Now for the first time in a gene ration after moving unitedly until it had won the victory for which it had heroically battled for a generation. we see signs of restiveness and a disposition in certain contingencies to ignore the voice of the majority and force the party to accept the dictates of the minority as a condition of fealty and acquiesscence in the decrees of its duly constituted conventions. For the first time men who call themselves Democrats publicly and openly declare that unless the next national convention does so and so, and does what they want it to do, they will repudiate its utterances. and either make a party of their own or fall in under the standards of the Republican party which they had been fighting all their lives, provided that party act more to their liking on one issue which has for some time been engaging the attention of the American people.

In an interview recently Hon. W C. Whitney, of New York, declared that unless the next national Democratic convention pronounced for "sound money," that is, declared itself in favor of the present monetary system, it would be split in two. which means that the minority will secede, and run candidates of its own. Mr. Wnitney is a very distinguished Democrat, was Secretary of the Navy under Mr. Cleveland's first administration, and has been prominently mentioned as a candidate for the party in 1896. His utterances are therefore more than the utterances of an ordinary individual, and are the more significant on account of his standing in the party. Col. Henry Watterson, of Louisville, said recently that it depended glishmen already own over 20,000, upon the Democrats themselves whether they carried Kentucky at the next election or not, for if they adopted a free silver platform there were 40,000 "sound money" Democrats who would refuse to vote with the party, but would in preference vote with the Republican party. These are two simple utterances coming from two distinguished Democrats on one side of the silver question.

Hon. Mr. Bryan, of Nebraska, one of the leading Democrats in the West, said in a speech at Jackson, Miss., a few days ago that, although he had been reared a Democrat and had never been anything else, if the next Democratic convention adopted a gold platform, he would die in his tracks before he would vote the ticktaken up. turn out?

A story is told of an ingenious trick by which a shilling was made to double its value. Unhappily, the trick was not quite an honest one. A drinking party at 'pub'' found themselves reduced to their last shilling. One of the party suddenly said, "Give it to me, and I will double it." He took it to a neighboring pawnshop, where the amused broker lent him ter pence, writing at his request, "A piece of silver plate," on the ticket.
