By WILLIAM H. BERNARD.

WILMINGTON, N. C. SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 8, 1896

WHEN WILL IT BE?

Both branches of the Congress of the United States have solemnly declared that the Cubans who are struggling for self government are entitled to the rights of belligerents.

MINOR MENTION.

In reference to the contest for United States Senator in Kentucky, the Louisville Courier-Journal discourses as follows: "If we are to have free silver it must come through Congress."

CURRENT COMMENT.

There is absolutely nothing in the resolutions of the House or Senate which Spain can justly complain of as a hostile act. Our recognition of Cuban belligerency is no more an act of war than Spain's recognition of Confederate belligerency.

WHEN WILL IT BE?

The President, who no doubt fully realizes the importance of wisely exercising the discretion in him vested and the importance also of going very slowly lest complications might arise which might prove very embarrassing to us, is moving so slowly that he is making no progress at all, leaving the situation in statu quo, just as it was before those concurrent resolutions were adopted.

WHEN WILL IT BE?

The reasons given by President Grant why belligerency could not be recognized then are given in support of inaction now, and President Cleveland is doubtless as honest in his motions now as General Grant was then.

WHEN WILL IT BE?

This is not a mere "revolt," or insurrection of a "few brigands," as General Weyler calls them. An insurrection which began twelve months ago at one extreme end of the island, with less than three hundred armed adherents, and within that time has spread over the whole island even to the gates of Havana; which now has and keeps in the field 40,000 armed men, who bid defiance to the more than 100,000 that Spain has sent against them, is entitled to be considered something more than an insurrection.

WHEN WILL IT BE?

If the conditions prescribed by Gen. Grant, and accepted as a guide by President Cleveland, are to be strictly adhered to then there will never be recognition of Cuban belligerency by this Government nor recognition of belligerency in any small country contending against a great or a larger one.

OWA TO CARRY MUNITIONS OF WAR AND PROTECT ITS CITY ON THE COAST.

But Cuba is a small territory, its people are without ships, its munitions of war must run the blockade of a cordon of Spanish cruisers that patrol its coasts, it can borrow no money as the sovereign country can, because it has nothing to pledge in payment of borrowed sums, and therefore it is next to impossible for it to comply with the conditions precedent to such recognition as it asks, although it has established the fact that poorly equipped as it is and without international recognition it has driven the Spanish armies into one corner of the island, and would drive them off of it if equipped with artillery to attack a strongly fortified city. The Cubans have the nerve, the determination, and the patriotism to be free; if they lack the recognition by other powers that they are patriots and not mere brigands, and that they are entitled, if made prisoners of war, to be treated as soldiers and not to be shot down as outlaws and bandits.

BOOK NOTICES.

Every Month is the title of a new illustrated magazine of popular music and literature, published by Hawley, Harland & Co., No. 4 East Twentieth street, New York, at 10 cents a copy or $1.00 a year. In addition to the music, dramatic and other features, it contains a fashion department which will be found useful in the household.

SUNDAY SELECTIONS.

To be moral we reject sin; to be religious we accept Christ. The largest church for any pastor is the church that gives him the largest opportunity for doing good. Life is a short day, but it is a working day. Activity may lead to evil, but inactivity can not lead to good.

WHEN WILL IT BE?

The Review of Reviews presents an exceedingly interesting list of contents for March. In addition to "The Progress of the World," which is an encyclopedia of noteworthy current events, there are other entertaining features, among them a fine sketch of Cecil Rhodes and his achievements in South Africa, and an interesting paper on "The New Photography," as explained by the discoverer, Prof. Roentgen. Address Review of Reviews Co., No. 18 Astor Place, New York.

WHEN WILL IT BE?

There is absolutely nothing in the resolutions of the House or Senate which Spain can justly complain of as a hostile act. Our recognition of Cuban belligerency is no more an act of war than Spain's recognition of Confederate belligerency, and certainly Spain cannot complain that Congress declares it to be our duty to maintain a strict neutrality.

WHEN WILL IT BE?

—To take that splendid country (Cuba), redeem it from the vices despotism and cruelty have bred, lift it out of the slough of ignorance and superstition, make it at once a garden in respect of material culture and a garden of the graces and virtues of a high civilization, were a magnificent mission for this great Republic; and whether we will or no the situation will be such within the five or six years to come that we must annex Cuba in self-defence.

WHEN WILL IT BE?

—If this country should become involved in active hostilities with England over Venezuela and with Spain for Cuba, what would become of the A. P. A.? Obviously, such an organization could not exist in a period of war, when citizens, without regard to party, would be required to perform military service and when all who should perform such service would be entitled to equal civic and political rewards. In view of possible contingencies, would it not be well for the A. P. A. to disband now, when there is no war, and an organization can have no reason for existence in a time of peace when it would necessarily dissolve in the midst of war? —Phil. Record, Dem.

WHEN WILL IT BE?

—The question as to whether the Cuban insurgents are entitled to recognition as belligerents is not a question of opinion but of fact, and this fact will be well for Congress to allow President Cleveland all necessary latitude and freedom of action. Precedent and the best judgment of students of international law is that the executive and diplomatic branch of the Government is the proper channel through which this kind of recognition of Americans are undoubtedly in sympathy with the Congressional attitude on this matter, but it would be absurd to claim that an international complication can be guarded against by popular sympathy alone. —Chicago Record Ind.

WHEN WILL IT BE?

—Professor—What terrible affliction did Homer have? —Echance. —"Day nebhab had no right to hab dat roostab on de fishal ballot, no how." —"Why didn't they?" —"It was a bad thing to catch de culud vote." —Agent—Sir, do you need any typewriter supplies? —Merchant—Yes, send me about four pounds of candy. —London Truth. —Boarder (suspiciously)—There is no foreign substance in this coffee, is there? —Landlady—Em—er—well, I'm afraid there is, sir. The spoon I use to stir from India, I believe. —Eureka Times. —Yeast—"I believe in battle the musicians always go to the rear?" —Crimsoner—"Yes, and that is the reason so many would-be soldiers think they would be willing to face the music." —Yonkers Statesman. —Gentlemen and fellow-citizens," exclaimed the silver-tongued stump speaker as he mounted an unadorned box, "I would like to say that tonight I stand upon the platform of my own family call."

I MISS YOU.

EMMIE DEVORELL ARKOLD. I miss you, oh I miss you, That's long and lonely day; The same as when we parted, Each to go our separate way; Oh how long the days in passing, With their bitterness and pain; While I sit and hope and wonder, If you'll ever come again.

I MISS YOU.

I could walk my lonely pathway, Without a single guiding light; If I knew your heart was sheltered, From the bitterness of night, I would bear all bitter sorrows, And my heart would make no moan; If the bitter pain of parting, Darkened just my life alone.

I MISS YOU.

I would take the clouds of darkness, And the fiercest storms of pain; I would bear all bitter sorrows, In my heart, and not complain; If the Sun, in all his brightness, Threw its light along your way; If the lotus leaves of memory, Bloomed throughout your path each day.

I MISS YOU.

I would make each day a pleasure, Full of love's own gentle light; If I knew your heart was sheltered, From the bitterness of night, Your heart would know no night, Oh, I'd take the deepest sorrow, If the pleasures could be thine; And I'd give you all the darkness, If the Sun for the world shine.

I MISS YOU.

But I miss you, so am I lonely, Yet I wait, and hope and pray; That these tears and bitter sighings, With all grief shall pass away; And you, dear, shall soon be coming, Bringing years of joy and pleasure, Drowning all these months of pain. —Aurora Ga. Chronicle.

CHASE AFTER RELIC.

HOW WASHINGTON'S COACH WAS SECURED FOR MOUNT VERNON.

CHASE AFTER RELIC.

For Two Years in a Philadelphia Antiquarian's Window—Carried Across the Country in a Side Box—Smuggled Out of the City in a Box Car.

CHASE AFTER RELIC.

"I have told you the story of how we recovered Washington's coach," asked the superintendent as he leaned back in his chair.

CHASE AFTER RELIC.

"No," replied the woman from the west. She was curled up in one corner of the great mahogany chair trying to read a story about the great brick built with the words "Regus, thiel and lan" burned into it, the shell and then she got up near the west lodge gate of Mount Vernon.

CHASE AFTER RELIC.

"You ought to have Washington's coach in the carriage house," he went on. "Yes, we'd like to have it," I said. "I know where it is," he said. "I almost had heart failure at the news," I exclaimed, questioning him. "He told me that he had often seen an old carriage in the window of an old antiquarian's shop on Chestnut street, that was placed 'Washington's coach.' He was sure he had seen it very recently."

CHASE AFTER RELIC.

"I wrote to Forsough. There was no answer," I said. "I wrote to the executor of his estate, and after a long delay I was informed that he had sold the coach to an old relic dealer in the city of Philadelphia, and was now appearing in side shows somewhere in the west. I wrote to this place and he told me that he had seen it in the window of an old relic dealer in the city of Philadelphia, and was now appearing in side shows somewhere in the west. CHASE AFTER RELIC.

"I went out and went to the freight yard in the morning, and I ordered a box car. The agent in charge did not think I could get one on a sliding and attached to a freight train until the morning of the 31st. I had to wait until the afternoon of the 31st. I insisted, but I could not get it until the morning of the 1st. Finally he promised to let me have it, and I went back to the coach. I borrowed a carriage cover from a livery stable and covered the coach with it. Then I went into another quarter of the town and engaged four stout negro men.

CHASE AFTER RELIC.

"Then we took the coach down, and followed by a hoisting crew of six boys, through the streets, got it aboard the box car. DUKE CIGARETTES.

Blocks of Milk. Siberia where people have more occasion for fire and furs than for artificial ice cream or thin clothing.

DUKE CIGARETTES.

The markets of Irkutsk are an interesting sight in the winter time, for everything on sale is frozen solid. Fish are piled up in stacks like so much cardboard, and meat likewise. All kinds of fowls are similarly frozen and piled up.

DUKE CIGARETTES.

But, stranger still, even the liquids are frozen solid and sold in blocks. Milk is frozen into a block in this way, and is sent in a stick frozen into or projecting from it. This is for the convenience of the purchaser who can take his milk by the string or stick, and carry it home, swung across the shoulder.

DUKE CIGARETTES.

"I thought you would realize that in time," she returned rather sharply. "I have just been reading," he went on, "how girls used to be sold by their parents and sold some of them brought fancy prices."

DUKE CIGARETTES.

"But there's none of that now, thank heaven," she exclaimed. "The new woman prouder herself about her own worth, and 'Woman has asserted herself, and 'No, there's none of that now," interrupted the old man. "That's all past. A man does not buy a wife in these days."
