WOOL AND PROTECTION.

Judge Lawrence, of Ohio, who seems to do the talking for the wool growers of this country, still persists that the wool growing industry will be ruined without a tariff which will practically keep foreign wools out of this market. He points, doubtless with some satisfaction, to the fact that the wool clip of this year is about 31,000,000 pounds less than that of last year, and that the number of sheep is about 3,500,000 less. This he and other protection. ists attribute to the putting of wool on the free list, which is partially Tarilling Adventure of a Long Island Fruck Farmer Who Has His Share of the Qualities Generally Credited to Residents of His Part of the World.

"A whaling story? Well, there's a man here named Phillips, a truck farmer, and of course a whaler. About eight years ago he belonged to one of our boat crews. A big whale was sighted about three miles out, and the usual excitement occurred. Every man of a crew knows his place, and when the alarm is given he drops everything and makes for the beach. "So, at the first cry of 'Whale!' the barber left his half shaved man in the chair, the man driving out of town drove back again, the storekeeper deserted his customers, and everybody ran. "This truck farmer happened to be trimming some trees, and had no coat on, though it was a pretty cold day. He ran down the road in his shirt sleeves, knife in hand, just as he was. If a member of a crew isn't there, you see, a vol unteer will get his place, and if the whale is killed, also his share of the proceeds. Phillips got there. true, but the advice of Judge Lawrence & Co. had more to do with the decrease in the number of sheep and consequently with the reduction in the wool-clip than free wool had. When the Wilson bill passed putting wool on the free list these self constituted Mentors of the shepherds of this country at once proceeded to advise them to slaughter their flocks and not to stand upon the order of the slaughtering, but slaughter before the cool weather set in, and save the sheep.

Some, doubtless, took this advice, for about that time the Republican papers were full of announcements of the killing of vast numbers of sheep, and of the wholesale auction of others. These announcements were, no doubt, greatly exaggerated, but it was not at all unlikely that the sheep thus slaughtered were enough to very materially reduce the wool clip.

But however this may be the sheep slaughtering business is at an end, for the sheep raisers have gotten over their scare and can judge of the situation for themselves. Those of them who could grow wool at a profit before wool was placed upon the free list realize that they can still raise it at a profit notwithstanding that it is on the free list, as the bulk of the wool imported is of a kind that does seriously interfere with the wool that is grown in this country. They realize, also, that nothing but an absolutely prohibitive stariff would protect American wools from competition with the wools of other countries, and make wool growing profitable in sections of the country not naturally adapted to it. The wool growers of Ohio and Michigan and such other States East of the Mississippi have been able to grow wool at some profit because they grow a fine quality, but little of which was imported on account of the high duty, but this enabled the foreign manufacturers to ship manufactured goods of fine quality to this country and undersell our manufacturers, who had not the advantage of the cheaper wool that they had. The wool must be high priced and ance being sent to the Cubans, the fleeces heavy that would pay on, they would long ago have had fifty dollar an acre pasturage, armies in the field against which where the sheep must be housed and hand fed for at least half the cope. Give them a fair fighting year.

As a proof that wool-growing on Spain alone, and Spain might as such lands even under the protective well throw up her hand and accept tariff was on the wane many of the the inevitable. #### Women and Fishing.

Shocking it is to be compelled to state that many fishing superstitions are ungallantly directed against the ladies. Over against Ross there is the island of Lewis, 60 miles in length. In this isle there is but one fresh river. "Fish abound there in very great plenty," but only let a woman wade in the stream, and not a salmon will be seen there for at least 12 months. There is a song about "Eliza's Tootsies," but that immortal lyric does not explain why they should frighten the fish. I believe the ladies deny the allegation in toto. In the south of Ireland an angler proceeding to fish declares that he will have no luck if he is asked where he is going to, if he sees magpie or ''if he is so unfortunate as to meet a woman."-London Fishng Gazette.

He regarded himself as very English, and he certainly was very young. He fancied that he cut an mposing figure as he sauntered past the theater just as the matinee girls emerged on the street. But a large, ocean, taking Phillips along with it. You never heard of a Long Islander letting go of anything voluntarily that had money in it, so Phillips held on. The whale soon came to the surface, or else the man would have been drowned, and as soon as he came up he made for the open sea, dragging Phillips alongside. "The whale never stopped until he got ten miles out, where he rolled over on his side, as dead as a salted mackerel. Now, Phillips was sticking on the starboard side, you see, and when the whale rolled over the other way it brought the truck farmer on the upper side, and on a moderately firm footing. To be sure of not slipping off, he took off his suspenders and tied himself to his knife, still fast behind the starboard fin, and then went to sleep. "Well, sir, a ship came along and found the man there asleep on top of the whale. The skipper hailed Phillips and woke him up. "'What're ye doing there?' he says. "'Sleeping,' says Phillips. 'D'ye want to buy a whale? "The skipper was a Yankee and saw that there was money in this job; so he offered to rescue the truck farmer and take him back to Southampton for nothing for whatever interest he had in the

The skipper reasoned that a man who could go out and kill a whale alone with a pruning knife, and had pluck enough to stick to his find until he sold it, would be a good man to take on the voyage. And he was right, for the vessel had the biggest kind of luck, and came home full of oil.
