THE OTHER HALF SHOULD HAVE

GONE. One half the House of Representatives of this State were at the Newbern Fish, Game and Poultry exposition last Thursday. The other half should have gone, too, for then they would have escaped the shameful show they made of themselves in voting for that resolution to adjourn to do honor to the memory of Fred Douglass. The probabilities are that the majority of the gang who, under the spur of the negro who sprung that resolution on them, didn't have the nerve to vote it down, as they had previously voted down resolutions to honor the birthdays of the immortal Washington and Lee, wished they were at Newbern or out in the woods when that vote was taken, and they saw the in dignation it aroused in the decent, self-respecting white people of the State. This is written of course, on the presumption that they are not lost to a sense of shame, and do not enjoy making themselves contemp-

But if they had gone to Newbern and spent an hour or two on the Exposition grounds they would have escaped the disgusting spectacle they made of themselves and possibly might have learned much about North Carolina that many of them don't know. A good many of those solons from the middle and western portion of the State, doubtless, had never been any further East than Raleigh, and many of them never that far until they went there to take a whack at making the laws for the State, about which, as a whole, some of them are as ignorant as they are about the interior of Africa. North Carolina is a large State, with a stretch of four hundred and fifty miles from East to West. Until the completion of the Western North Carolina Railroad there was but little travelling from the East to the West, or from the West to the East, but little mingling of the people of the different sections, and but little knowledge save what was gathered by reading or conversation with those who had travelled in one or both sections. There is more now, but not half as much as there should be, especially by those who are delegated to make the laws for all sections of the State, laws which affect alike the people of the East, the Center and the West. As a matter of fact much of the time of one Legislature in this and in other States is taken up in repealing laws passed by a preceding Legislature, some of which were passed for want of better information on the subjects legislated upon, and of the needs and condition of the people for whom the legislating was done.

The solons now at Raleigh have fixed up a scheme for county government, for which some of them are howling, and yet they do not seem to realize that a system of government which would suit one section of the State very well would be ruinous to another section. If the statesmen from the highlands would pick up their grip-sacks and sojourn in the East for a while and keep their eyes open they might learn something and form a better conception of what should be done, or not be done, in breaking up established systems and attempting new ones, and they would understand, too, why the white people of the East stand together, and maybe realize the iniquity of the schemes they advocate in depriving the white people of the East of the means of self protection.

But as they all can't travel and acquire education in that way the next best thing the solons can do is respective portions of the State and

Eastern North Carolina is confined to pitch, tar, turpentine, lumber. cotton, peanuts, fish, oysters, soft shell crabs, mosquitoes and sandfiddlers. Generally when the fellows from the West come to the seashore for the first time they spend the first three days chasing sandfiddlers, which in turn have a good deal of fun watching the manoevres of the awkward fellows who are trying to catch them and hardly ever

These Western statesmen who visted the Newbern Fair might not have been surprised at the exhibits of fish and wild fowl, for they naturally expected these, but we will venture to say that the exhibits of live stock, poultry, dairy products, corn, potatoes (Irish and sweet), turnips, cabbages and other products of the farm, were a revelation to most of them. These would have opened their eyes to what Eastern North Carolina can do and is doing in the way of growing food products, and they could have seen there in preserved form some of the luscious fruits which grow in such abundance and to such perfection in this section of the State. Knowing what they can do on the iplands and thus learning what we can do on the Eastern plain, they would get a better conception of North Carolina as a grand whole, catch new ideas and broader views. and more than ever realize the responsibility of the trust reposed in them and the necessity of legislating intelligently for such a State. A day at Newbern would have been a day at school for them, and one of the best day's schooling that many of them ever had. It would have been well, we repeat, if they had all been there, instead of killing a day at Raleigh in doing honor to the memory of a man that most of them would have scorned to sit at the same table with when alive.

MINOR MENTION The bill which has passed the Senate of this State to provide against the adulteration of food is a proper prepared foodstuffs, but requires that they be properly labelled and sold for what they are, and not for something else which they are made to represent. There are vast quanities of oleomargarine, lard compounds and other things in common use sold every day as butter, lard, kc., and the buyers don't know any better, but think they are getting the genuine article at a reduced price, the price of these substitutes being generally somewhat lower than the price of the genuine article. This is not-only practicing, deception upon and swindling the buyer, but it is taking an unfair advantage of the producers of the genuine article, who cannot compete with that kind of opposition, and must therefore come down in their prices to an unprofitable figure, and eventually quit business. Honest, fair, square dealing ought to be the rule, and the man who does that way should be protected from the man who does not and tries to take advantage of him. In justice to him and to the buyer who should know what he is buying and what he is paying his money for, these substitute foods should be properly la belled and sold under their proper to investigate the depression in the cotton-growing industry has made a report through Senator George, chairmen of the Committee on Agriculture. This investigation has been pursued for the past two years and a report was made a year or so ago giving the results. The report just made is fuller and embraces a wider range of investigation as to the causes, accompanied by suggestions as to the remedies to be applied, very few of which, however, can be put into practice, as the others are dependent upon legislation over which there has been vigorous contest, the end of which is not in sight. The main value of this report, which presents little in the way of fact which was not previously known, is that it discusses the question fully and presents in compact form the results of extensive and laborious investigation on information supplied from sources most competent to give it, so that the basis of the report is facts and not theory or speculation. There will not be any surprise that the cotton planter should be wrestling with adversity, when this committee tells us on the facts and figures in its possession that in the years '91, '92 and '93 the cost of production in nearly all the cotton producing region equalled if it did not exceed the value of the cotton raised. The only remedy for this is cheaper production, and the only way to cheaper production is through intensified farming. With this, a reduction of production and raising his home supplies, the planter can get out of the woods.

The question of gold mining in North Carolina is an interesting one, for our gold mines may some day become a source of great wealth to to visit the expositions held in the the State. Much has been said and written upon our gold ores, their exthus come into contact with the tent, richness, etc. Some of our on the stomach and bowels, adding people and learn something of the mines have paid handsomely and strength and giving tone to the organs, resources as seen in the various ex- some are doing it now, but the solu- of the functions. that the productiive capacity of some effective and cheap process for working the low-grade ores and getting the gold from them. Most of our ores are sulphurets and very hard to work by the ordinary processes. Methods have been invented to overcome the obstacles, some of which have produced good results, but so far they require, we believe, costly plants, and therefore do not fill the bill, as it is only the mine of a large amount of reasonably rich ore which could afford this. Ore might, of course, be shipped to them for working, but this could only be from mines near by, as the cost of transportation would be considerable. We have no doubt that with the efforts that are being made this problem of cheap reduction of the ores will yet be solved, and then gold mining in North Carolina will become a paying industry and will be extensively carried on.

CURRENT COMMENT.

- Legislation in the present Congress is virtually over. There will be nothing of importance done hereafter, except to pass the appropriation bills and prepare for the post mortem on what, with decent leadership, might have been a decent Congress .- New York World, Dem.

-- Senator Hale, of Maine, admits a doubt that any amount of de bate on almost any subject would change a vote, though discussion should continue in the Senate for a month; and the admission does cred t to the Senator's discernment. There was a time when oratory swayed the Senate. Now, courtesy and self interest are its favorite spell-binders .-Philadelphia Record, Dem.

-- It begins to look as if Dr. Parkhurst were about to violate that section of the Federal Constitution which forbids discrimination against the colored race. It is understood that he has begun a relentless warfare upon the game of craps. Now, as everybody in America knows, craps, or "bones," is peculiarly the colored brother's game. Craps belongs to the negro just as certainly and naturally as fan tan belongs to the Chinaman, and an attack upon craps can be viewed in one light only. -Savannah News, Dem.

MODES NOW IN VOGUE.

Tallor Gowns No Longer Plain—Plaits and Folds-Wide Stiffened Skirts. Sleeves were large enough in the early spring and have increased in dimensions ever since, so much so that a fashionable dressed woman, especially in evening toilet, can scarcely enter straight through

A SIMPLE STYLISH DRESS. doorway, but must turn in rather a crablike fashion, right shoulder foremost, to avoid crushing the balloon on the left arm. But, after all, when not too exaggerat ed, the mode of embellishing the shoulders and making the bodice and sleeves the salient point in a costume is more elegant and more in unison with the lines of form than the opposite extreme of an immense circumference of skirt, crinoline, flounces and furbelows and tight bodices with plain sleeves, making the shoulders and bust look far too insignificant.

The plain, close fitting skirts we have had lately are so becoming that for the next three months there may be little change, except a slight difference in the cut. The front and side breadths will be gored, and the back breadth plain (instead of en bias, as heretofore) and mounted on the band, with three large plaits at the back. These must be lined with horsehair or some stiff lining to keep them out. Nearly all the bodices are made with round waists, and belts are worn with

Even the tailor made costumes are not plain, as formerly. For morning wear tailors are making up cloth or fancy woolen materials with three folds or plaits in front and one at the back of the bodice, and in this case there is one wide box plait in the back of the skirt, which appears a continuation of the aforesaid plait in the bodice, though divided by the belt or band, and naturally the skirt plait widens out toward the ground.

The more dressy style of robes for visits and 5 o'clock teas is made of silk, moire or some rich material. There is generally the sleeves from elbow to wrist the same; also the waistband Nearly all the jackets, mantles and capes have high standing open collars, much resembling the medici collar of three or four years ago.

In the way of furs, sable, lamb and blue fox are in vogue. Ermine is more suitable for linings. Sable and other such furs are made up with a wide flat collar and long stole ends. Another form has the same shaped collar, but comparatively short ends, like what was called in years gone by a "victorine."

The little neck ruffs again in vogue form a most bewitching finish to a morning, afternoon or evening dress. Some are of curled ostrich feathers; others of the bright tips of impeyan pheasant plumes set closely together; others, more dressy, are of silk cut out in the shape of rose petals and massed together. Then, again, chiffon is puffed and ruched and alternated with rosettes or flowers. Indeed all have some coquettish finish-a flower at the side or sometimes on both sides. There is no limit to the variety that can be obtained, and they are excessively becoming, forming a soft frame for a pretty Fashion's Echoes.

Satin is and will continue to be much in favor and much worn. The princess shape is also in vogue again, a most elegant gown, close fitting, but with three plaits at the back of the skirt. It fastens down the left side from neck to foot with fancy silver hooks and eyes sewed out-

Lace is plentifully used to ornament bodices, and some wonderful specimens of imitation guipure have been produced. Russet shoes, made in a kind of material known as Bordeaux calf, which has a distinct grain to it, are very much in demand for winter wear, both for men and women They are made with both cork and double soles for outside wear.

Men's caps are principally of Scotch tweed of light color. The most popular of these is the "golf," which has an extremely low and full crown that nearly covers

A prominent feature this season is the doption of the Scotch edge for children's walking shoes. This is an extra wide and overlapping style of sole, which is only used for outdoor wear and has the merit of preventing the child from kicking out the toes or wearing the shoe over at the side. Heads are still used on fur boas, but it is newer to fasten such boas with tails and paws. Some are double and encircle the throat, and some are lined with satin and are much brender. The long boas only reach to the knee, and feathers are worn as much as fur.

A Deadly Drama. The following strange story is told of the manuscript of "Elaine," a drama by George Parsons. It was accepted and produced by Miss Annie Russell, but no sooner had the lady proceeded thus far than she was taken ill, which entailed the withdrawal of the piece. Thereupon Mr. Lathrop sent it to Miss Mary Anderson. "She liked it" and was actually in negotiation to produce it when became ill, "desperately ill." The unlucky author then tried Mrs. Langtry. She was "enchanted" and eager to bring it out when, lo! the Jersey Lily was "stricken down with fever."

dispatched to Miss Julia Marlowe. Regardless of her doom, like Grey's Eton boys, this "little victim" was just then playing to audiences in Philadelphia. She opened it and played no more that season. Within a week she was "utterly prostrated."-London Tit-Bits.
