Old Shed and a Lot of Shingles

Fire broke out about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon on the roof of an old shed on the west side of the river opposite Mulberry street. There were some fifteen or twenty thousand shingles in the building and these with the shed were soon consumed. The building was property of the New Hanover Bank. It was old and practically worthless, over half of it having blown down some time ago. The shingles belonged to Capt R. W. Gibson, who estimates his loss at about $200, with no insurance. The fire is said to have been caused by sparks from the furnace of a pile driver at work near the

There was a strong breeze from the north that sent sparks and cinders whirling through the air, and some of these falling on the roofs of two small dilapidated houses on the causeway caused their destruction.

The Fire Department, in response to the alarm, was early at the river side. Chief Newman procured a lighter, on which the fire steamer "Atlantic" was carried across by the tug Navassa, and was soon at work preventing the spread of the flames. The tug Marion also did good service in this direction.

The pile-driver, which caused the conflagration, was ignited by-sparks, but was towed away by the tug Anna and the fire put out. The coal yard of the Champion Compress Co., was in danger but successfully guarded by a stream from the tug Marion.

THE HORSE AND HIS RIDERS

The announcement of the coming of Col, Wm. F. Cody and his great Wild West and Congress of Rough Riders of the World, is something deserving the attention of our public more particularly than the ordinary perennial visiting exhibition. There are innumerable affairs and subjects that come and go, and repeat the same year in and year out; but past experience proves that the field of this colossal exhibition is so large that the assertion of the management that its visits are few and far between, can be adjudged as true. For eight years it has not revisited any one of the larger cities, excepting London, and only owing to the demand for it in all countries and in all climes, as its dioramic nature renders it pleasing and instructive to all tongues and all countries.

We would impress upon our readers that the opportunity should not be let passed by, as there is no telling when the Wild West will return, il eyer, as its component parts are of such a nature, and dependent so much upon the circumstances, and the unofficial assistance of nine great governments, that the slightest upheaval in the status of 'peace on earth, good will to men, could interfere in the collection again of such a notable assemblage. After conquering two continents with the American contingent of native horsemanship the Indian scout and cowboy, the management have added renewed life to the subject of primitive man and natural equestrianism by bringing together all the nomadic horemen of the world, and adding to them military civilization on orseback.

People will see here Union detachments of Uncle Sam's cavalry, which is as rare a sight as it will be a patriotic one, to see these Defenders of the Flag dash on the scene to the inspiring tune of "Yankee Doodel," and holding the bright banner of the free "Old Glory," to the front, in amicable alliance with the flags of all other nations. French, German and English Cavalrymen will also present a novelty which will be of interest to the readers of books, the viewers of paintings and illustrations, and the peruser of history in the military line that every day threatens to be a factor in the history of our time. The Arab, Cossack, Tartar, Indian Cowboy, the Vaqueros and Gauchos are rare subjects known in song and story, but never before brought together on one spot. The whole will form a sight that may never be seen again, and most assuredly has never been seen before. The large organization is backed by the experience, wealth and fame of Mr. Nate Salsbury, Mr. James A. Bailey, of Wm. F. Cody, which alone is a trademark that justifies the estimation in which the subject is held by all. On this occasion the details will be attended to by an auxiliary corps so large as to insure every detail of personal comfort and convenience to the auditor to view the entertainment in the same manner as London, New York, Paris and the Chicago World's Fair, and on the same magnificent magni-tude of style. No more can be said to enhance the interest that the subject should naturally arouse.

LESS COTTON MORE MONEY.

The Wisdom of Reduced Cotton Acreage -The Advice of the Newspapers Was

Wise-About Next Year, The wisdom of reduced cotton acreage and increased provision crops, says the Augusta Chronicle, is fully vindicated by the experience of the Southern farmers this year. A big corn crop and an increased meat crop provide full barns and smoke houses, while the short cotton crop makes the cotton that has been raised bring prices that are profitable to the farmer. He has raised at home nearly everything he needs in the way of provisions, and he has the proceeds of cotton to buy clothes, furniture, and the Taking 5 cents a pound as the average cost of production, the New York Journal of Commerce estimates that the Southern farmers realized about $2 bale profit on last year's crop, and adds: "Whatever variations future developements may make in the items used in this computation, it is nearly certain that the crop of the current year will bring in no less money than the huge crop of last year, and will probably bring in more; that it will cost more than $40,-000,000 less than the last crop, and that instead of barely covering the cost of production there will be a comfortable profit for the planters. The lesson to the South is to raise no more cotton than there is a good market for, and, incidentally, to raise its own corn and pork instead of buying them out of the proceeds of the cotton sales, a system which tempts each planter to raise more cotton in order to meet his bill at the fac-

Again the advice of the newspapers has been proven wise, and though the farmers have for many years ridiculed "those fellows who farm in the newspapers," they are forced to admit that had they taken ten years ago the advice of the newspapers and raised at home all the provision crops that were needed instead of buying from the West, the Southern farmer would have been more independent to-day. Circumstances of dire necessity forced our farmers to do what the newspapers have long been urging them to do, and the result proves the wisdom of the editorial ad-

let the newspapers begin at once to advise the Southern farmer against being carried away by the improved price of cotton, and induced to spoil it all by returning next year to the all cotton crop. A ten million bale crop this year would have continued five cent cotton, and a ten million crop next year will return to it. Let discretion control the action of cotton planters. It is to a short crop they are due for better prices this year; let them not kill the goose that laid the golden egg by making more cotton next year than
