CONGRESSIONAL TICKET

"You tell us the great cities are in favor of the gold standard. Burn down your great cities and leave your tarms, and your cities will grow up again. But destroy our farms and the grass will grow in every city of the Union."-From Wm. I. Bryan's speech before Democratic National Convention.

"I am for McKinley, Russell and Gold," says Oscar J. Spears, one of the Republican candidates for Elector-at-Large.

COCKRAN ON SLAVEHOLDERS. Will you submit to this conspiracy between the professional farmers, the farmers who cultivate the quarrels of their neighbhrs, farmers who labor with their jaws, Populist agitators of the West, and the unreconciled slave-holders of the South? This is a conspiracy between professional farmers, who want to pay low wages, and the unreconciled slave-holders, who would like to pay no wages at all. - (Extract from the speech of Bourke Cockran, delivered in New York August 18th.)

WHERE IS THE REMEDY?

When a person is sick and has tried one doctor and one mode of treatment for a long time and instead of getting better grows worse, the probabilities are that, if a person in possession of his senses, he would call in another doctor and seek other treatment. This he would very likely five counties, which would be a fracand very naturally consider his only, hope of recovery. Nations as well as individuals sometimes become sick, suffer from ailments which require treatment and for which they must have treatment, or suffer the consequences either of neglect or of bad treatment. For twenty odd years this country has been sick with a complication of ailments-a corroding tariff, a life-sapping financial system, and several less aggravating ailments, making a fearful complication, but the worst of these was the money trouble which wasted its strength and lessened the power to resist the other ailments.

We have had for twenty-odd years the same school of financial doctors, who have run on the gold cure, and have insisted on that treatment, although the patient has been constantly going from bad to worse, and yet they haven't the sense to see, or the candor to acknowledge, or the honesty to try any other treatment suggested. They began with their gold cure and are determined to stick to it if it kill, which it surely will do if they be permitted to stick to it.

Money is to the business, enterprise and commerce of a nation, what blood is to the human body. Unduly contract the volume of money, and it is like tapping the veins and permitting the life blood to escape. If the veins be left open long prostration from weakness follows; If too long death ensues. This country has experienced the prostration, and if the draining be not stopped the commercial and business death must come, as surely as Republican State ticket the indirect, in the case of the bleeding man would come to him.

Up to 1873 this country had the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver and the capacity to supply itself with all the money it needed, but before that, in 1868, the financial doctors who are stuck on gold nostrums came to the conclusion that it had too much money, too much blood, and they began the practice of contracting, of bleeding, and the trouble with the poor victim, who was then in pretty good health, began. They contracted the currency, bled the victim, followed that up by declaring millions of Government paper which was payable in "lawful money," payable in coin, which was practically a further contraction of millions, more bleeding, and followed that up with the demonetization of silver, which was a further contrac. I Hoke Smith.

tion, more bleeding, and a destruction of our silver money, which was then as it is now the money of the people. This was virtually establishing the gold standard, doubling the purchasing power of gold, depreciating the price of everything else in proportion. Then the country which began to get sick when the contracting of the currency began got very sick and kept getting sicker until some temporary relief was afforded by the passage of the Bland-Allison'silver coinage bill, which restored the money quality to silver.

Under that there was an increase of the currency, and the gold quacks who were never satisfied that their methods had been departed from, got a chance again, repealed the Bland-Allison act, adopted a makeshift substitute, and as soon as they saw that they could do it, destroyed that and left the victim so shocked that a collapse followed which was felt throughout the system, from which it is suffering yet. But the quacks persist in the same old gold dosing and become white with rage when it is suggested that they return to the other treatment, whose beneficent effects were made manifest even when only partially applied in 1878, after they had been wasting the strength of the paltent by five years of bleeding. All the silver advocates ask is that they stop the bleeding and the starving, and adopt the financial treatment which had prevailed for eighty odd years, with good results. Under the free coinage of gold and silver this country was always vigorous and able to meet any emergency, and its financial ills never began until the double standard was attacked and it was put upon the single gold standard, which enabled speculators to control the gold and hold the business of the country, its property and its Treasury at their bidding and mercy. The silver men say restore the double standard, rehabilitate silver, and then the country will have the capacity to provide all the money it needs, and the power of the moneycornerer and gold speculator will be broken, the business man will take heart again, industry will take on new life and there will be no more mortgaging the men of this generation nor posterity for the enrichment of syndicates who speculate on the necessities of nations and grow fat on the distress of mankind.

THAT GREENSBORO CONVEN-

The much advertised and much talked of "sound money," so-called, Democratic Convention, which has been so actively engineered by that distinguished patriot, Mr. la Croix, met at Greensboro, Wednesday, and did the work assigned to it. In point of numbers or the prominence of those who took part in it, it was not a dazzling success, but on the contrary was a dismal failure, the "delegates," most of them self-constituted, numbering twenty-four, ten of whom were from Greensboro. This would leave fourteen "delegates" to be divided between the other ninetytion over a seventh of a delegate for each county if they could be partitioned pro rata.

The meeting, however, while dwarfish in proportions, is worthy of note and in some respects significant, for there was a cat in the meal tub which manifested its presence in the course of the proceedings. The resolutions favoring a national ticket, and instructing the committee to put up Presidential electors went through without a jar, but when it came to the resolution pledging support to the State Democratic ticket that was adopted only after "a hot debate." The significant point in this is that the men composing that convention call themselves Democrats, went there as Democrats, and yet it was only after "a hot debate" they accepted the Democratic State ticket. The fact there was a debate on that subject shows that there were some men there, calling themselves Democrats, who were opposed to supporting the Democratic State ticket, and used their influence and persuasive powers to prevent a declaration in favor of it, the intention, of course, being to aid the Republican State ticket, by the refusal to endorse the Democratic State ticket, the only course they could pursue without openly proposing the endorsement of the Republican State ticket, which they had not the courage to do. They did the only thing they, calling themselves Democrats, dared to do, that is they endeavored to give the covert aid they feared to boldly and publicly pledge it. Their programme didn't work, but it worked sufficiently to show the aims and animus of the engineers of this Greensboro Convention, who are than McKinley. That's what's the rying to humbug Democrats by posing as "sound money" Democrats. We are morally satisfied of the fact that some of them are in sympathy with the Republican party, State and national, that they are going about in Democratic disguise, and that they are compensated for their time and labor from Hanna's campaign fund. Ex-Gov. Francis, of Missouri, is one of the gold men who was snowed under in his State. He is receiving his compensation now in the appointment as successor of Secretary

MINOR MENTION.

Whea Mr. McKinley wrote his voluminous letter of acceptance, it was not his intention to, but he did it all the same, furnish Mr. Bryan and other Democratic speakers one of the best campaign documents that has been issued since the Convention which nominated Mr. McKinley met. It bristles with points which expose the hypocrisy, subterfuge, disregard of truth, falsification of current history and the rotten pretences of the platform on which Mr. McKinley stands, as the representative of Hannaism. It is delivered, of course, with all the unction of disinterested patriotism and love of the toiling millions in which the gentieman from Canton is somewhat of an adept, and we do him the justice to say that he has performed this part of his perfunctory labor very well. That was expected of him and the public generally would have been disappointed if he hadn't performed his part in that role. He is banking on that, and did the best he could in practicing the jugglery which has been played so much by him and men like him for the past thirty years. Millions who have been humbugged by it in the past see through it now and they can't be humbugged as they were when the tricks were new. While it is doubtless the best that Mr. McKinley, even with the aid of Hanna, could have done under the circumstances, it is an exceedingly vulnerable document and will be nuts for Democratic speakers. When Wm. J. Bryan moved Eastward to be officially notified of his nomination, his journey through the States in which he travelled was marked by enthusiastic greetings by immense throngs of citizens at every stopping place. This was especially noteworthy in the States East of the Mississippi river, and was a surprise to the opponents of Mr. Bryan who believed or professed to believe that the silver sentiment had made little if any progress in the States East of the Mississippi. They accounted for the large gatherings and the enthusiasm, and tried to break their significance as popular demonstrations by attributing them in a great measure to mere curiosity to see and hear a man who had risen so suddenly to such distinguished prominence and was heralded as such a magnetic orator. But Mr. Bryan is on his way Westward now. and during his stay in the State of New York, and at every point he touches on his way Westward he is greeted by throngs equally as large as those which greeted him on his Eastward journey, quite as enthusiastic, and quite as anxious to hear him speak as they were then. Will the gold organs say that curiosity to see the man figures in this? or should they not candidly and honestly admit that these gatherings, these popular demonstrations of the masses are proof that the cause which Mr. Bryan so ably represents has taken a deep hold on the millions of toilers, not only in the so called silver States of the West, but in the so called gold States of the East?

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger quotes Senator Butler as saying that Tom Watson will not be notified of his nomination. But judging from Tom's remarks already and frequently made he seems to have found it out. But the query arises, if Tom be not officially notified can he be "officially" in the race. This may seem like a fishy inquiry, but it

The Ottoman Empire. In the beginning of the thirteenth cen tury the annual revenue of the Byzantine empire amounted to £130,000,000. Yet at that time not only was the eastern empire greatly impoverished by the ravages of the crusades, but the chief part of Asia Minor, with its flourishing cities, had been wrested from her by the arms of Islam. Today the revenue of the Ottoman empire is less than £18,000,-000. The silence of desolation now broods over vast regions which were once thickly peopled, well cultivated, abounding in flourishing cities and rejoicing in an advanced civilization. Territories which formerly supported the capitals of ancient kingdoms-Pergamos, Sardis, Cyzicus, Prusium, Troy, Nicomedia and many more-have been reduced under Islam to cheerless solitudes, broken at intervals by Kurds or wandering Turko

According to Ubicini, who spent 20 years in the civil administration of the porte and wrote in defense of Turkey 40 years ago, the annual produce of corn in Asia Minor was then estimated at 25, 000,000 Turkish kiles, which, he thinks might easily be increased tenfold "if the great productiveness of the soil were turned to account." "The same re mark," he adds, "applies to all other productions which serve for local con sumption or for exportation." But instead of increasing during the last 40 years there has been an accelerated decrease. The decay of every kind of manufacture has kept pace with the decline of agriculture. Diarbekir and Broussa once so famous for their velvets, sating and silk stuffs, have been ruined. So have Aleppo and Bagdad. Turkey abounds also in mineral wealth. It pos sesses copper mines which yield 80 per cent of ore, while the best British mines yield only about 10 per cent. And there is coal in abundance within easy access Quarterly Review.

In Iceland to cook food in the geyser is a regular portion of the tourist pro gramme. Tea is infused with water from the Great geyser, and trout are boiled in the Blesi, or hot water pond, which suddenly ceased to erupt after the Skaptar-Jokull convulsion of 1784. They require to be immersed for about 20 minutes to be cooked to a turn.

In the Yellowstone a story is told of a fisherman, who, having caught a fine trout, merely turned on his heel, and without taking his captive off the line. plunged it into a pool of hot water, from which in a short time he drew it ready for his meal, reminding us of Lord Lovat, the Jacobite rebel, who, when luncheon time approached, betook himself to a fall on his estate famous would tumble into the pot. - Exchange.

Nothing Above the Table.

A popular and well known lady of central Mississippi visited New Orleans at the last Mardi Gras for the first time. She was delighted with the city. but was considerably shocked at the "decolleteness" of some of the costume at the balls. One day while here she was entertained at a fashionable dinner, and upon her return to the house of the friend whom she was visiting she was asked to describe some of the costumes worn. "What did Mrs. C. wear?" said her

"I didn't look under the table, but she didn't have on anything above it." -New Orleans Times-Democrat.
