"You tell us the great cities are in favor of the gold standard. Burn down your great cities and leave your tarms, and your cities will grow up again. But destroy our farms and the grass will grow in every city of the Union."-From Wm. J. Bryan's speech before Democratic National Convention.

"I am for McKinley, Russel and Gold," says Oscar J. Spears, one of the Republican candidates for Elector-at-Large.

"I desire to meet Mr. Russell on the hustings of North Carolina. I want the people to hear us and decide between me and what I represent, and what I think he represents. With their decision I shall be content. If elected Governor of your State, I shall see that every man, no matter what his station in life or what his politics, is given every priv- ment. ilege granted him by the Constitution

But the Ledger thinks that as desirable as "a universal bimetallic standard" might be it is not practicable nor possible without international agreement. It assumes that the United States could not alone maintain bimetallism, which is a mere assumption and can't be established until the effort is made. But isn't the professed desire for "the bimetallic standard" by many of the spokesmen for gold a sham ? Hasn't

Secretary Carlisle, the most distinguished defender of the gold standard, confessed his inability to comprehend what is meant by a double standard ? Hasn't it become the rule now among the gold organs to talk of silver as an antiquated coin metal which, as the New York Sun says, has served its day? Hasn't the Philadelphia Record pronounced international bimetallism one of the colossal delusions with which the advocates of international agreement deceive themselves While there has been agitation of the subject in Europe, Hon. Perry Belmont who came back from Europe to use his influence to commit the Chicago Convention to the gold standaad, came to the conclusion from what he learned in his intercourse with European bankers that international bimetallism was not even a remote possibility and that the banks were preparing themselves for the permanent perpetuation of the gold standard. International bimetallism is favored in the St. Louis platform with a supplemental pledge to try to bring it about, but everybody who knows the men who made that platform and knows the history of the Republican party on financial matters knows that this was put in simply to placate and deceive the friends of silver and secure their votes for the nominees of that convention. It was playing the same old fraud of 1892 with the fake pledge supple-man that bolts the Chicago ticket" and efforts are being made to reach an makes hundreds of votes for it, beinternational agreement on the subject. cause it confirms the belief that this is a fight of the rich man against the people, and when the rich denounce the ticket and declare they will not vote it they are doing splendid campaign service for it. Mr. Ketcham is not alone in that opinion.

>  Some time ago, Mr. Hanna, Mr. McMinley's Mentor and campaign manager, declared, after the St. Louis platform was adopted and the Eastern gold men forced the gold plank into it, that the tariff would be still the issue and the money question an issue only "in spots." If we may judge from the Cleveland, O., dispatch published yesterday, in reference to the meeting of the National Republican Committee, Mr. Hanna has come to the conclusion that the spots are spreading, lapping over, as it were, and that the money question is really an issue and a pretty large sized one. He and his committee have therefore decided to bestir themselves to stem the silver tide, which they hope to beat back in the next sixty days, and then catch their breath and whoop it up some for the tariff and other questions. They have been dodging this question until they couldn't dodge any longer, and have been compelled very much against their wishes to accept the challenge the silver men have sent them and speak out when they hoped to play mum.

CURRENT COMMENT.

- Mr. McKinley has managed to made another speech without mentioning "gold." He is frittering away an excellent opportunity .-Washington Post, Ind.

"Honor is dearer than party" is the latest McKinley platitude. Yet the record shows that the Republican nominee voted for every piece of wicked partisan legislation introduced during his Congressional career. He was conspicuous in his advocacy of the Force bill, a measure utterly devoid of honor, and aimed at one section of the country.

SOME POINTED QUESTIONS.

The Philadelphia Ledger is a po litically independent paper, but is now supporting Mr. McKinley, mainly because he stands upon a "sound money" platform. It is opposed to the free coinage of silver, which it professes to favor, as a good many other gold organs do, upon conditions which are practically impossible, or at least so far remote as to be equivalent to impossible. A correspondent has recently asked it six questions which are so pointed, and which it so trankly answers that we herewith reproduce them, giving as much of the answers as bears directly upon the questions asked. The questions and answers are as follows:

First. "Is not the present value of gold due largely to its being a money metal and its position as a money metal due to legislation?'

No doubt the value of gold has been increased and steadied by its general use as a money metal. Its present posittion as a money metal is due to legislation, but gold was used as a medium of exchange because of its convenience, before there was any law on the subject. The laws were not passed to increase the value of gold or to benefit the owners of gold mines, but because the people wanted to use gold as a money metal.

This is true of gold and it was equally true of silver up to the time of its demonstization by European Governments and this Government.

Second. "Is not the present low market price of silver the result of adverse legislation upon the part of the United States and other leading nations?"

Legislation has no doubt had some share in reducing the demand for silver and therefore, in reducing its market price, but the legislation of this country during recent years has been in favor o the white metal, and has utterly failed to sustain the market price. Silver has fallen in value under the operation of the law of supply and demand. The supply has been increased while the demand was diminishing and the potential supply is now much greater thin it ever was.

There is a little candor in the concession that "legislation has had some share in reducing the demand | England to move and England hasn't for silver, and thereby reducing its the slightest idea of moving. If we price," for admitting the demand and supply argument, demonetization destroyed the market for the greater part of the silver produced and the price fell as a matter of course. The legislation referred to in recent years as "in favor of the white metal," did i't keep up the price because it provided only for the purchase and coinage of a limited amount of silver, which under that legislation was still regarded as a commercial, metal, without any fixed value. It is to meet this objection and give silver a stable price.

The local historians of Baton Ronge La., believe that the mortal remains o Fernando De Soto lie buried between two gigantic live oaks near the present site of Port Hudson. The books tell different tales about the death and burial of the great discoverer. Some say that he was wrapped in his mantle and thrown into the Mississippi : others that the remains were incased in a hollow log. In 1853 three hunters-Rigsby, Davis and Hurin-were encamped near what is now Port Hudson. While kindling a fire they found a human skeleton in a hollow logs that had been lying in a drift. The bones were those of a man six feet tall. In the log a helmet, a rusty sword and a large bronze crucifix were also found, and on one of the fingers of the skeleton's hand a large seal ring. The discoverers of this ghastly memento believe that the remains were those of De Soto, the discoverer of the Mississippi river. The, burial place of the bones is well known to the Rigsbys, who still reside in Louisiana.-St. Louis Republic.

Cold and Clothes.

People who are susceptible to the cold should make a point of wearing loose clothing in cold weather. Loose garments are always warmer than tight fitting ones, not only because they allow room for circulation, but also because they permit a layer of air between the skin and the outside cold.-New York

An Application.

A man one morning at family prayers prayed for a good neighbor in great destitution. After the prayer his boy said to him, "Papa, givn me your pock-stbook, and I will go over to Mr. Smith's and answer your prayer myelf."-Louisville Western Recorder.
