. The practice commenced when Princess Alice married Prince Louis of Hesse at Osborne in 1862, and it has been continued until now, when their daughter has been married to the emperor of Germany. The myrtle is a bush of white flowers, in which there were several sprigs from the Osborne myrtle, which was sent by the queen to St. Petersburg expressly for this purpose.—London Letter.
